WAR BY SPRING! ARMY AND NAVY OFFICERS AGREE

Say We May Attack Thru Portugal.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28.—The majority of army and navy officers and defense experts in the national capital are convinced that the United States will be at war next spring and will send American soldiers abroad to fight on foreign soil.

Over the last three weeks THE TRIBUNE has quietly polled a large number of officers in the regular services, retired officers, and other defense experts. While most of these lips are sealed from public utterance by the traditions of the service, officers freely expressed their beliefs privately.

Almost without dissent, those polled declared that they feel America will be at war. They disagreed only on the time and place that America will make an attack.

Cite Vast "Defenses."

Almost invariably the vast defensive operations the nation is undertaking were cited as evidence that the administration is bent on bringing America into the war. Under the program to date, plans call for an M-day mobilization strength of 2,200,000 men in active services and reserves.

Until a few months ago the general staff had maintained for years that a field army of 280,000 men could protect the nation from invasion. Later the number was upped to 375,000 to take in all of North and South America.

Since then the United States has acquired a number of bases on British soil from Canada to South America. It has been estimated that 40,000 additional men will adequately garrison these. However, the New Deal has ignored the general staff's suggestions and is building an army of 1,200,000 in regular service, including conscripts and Guardsmen, and reserves of about 1,000,000.

Offense, Not Defense.

To military experts, building such a vast force means but one thing—that the army is being built not for defense alone but primarily for the offense.

The officers and experts feel that the New Deal is building an expeditionary force rather than a home line of defense, but are divided in opinion as to where the force will operate and when it will begin operations.

England was dismissed as a theater of operations because it is felt that the issue will be decided one way or another in England by the time American troops could be sent abroad. Furthermore, England's need is not for troops. She has more than needed at home and large reserves thruout her empire.

Her need is for planes and pilots. It is possible that American pilots might be sent abroad as the van of an expeditionary force. This has been suggested by members of various groups which are agitating for this country's entrance into the war on the side of England.

Possible Counteroffensive.

The Low Countries and northern France are regarded by most officers and experts as the most likely temporary home for a second A. E. F. In support of this choice, it is argued that if England lasts until spring, it will be because she has gained the mastery of the air. With such mastery it would be logical to start a counteroffensive, and the avenue thru which the Nazis poured onto the western coast of Europe would be the most logical to attempt to drive them back.

Others feel it would be better to avoid the terrific cost of landing on a hostile coast and instead to operate out of Portugal, which for centuries has been an ally of Great Britain. The expeditionary force would have headquarters in Lisbon, from which operations could be directed against both Germany and Italy, against Germany thru France, which would hardly offer much resistance to an army bent upon driving out her invader, and against Italy thru Spain and France and over the Mediterranean.

Such a campaign would be in imitation of that conducted by the duke of Wellington against Napoleon in the early years of the 19th century. The Wellington campaign contributed considerably to Napoleon's downfall.

While several officers said it is possible that the United States will enter the war by the way of the far east, they said such a conflict will be largely naval.

WELLES TELLS AMERICA'S FAR EASTERN POLICY

Urges Negotiations to End Friction.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 28 (AP).—Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, declared today in a new statement of foreign policy that there is "no problem in the far east that could not be solved peacefully thru negotiation," provided "all concerned" desired to find an equitable solution. He added, however, that the United States is preparing "for any eventualities."

Sumner Welles. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

In the most detailed analysis of foreign policy in many months by an authorized government spokesman, Welles set forth the "requirements of the United States" in the orient. The declaration was considered especially significant since it followed yesterday's announcement that Japan had joined Germany and Italy in a formal military alliance.

Pledges Aid to Go On.

Welles also reasserted American intentions "to render all material support and assistance" in the form of supplies and munitions to Great Britain and the British dominions.

The speech was delivered before the foreign affairs council here. The undersecretary reviewed foreign policy thruout the Roosevelt administration, and warned that the United States faces a danger as grave as any in its history.

Japan's assault on French Indo-China he condemned as a threat to "the integrity of the French colony" contrary to promises of the Japanese government to respect the status quo in that area.

Names Primary U. S. Needs.

"In essence," Welles declared, "the primary requirements of the United States in the far east may be thus simply set forth:

"Complete respect by all powers for the legitimate rights of the United States and of its nationals as stipulated by existing treaties or as provided by the generally accepted tenets of international law.

"Equality of opportunity for the trade of all nations.

"And finally, respect for those international agreements or treaties concerning the far east to which the United States is a party, altho with the expressed understanding that the United States is always willing to consider the peaceful negotiation of such modifications or changes in these agreements or treaties as may in the judgment of the signatories be considered necessary in the light of changed conditions."

Assails Jap Force.

The Japanese government, he continued, "has declared that it intends to create a 'new order in Asia.'"

"In this endeavor," the undersecretary said, "it has relied upon the instrumentality of armed force, and it has made it very clear that it intends that it alone shall decide to what extent the historic interests of the United States and the treaty rights of American citizens in the far east are to be observed."

He declared that "many hundreds of incidents have occurred" in which American rights had been violated. But, he said, "there is no problem presented which could not be peacefully solved thru negotiation, provided there existed a sincere desire on the part of all concerned to find an equitable and fair solution which would give just recognition to the rights and needs of all concerned."

Praises British Valor.

Turning to Europe, Welles praised the heroism of the British people in "defending successfully their homes and their liberties" and added:

"It is the policy of your government, as approved by the congress of the United States and, I believe, by the overwhelming majority of the American people, to render all material support and assistance, thru the furnishing of supplies and munitions, to the British government and to the governments of the British dominions in what we hope will be their successful defense against armed aggression."

Welles declared that the government "must continue in the future, as it has in the past, to prepare for all eventualities" and to "arm with all haste and vigor to guard our new world from threatened danger."

GAMBLING WITH OUR BLESSINGS

UNCLE SAM SOLILOQUIZES

This country has much to be grateful for.

Its resources, if properly administered, are sufficient to give prosperity and happiness to twice our present population.

It has a superabundance of most all that humanity hopes for. Food, gold, oil, education, health, amusement, and peace.

It has immeasurable elbow room, with almost no friction with its neighbors.

It has vast fertile areas and a variety of climates suitable to all tastes and purposes, with complete freedom to enjoy them.

What nature cannot provide, science synthesizes.

This country has been showered with God-given blessings.

It is the envy of the whole world.

AND YET, I AM DEEPLY DISTURBED.

These blessings are being recklessly gambled with.

Upon all sides I see divided loyalty. Many Americans are thinking first of an alien country.

This nation is overwhelmingly against entering the war.

And yet, every step taken by the administration is exactly what would be taken if we were to enter the war.

"Short of war" is steadily becoming shorter.

The same influences that jockeyed this nation into war in 1917 are again working night and day to get us into this one.

Internationalists and returned expatriates are beating the war drums. They want us to take the fatal step.

Once in, we can't get out before victory or defeat. It will be a job that may cover the globe, with our wealth of money, blessings, and man power enlisted for the duration, which may last until all are ruined.

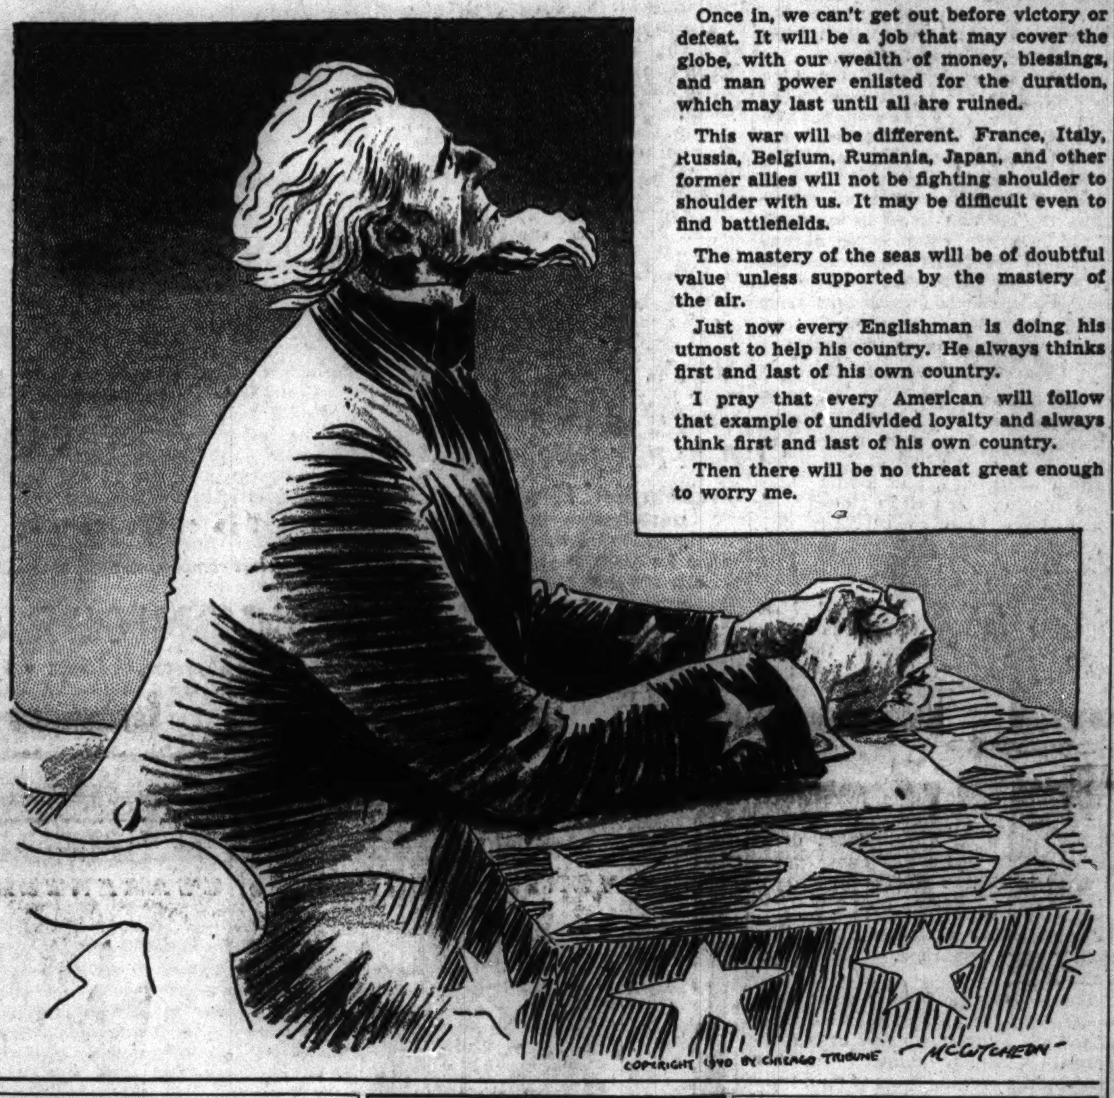
This war will be different. France, Italy, Russia, Belgium, Rumania, Japan, and other former allies will not be fighting shoulder to shoulder with us. It may be difficult even to find battlefields.

The mastery of the seas will be of doubtful value unless supported by the mastery of the air.

Just now every Englishman is doing his utmost to help his country. He always thinks first and last of his own country.

I pray that every American will follow that example of undivided loyalty and always think first and last of his own country.

Then there will be no threat great enough to worry me.



Elliott's Army Captaincy Hit as Favoritism

Urged to Resign

Palo Alto, Cal., Sept. 28 [Special].—The Palo Alto Junior Chamber of Commerce today telegraphed to Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, a demand that he resign his appointive captaincy in the United States air corps reserve to avoid endangering the morale of the entire army draft.

"We earnestly urge," the telegram read, "that, in the interest of restoring public confidence and saving the draft from a disastrous beginning, you resign your post as captain in the army. Today the eyes of millions of men of our age group are on you, waiting to see if you will endanger the morale of the entire draft by your present action. We are ready to make our own physical and financial sacrifices for national defense but feel they should be on a fair and square basis to be really and truly American. Will you resign now?"

A rising storm of protest in Illinois against the appointment of Elliott Roosevelt as a captain in the United States army was described in a radio speech last night by George F. Barrett.

Barrett is the Republican nominee for attorney general, but he did not mention his own candidacy in his speech. Almost his entire time was devoted to a denunciation of the younger Roosevelt matter and the war policies of President Roosevelt.

Terms It Gross Favoritism.

"An army is no better than its commander," said Barrett, "and today we have before us the spectacle of gross favoritism—open dishonesty on the part of the army's commander for the protection of his own son.

"Your son, your brother, your husband will register for military service. He will take his chance along with a million others. He will go where he is sent and do as he is told, but Capt. Elliott Roosevelt, 30 years old, recently appointed to the United States army air corps—not to fly, for he knows nothing of planes—not to fight—will sit at a desk in the procurement department of the air corps.

"Capt. Roosevelt will receive a captain's pay, a captain's allowances, the privilege of wearing civilian clothes, and a record free from draft evasion for which your son could be sent to prison.

"Befouls Conscription Law."

"Is this the 'democratic way' to build an army that the President has personally pointed out? Is this the way to show the world that all men are equal before the law? No! It is befouling the conscription law at its very source."

Barrett charged that Roosevelt is definitely leading the United States into war and that step by step he is giving away America's military resources.

HEIL ASKS ROOSEVELT TO PUT THANKSGIVING BACK IN ITS OLD PLACE

Madison, Wis., Sept. 28 [Special].—Gov. Julius P. Heil today wired President Roosevelt urging that the traditional last Thursday in November be proclaimed as Thanksgiving day this year.

"As governor of the state of Wisconsin, I would like to know when it might please your excellency to have Thanksgiving day," the governor said. "We in Wisconsin are of a patriotic nature by descent and birth and we would like the traditional day we have had for generations. It would please me very much if your excellency would let me know your pleasure in this matter."

Wisconsin was one of several states that observed two Thanksgiving days last year—the first, proclaimed by President Roosevelt, and the second on the traditional last Thursday of November, proclaimed by Gov. Heil.

The White House has indicated the President will proclaim an early Thanksgiving day again this year. The tentative date is Nov. 21.

Violent Earthquake Felt for 750 Miles in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 28 (AP).—A violent earthquake was felt in Santiago tonight. The National Telegraph said damage was suffered from Ovalle to Concepcion, about 750 miles, and that the temblor was felt violently at Ovalle, Valparaiso, and Los Andes.

U. S. to Tell Us How to Build Bomb Shelters

New Dealers and their supporters were busy on several fronts yesterday in war scare activities. Threading the day's developments was the inference that invasion of the United States is imminent despite the preoccupation of axis powers in old world and far east wars. Among those so engaged were Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, and Henry Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee.

Air Raid Shelters for U. S.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 [Special].—Altho there is no hint or threat of an air raid on this country, Secretary Stimson's war department is preparing to publish advice on building bomb shelters, giving first aid and defending against gas attack.

The information is being compiled by the army general staff for distribution upon request to civil authorities of American communities.

No Fishing During "Emergency."

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 28 [Special].—Gov. Lehman today issued an executive decree which means that thousands of New York sportsmen will have to put away their fishing equipment in the name of national defense and "the existing emergency."

Acting on the militant urging of Mayor F. H. La Guardia, the governor prohibited all fishing and boating in the numerous streams and reservoirs in the watershed which provides most of New York City's water supply.

The decree was issued, it was explained, to forestall any possible sabotage of the city's water supply.

Sportsmen's protests to the closing order, which includes some of the choicest fishing waters of the state, reached its height Friday when several hundred made a special trip to Albany. However, they were unable to dissaude Gov. Lehman.

Wallace Fears an Invasion.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 28 (AP).—Japan's alliance with Germany and Italy "means the United States must arm speedily and efficiently to guard against invasion," Democratic Vice Presidential Nominee Wallace said today upon his arrival for a speech.

Huge Machine Working for F.D.R. Exposed

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

The inside story of a gigantic Roosevelt political machine which for six years has been flooding the nation with New Deal propaganda—much of it prepared at government expense—was related yesterday to the Cook county Republican committee and the Republican state, county, and Municipal court candidates.

The story was told by Richard J. Lyons of Libertyville, former state representative and now active in behalf of the state and national Republican tickets. Six weeks were required to gather the documentary evidence he laid before the committee, called into special session yesterday in the La Salle hotel following a luncheon at which Dwight Green, G. O. P. candidate for governor, was host.

The vast machine, which is almost unknown to the public, is a creature of the women's division of the Democratic national committee. Known as the Reporter Plan, it is made up of hundreds of thousands of women. They distribute tons of New Deal literature, more than a third of which is turned out by the United States government printing office at Washington, Lyons asserted.

Campaign Kits Stuffed Full.

Folders or "kits," as they are called, are stuffed with copies of speeches by senators, congressmen and New Deal appointees and with bulletins in which New Deal agencies extol themselves.

Here and there will be seen a speech bearing the label, "Not printed at government expense." But almost all of these are found in franked [free mailing] envelopes bearing such magic signatures as Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Senator Prentiss M. Brown of Michigan, and Rep. T. V. Smith of Illinois.

Twelve kits, containing a total of about 300 pieces of literature, are sold at 25 cents each to the women workers, often in sets of 12. Based upon the setup of the Reporter Plan organization, 706,104 kits, or 17,652,600 individual pieces of literature are being loosed upon Illinois, Lyons asserted.

Resembles Soviet Plan.

The closely knit Reporter Plan covers the nation, precinct by precinct and county by county and is almost a copy of the soviets [councils] that made Russia communistic, he continued. There is a close family resemblance between the Reporter groups and the spreading units that made Italy Fascist and Germany Nazi, Lyons said, adding:

"This is what we are up against; By their own statement they distributed 83 million copies of just one of several types of literature in 1936. In four years this Democratic machine has grown silently and swiftly. It is vastly greater than ours."

Lyons then charged that:

1. The Reporter Plan, with its far-reaching organization and money raising ability, is violating the Hatch clean politics act which was conceived by the New Deal to limit Republican expenditures to 3 million dollars in this Presidential campaign.

2. The women's division of the Democratic party is violating federal laws which make it a felony for individuals to sell government property; in this case the property being the millions of government prepared pamphlets and bulletins printed at the expense of the tax payer.

To understand the amazingly swift

FURNITURE IN FRANCE, WINDSORS START FROM SCRATCH IN NEW HOME

NASSAU, Bahamas, Sept. 28 (AP).—The duke and duchess of Windsor have almost abandoned their hope of getting furniture and clothing left in their Riviera home when they fled to Portugal during the German invasion of France.

Maj. Gray Phillipps, controler of the duke's household who remained in Lisbon in an effort to negotiate transfer of Windsor's possessions, has joined him here.

The Windsors are living in the waterfront home of Frederick Sigrist, London capitalist, while the official residence is being enlarged at a cost of about $30,000.

NOMINEE OFFERS A NEW, BETTER WORLD FOR U. S.

We're Still Dynamic, He Insists.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 28—Wendell Willkie met a roaring, cheering crowd estimated at 75,000 persons at the Empire City race track here tonight and pledged to them and the rest of America a "new and better world."

Such was the enthusiasm of the crowd that when Willkie had finished, it would not let him leave the platform. It rose to its feet in an ear-splitting ovation, followed by a chanted roar of "We Want Willkie!"

He started to leave, escorted by policemen, a first and then a second time, but the crowd would not be quieted, keeping up its chant of "We Want Willkie!" and "Give us more!"

"We Cannot Fail."

Finally, after he had made two short talks, in one of which he asserted, "We cannot fail; we will betray our generation and our time if we fail," Willkie was permitted to depart amid more cheers.

The job that lies ahead of the Republican party, Willkie told his audience, which included delegates to the New York state Republican convention, is the greatest task that has fallen to any party since the civil war, when the Republicans arose to meet that crisis.

We must take democracy, the Republican Presidential nominee said, and make it effective.

Picture of the Future.

"We must keep in our minds," he said, "the image of that effective democracy—the image of that new world, more fruitful than the one we have, more rewarding, more thoughtful of human life, more cultured; a world that will be better to live in than any world that any one has imagined so far. If we are to remain free, we must dare to imagine."

Calling on his fellow Republicans to take new courage, Willkie said:

"Let us go forth carrying the same light that we can see when we look back to Abraham Lincoln, the greatest of Republicans: Government of the people, for the people, and by the people. With that light, and with that alone, we shall make our way into the new world. With that light, and that alone, we shall rebuild America."

Finds America Anxious.

Willkie reported that in his just concluded swing thru the prairies, the deserts, the mountains, and the forests of western America he had come face to face with millions of Americans, and he found them listening and anxious; that the America they represent has begun to realize that the New Deal has been preaching a false doctrine.

The Republican party, Willkie declared, must provide the new leadership of the nation. He drew this distinction between his pledges and those of the New Deal:

"Our administration will favor liberal advance to protect labor, to protect the farmer, to protect American enterprise—to protect the people from each other. But our administration will denounce the principle that the American people are the government's people. It will insist that the American government is the people's government."

Of his pledges, Willkie said:

"They cannot be fulfilled by brain trust schemes, or on chart paper. They must be fulfilled in steel and concrete, and in the flesh and blood of men."

At one point he described President Roosevelt as "the man whose trade-mark is on the depression, the man whose foreign policies helped to disrupt the democratic world."

Willkie will leave New York tomorrow afternoon to return to the middle west, spending two days in Indiana and Michigan.

Later in the campaign he will make a major address in Illinois, for this is one of the pivotal states in the election.

TEXT OF SPEECH

FASHION ENTRIES READY FOR THEIR WORLD PREMIERE

Models Will Be Shown in W-G-N Studio.

Judges for the fashion contest will be announced in Monday's Tribune.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 28.—Final creations in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S $7,500 American fashions contest were being carefully placed in packing boxes here today for shipment to Chicago. There they will have their world première Wednesday in the W-G-N audience studio.

These are the dresses, coats, and ensembles completed here from among the 48 final designs culled out of more than 12,000 sketches submitted in the competition. Other outfits are receiving their finishing stitches at dressmaking studios in Chicago.

Mrs. Grace Parker-Pickering, Chicago and New York fashion authority, who is chairman of the contest committee, revealed here today that the entire collection would be insured for approximately $75,000.

High Value Set on Each.

Each dress model has a potential value averaging around $500, and the accessories, such as furs, shoes, stockings, gloves, and purses, are costly. The embroidery on one cocktail dress required seven weeks' labor.

Trunks were discarded for the transportation because it was feared some of the dresses might be crushed. Large cardboard boxes are being used instead. Each ensemble is being packed separately.

Mrs. Pickering was found supervising the packing today in her suite at the Biltmore hotel. Dresses and coats not yet packed were hanging in the center of the room while the painted sketches on cardboard from which they were faithfully reproduced were hanging on the walls.

Creations Accorded Praise.

"I've been going to Paris for years and years," observed Mrs. Pickering, "going twice a year, in spring and fall, to see the most important French collections, and I find these creations of American designers, which have been so carefully executed from their sketches, compare most favorably in every way with Parisian innovations."

One thing which delighted Mrs. Pickering was that there was not a single "chi chi" dress in the lot. She explained "chi chi" was a French phrase meaning something overly ornamented, embroidered or bespangled, "as tho the designer had to put a lot of stuff on so the dress would be noticed."

Some of the finalists have given names to their creations. While Mrs. Pickering talked a completed dress arrivd. This was a black lace gown with large taffeta flowers on it.

Choose Blonde Model.

"I'm putting a blonde model into that," she remarked. "That will show it off."

There was a gold cloth gown with a monkey fur muff and hat with tufts of the same fur which had been nicknamed "monkey-shine." Another young girl's evening dress of pink tulle was known as the "water lily" dress because of the spray of those waxlike flowers on it.

The creations came from all parts of the country. Mrs. Pickering picked out at random a white slipper satin evening gown with black starched lace which had been designed by a Chicago youth, beige wool coat by a man in Utah and a dramatic red wool evening coat lined with red silk, the creation of a girl in New Jersey. An Iowa boy designed the "water lily" dress.

Among the numbers Gorin will sing is a musical expression of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, composed especially for him by Albert Hay Melotte, former Chicago organist.

FORCE READY TO BACK PACT, SAYS JAPAN'S PREMIER

TOKIO, Sept. 28 (AP).—A declaration that Japan, Germany, and Italy were "ready to display the power of their military alliance in case of necessity" was made tonight by Premier-Prince Fumimaro Konoye.

Japan, he said in a broadcast to the nation, is prepared "not only to settle the China incident, but also to participate in the formidable task of creating a new era in the entire world."

The premier added that the treaty had resulted from conflicts between the old and new orders in the world. Germany and Italy, he went on, were leading the attack upon the status quo in Europe as was Japan in Asia, and the alliance thus was the outgrowth of natural coöperation.

"It is inevitable," he continued, "that Japan toward East Asia and Germany and Italy toward Europe assume the leadership in forming these spheres with mutual prosperity.

"I believe attempts to hinder this inexorable force of nature were responsible for the outbreak of the second European war and the creation of what may be characterized as a state of quasi-war in east Asia."

Since Japan now has formally entered the alliance, he said, "all is now ready."

Tells of "Grave Crisis."

As to the Chinese-Japanese war, he remarked that Japan has "sacrificed many loyal and courageous officers and men and, moreover, has consumed huge amounts of money and economic resources."

He appealed for national unity and courage in the face of what he said was a crisis unprecedented in history.

Well informed sources said that Japan must try to bring the soviet union into the framework of the Japanese-German-Italian alliance because Germany may not help this country if she clashes with Russia.

The pact of Germany, Italy, and Japan specifies that the alliance does not affect arrangements which any of the signatories now have with Russia. Germany and Russia are bound by a nonaggression pact. Therefore, qualified sources indicated, an immediate effort may be expected to affect a rapprochement with the soviet union to safeguard the western boundaries of Japan's empire.

Germany May Help.

Germany may help in this case, because of her interest in using the Trans-Siberian railway to get her exports to Japan, whence Japanese ships will carry them abroad.

Japanese say the United States is mainly responsible for the pact because of "unfailing American opposition to Japanese policies for the last nine years." A highly placed Japanese said:

"Japan's friendship need never have been alienated, particularly since America has neither economic nor strategic considerations of any importance in the far east."

PEKING, North China, Sept. 28.—Indicative of the swift development of a policy of retaliation against the American embargo of scrap iron to Japan, two steps were taken in North China today toward throttling the remaining American trade.

From Kalgan came word that the Japanese dominated government of Inner Mongolia had prohibited the importation of any automobiles and trucks except those made by the Japanese. In Peking the North China régime is preparing to ban shipments of hides and furs to the United States.

The Kalgan ruling will seriously affect American automobile importers in Tientsin, while the latter is expected to result in the closing of many long established American fur buying agencies in North China.

Not only the Chinese but the Eskimo, too, regard it as the height of immodesty for a woman to show her feet.

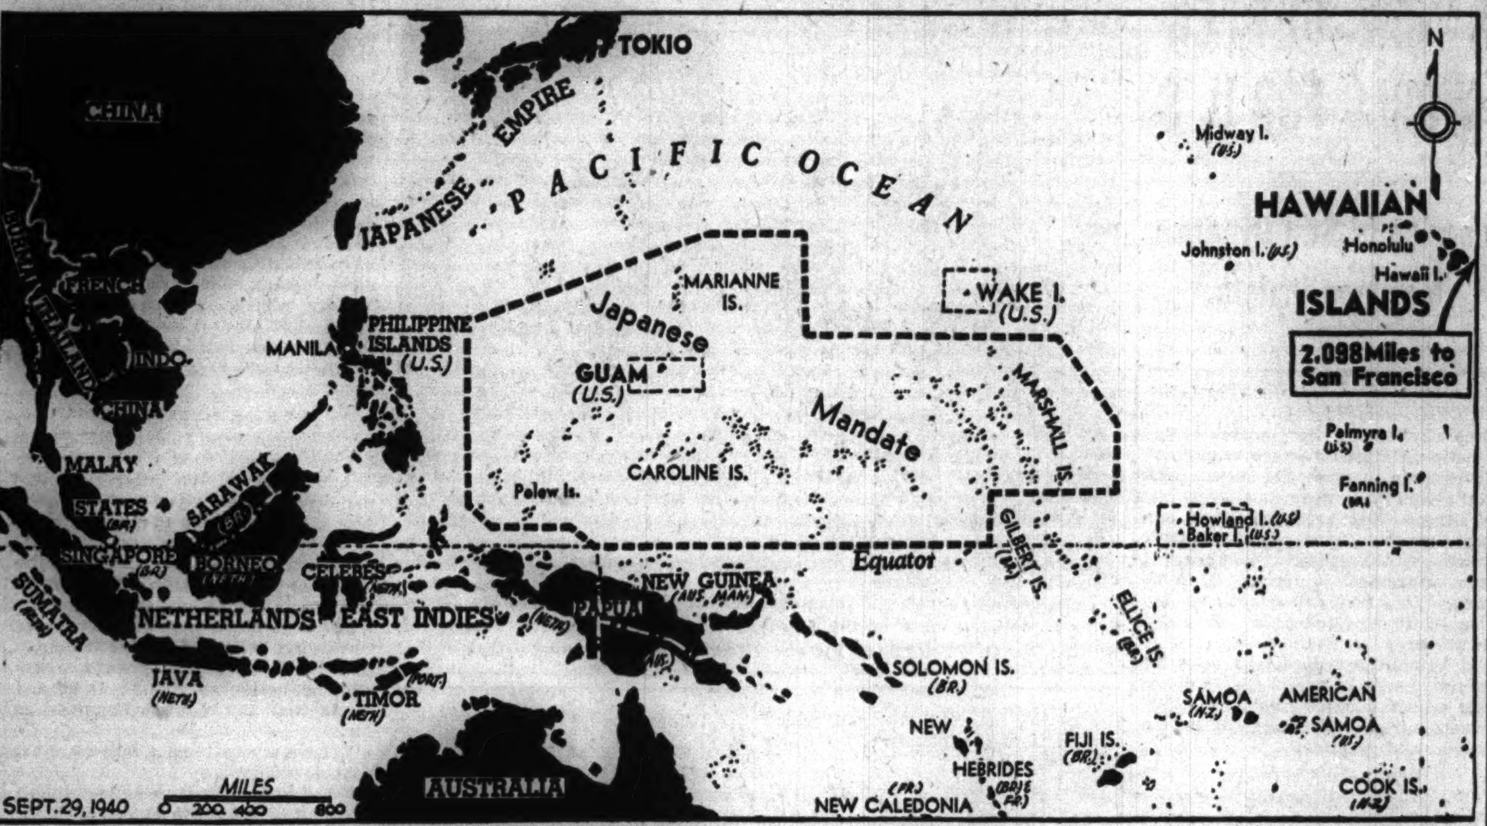
Col. McCormick to Discuss Pacific Ocean Strategy on W-G-N Tonight



This map, showing the islands of the southwest Pacific ocean, is printed for the use of those listening tonight to a radio speech by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune. The talk will be broadcast by station W-G-N on the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour, between 9 and 10 p. m. The map also will be of use to readers of the text of the talk, which will be printed in full in Monday morning's Tribune. In the talk Col. McCormick will discuss military strategy in the Pacific ocean.

AXIS AND JAPS DECIDE RUSSIA'S WORLD SPHERE

Own "New Order" Spaces Also Established.

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (AP).—Germany, Italy, and Japan have agreed among themselves as to just what area in the proposed new world order is to be under the "leadership" of Russia, as well as what areas are to be under their own respective controls, informed Nazi sources disclosed tonight.

The extent and nature of the assignment to Russia was not mentioned by the informant, the authoritative commentary service Dienst aus Deutschland, but it was said the step had been taken "so that there can be no question of encroachment in foreign spaces by these powers."

Dienst injected some confusion over the three treaty signers' agreement, however, with a statement that the borders had not been "fixed locally according to geographic details" but only "according to principle."

"There exists no need," it declared, "for an exact fixing of borders in every detail."

Hull Statement Irks Some.

An indication also was given by Dienst that United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull's description of the pact as a document which only publicized something already known did not sit very well with some circles.

Despite American and British attempts to represent the pact as nothing new, the service said, the American press accepted it as "the most sensational political event since the beginning of the war," thereby recognizing its significance.

While spokesmen declined to be specific as to where the Russian and Japanese spheres are to meet, it is obviously expected in the foreign office that Japan will clear up any misunderstanding with the soviets over disputed borders. It was indicated, too, that the soviets' shipment of arms to China is being overlooked.

Russian Approval Implied.

There still was no published press or official reaction from Moscow, but D. N. B., the German official news agency, asserted by inference that it was favorable.

The "spaces," in Europe, Africa, and East Asia, are to be marked out under the terms of the broad new military-political-economic alliance with which Germany, Italy, and Japan yesterday confronted the world.

Whether Russia had been informed of all this in advance was not stated officially. Many German commentators said she had been told of all the steps that preceded the alliance, but for this there was no official confirmation.

German government quarters declared, however, that the relation of each state to its "space" would be one not of "monopolistic rule," but rather one of "leadership."

The position of the United States under the new alliance, which implies that Japan, Germany, and Italy will band together in war against America if that country should become involved with either of them, stirred conjecture.

Eye U. S. Arms Trade.

If the United States continues to supply arms and munitions to Britain, it might or might not cause a conflict, the issue depending largely on whether such aid would be likely to affect the war decisively.

"The pact is directed against the spirit of intervention and widening of the conflict," the government quarters said. "Supplying arms is one manifestation of the interventionist spirit. Just when and whether furnishing instruments of war leads to open conflict with the contracting parties of the three power pact is presently a theoretical question."

The recent deal by which Britain received 50 American destroyers and the United States obtained British western hemisphere bases, it was said authoritatively, did not, in the German view, indicate a conflict over that incident.

On the question of the Americas these persons said:

"We have never opposed your American Monroe Doctrine. We have no desire or intention to extend our defensive frontiers, say to the waters of the Amazon. We have never thought of interfering within the area affected by the Monroe Doctrine and do not intend to do so."

As to recent rumors that the United States might acquire the right to use the British naval base at Singapore in exchange for heavy bombers to be used by the British against Germany, German political quarters appeared to believe that it would be up to Japan to determine whether this would be an encroachment upon her space.

Russians Told of Pact.

MOSCOW, Sept. 28 (AP).—The soviet government organ, Izvestia, and the communist party organ, Pravda, broke their 24 hour silence today and announced the signing of the triparty military pact yesterday among Germany, Japan, and Italy.

Report Bulgaria May Join.

ROME, Sept. 28 (AP).—Italian political circles suggested today that Bulgaria, friendliest of the Balkan countries to Russia, may join the new axis pact of Germany, Italy, and Japan.

If Bulgaria entered the alignment, foreign observers said, it presumably would be for protection against Greece, from which Sofia wants an outlet to the Aegean sea thru Thrace, and also from neighboring Turkey, friendly with Britain.

"News" to Bulgarians.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 28 (AP).—A high official said today the government was ignorant of any axis plan to attract Bulgaria into a military alliance as a weapon against Turkey and Greece.

LETTERS SHOW RAIDS HALT MUCH WORK IN BRITISH PLANE PLANTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Sunday Dispatch a week ago printed a letter to workers in aircraft factories, shaming 1,500 who repeatedly took shelter during air raids.

This week, under the heading "Great Aircraft Scandal," the paper declared the response "to our bitter revelation was surprising and disturbing." Letters, it said, poured in from readers saying, "You are, of course, referring to our factory." In most cases the workers were not employed in the factory the Dispatch had in mind.

The letters showed production had been slowed up considerably more than was first believed, the Dispatch said, and many workers reported their managements forbade them to work during a raid because of danger from breaking glass. The Dispatch demanded the building be made safer by removal of the glass.

Berlin Pact Aimed at U. S., Says Buenos Aires Paper

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Sept. 28 (AP).—La Nacion, the only morning newspaper here to comment on the pact of Berlin, said Latin America must watch with keenest interest the developments of world economic blocs. The pact was aimed directly at the United States "whose President Roosevelt since October, 1937, has made no effort to hide his antipathy toward the European totalitarians," La Nacion said.

France to Cut Its Embassy in Rumania to a Legation

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, Sept. 28.—The Vichy government announced today that after Dec. 1 its embassy would be reduced to the rank of a legation.

CLAIM THAILAND PLANE ATTACKED INDO-CHINA POST

HANOI, French Indo-China, Sept. 28 (AP).—New signs of trouble with Thailand [Siam] confronted French Indo-China tonight.

A lone plane from Thailand machine gunned a native constabulary post 45 miles within this French colony today, French authorities said.

They attributed the attack to Thailand's pressure for the return of former territory but said no casualties resulted and no steps were being taken in retribution.

Forty-eight hours after their first entry in Haiphong under an agreement with the French, Japanese troops ditional contingents.

[A British report from Chungking, unconfirmed, said Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had ordered Chinese troops into Indo-China as a self-defense measure.]

Bomb Injuries Fatal to Buckingham Palace Aid

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP).—One of four workmen injured when a German bomb exploded in the royal chapel of Buckingham palace a fortnight ago died in a hospital, it was learned today. He was W. Davies, who was caught in the underground plumber's shop.

WILLKIE OFFERS A NEW, BETTER WORLD FOR U. S.

America Is Still Dynamic, Nominee Insists.

make a report on the progress of the crusade in which we are engaged—the crusade to give this nation back to the American people.

"I have just returned from two weeks among those people. I have talked with hundreds of them; I have addressed hundreds of thousands, and I have seen millions. My faith in them is redoubled. You and I will never let them down.

"I think the record will bear me out that never before in the 18 states thru which I passed have so many persons turned out to see and hear a Presidential candidate.

Drawn by Challenge.

"No man could receive the attention of such crowds without a sense of humility. I have been deeply touched. Yet I know that it is not I who draw them to stand, perhaps for hours, in long cheering lines. It is something else—it is something in this year of 1940—a challenge which we Republicans must meet.

"I have looked down into the faces of the people from many platforms, and when I meet their eagerness and concentrated attention I think to myself: These are the free people; these are the people who have made of democracy the strongest kind of government on earth.

"Why are they so eager? why is their attention so concentrated? I will tell you why.

"The American peole admire simplicity. They are frugal. They are honest. They love the democratic process. They believe in themselves, and therefore they believe in America.

"One of Greatest Depressions."

"But these people are living in one of the greatest economic depressions of history. They have seen their industries decline and their standard of living contract. They have seen unemployment accepted as normal, and during the past four years they have actually seen it rise. During the last seven years they have seen the average level of farm prices fall below the level of the preceding seven years. They have seen the national income hover around the level of 1920 and fail even to reach the level of 1926.

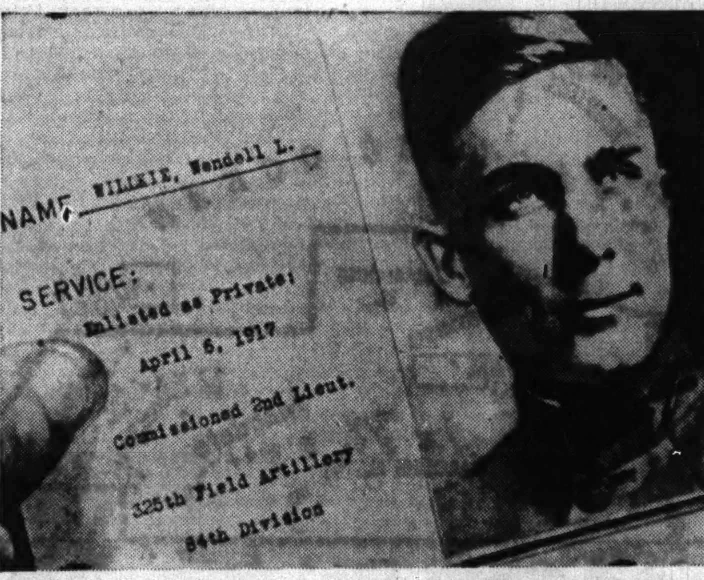
"In this desperate situation the New Deal party has come to the American people and has said: 'We will provide for you, we will take care of the unemployed, we will subsidize your farms, we will be the friend of the common man. Our resources are unlimited. You can live on us.'

"The New Deal party preached that false doctrine to the free and independent people of America.

"Accepted as an Emergency."

"Because they were desperate, the people accepted that doctrine. They accepted it as an emergency doctrine. They permitted the New Deal to spend 60 billion dollars. They saw the national debt increased by 22 billion dollars. They accepted an enormous increase in taxes, and in the size of the federal burocracy, which now employs one-fortieth of the working population.

Wendell Willkie's Service Record



NAME WILLKIE, Wendell L.
SERVICE:
Enlisted as Private;
April 6, 1917
Commissioned 2nd Lieut.
325th Field Artillery
84th Division

According to the publicity division of the New York state Republican committee, this is the war service record card for Wendell L. Willkie, G. O. P. nominee for the Presidency. [Acme Photo.]

"But these people are honest people and frugal. When they get checks from Washington for produce they haven't grown, or for working at something that is wasteful, they do not feel right about that. Instinctively they feel that it can't last. They know it can't last. There must be an end to these doles and debts. There must be an end to the emergency.

"And then what? What will happen after that?

"When they ask this question the people look out to the rest of the world. And what do they find? Why, they find that democracy has collapsed almost everywhere on earth.

"And those of them who think most about these things know that the collapse of democracy elsewhere was preceded by the same causes and the same manifestations as we have here in America during the last years.

"It Was Man-Made."

"Those of them who think most about these things know that collapse didn't just happen. They know that it was man-made, that it was brought about by the failure of the democracies to make themselves strong and to believe deeply and courageously in their way of life.

"Those who think most about these things know that in that failure the New Deal administration had a share and must bear part of the responsibility. Knew know that the economic policies of the New Deal helped to disrupt the democratic world. They know that the depression in this country helped to pull these other countries down.

"I have seen this written in the faces of the people: They know, as free men, that the doctrines of the New Deal must lead to the end of freedom. Their future is dark and uncertain. Therefore they are spiritually hungry. They are looking for a light. They are listening for a voice.

"And who speaks to them? Who lays the issues before them? Who takes them into his confidence and helps them to solve their problems?

The Chicago "Draft."

"At this particular crisis in their history the New Deal party captured the Democratic convention in Chicago. It went thru a transparent rigamarole about 'drafting' a candidate for President.

"In this critical hour the New Deal party entrusted the destiny of the great liberal cause of which it has so often boasted to machine politicians of The Bronx, Chicago, and Jersey City.

"In this critical hour, when the traditions and institutions of democracy are in special danger, the New Deal party asks the people to scrap one of their most basic traditions. It injects into the campaign the disruptive issue of the third term.

"And all this while—all this anxious while—the man whom the New Deal party has nominated, the man whose trademark is on this depression, the man whose foreign policies helped to disrupt the democratic world—that man is silent. He will not discuss the issues that trouble those people. He will not tell them the truth about their problems. He has placed himself above them.

"'Trust me. Trust me.'"

"He says: 'Trust me. Trust me. I can't explain it all to you. You wouldn't understand. Perhaps ten years from now the archives will explain, but for the present you must trust me. You must believe that I am indispensable.'

"That is not the kind of political argument that the American people are accustomed to. That is not the kind of debate by which they won their way to freedom.

"But that is why the faces that look toward your candidate are so eager. That is why they are so expectant—so full of hope.

"Now, my fellow Republicans, it will not be enough for us merely to win this election. We must provide a new leadership.

"I have sought on my western trip to indicate some of the elements of that leadership. Because you and I believe that American society must be protected from poverty and from exploitation.

"I have made certain pledges.

"I have pledged to continue relief until those on relief get jobs; to continue and even to reinforce those guarantees that labor has won; to continue and even to improve those elements of the present farm program, which if our national income could be expanded, would help the farmer to get his just share.

"Pledged to Make Jobs."

"I have pledged us to make jobs. I have explained to the people that in order to fulfill this pledge we must change our attitude toward business; we must encourage it. We must revise the tax system so that it will create enterprise, not strangle it. We must open the way for new enterprises to make more jobs.

"But I have pledged much more than that. Yes, I have traveled thru this country—thru the wheat and the corn, thru its factories and freight sidings, thru its crowded cities and its empty desert plains. I have worked in many of those spots with my hands, but now I have seen them all again, and I make this pledge, I pledge a new world.

"We have scarcely begun to build this wonderful America. We have scarcely begun to know what we can do with our resources and our man power. Please believe me—and I have said this to hundreds of thousands—please believe me, ours it not a static society. We shall die if we stand still. Ours is a dynamic society in which one must become two, and two must become four, and four must become sixteen.

"Keep It Dynamic."

"We must keep it dynamic. Please believe me, we must understand the dynamics of it. We must take this democracy of ours and make it effective. If it is to live it must be effective.

"We must keep in our minds the image of that effective democracy in the image of that new world, more fruitful than the one we have, more rewarding, more thoughtful of human life, more cultured; a world which will be better to live in than any world that any one has imagined so far.

"If we are to remain free we must dare to imagine.

"And now I put it up to you, fellow Republicans. I confront you with the question: Can we fulfill those pledges?

"They cannot be fulfilled by brain trust schemes, or on chart paper. They must be fulfilled in steel and concrete, and in the flesh and blood of men.

The Task Ahead.

"The task that lies ahead of us is the greatest task that has faced any party since the civil war—since that other time of crisis and despair, when the Republican party did provide the leadership and did save this Union from destruction.

"I cannot pretend—we must not try to pretend—that this task can be accomplished without sacrifice. No man can predict what the sacrifices will be. They begin this year with a new burden of taxes for defense, and a new and even more staggering burden of debt.

"But of this we may be sure. The time has come when the government must cease giving to the people. The time has come for the people to give to the government.

"Our administration will favor every liberal advance to protect labor, to protect the farmer, to protect American enterprise—to protect the people from each other. It is thus and only thus that the precious goal of national unity can be achieved.

"But our administration will denounce the principle that the American people are the government's people.

"It will insist that the American government is the people's government.

"We Must Rise."

"This task is not one that we can accept limply. It is a stupendous task. To fulfill it we must rise above ourselves.

"To fulfill it we must rise above the cliches and the doles of the New Deal. We must rise above the political phrases that are supposed to attract votes. We must make demands upon our constituents, not promise them more. We have only one great promise to make. We promise an effective, an expanding, an impregnable democracy.

"We do not make that promise in the petty spirit of partisanship. We make it in the spirt of those great men who, before us, cut off the long arm of tyranny when it reached across the Atlantic to grasp our taxes, our industries, and our political rights.

"We do not call it tyranny today. We do not place upon its head a crown, yet the starker words of our 20th century cannot hide its nature from our eyes, or make it any less the scourge of free and vigorous men.

His Stirring Conclusion.

"Let us go forth from this meeting carrying a light that men well see for many centuries. Let us go forth carrying the same light that we can still see when we look back to Abraham Lincoln, the greatest of Republicans: Government of the people, for the people, and by the people.

"With that light, and with that alone, we shall make our way into the new world. With that light, and with that alone, we shall rebuild America."

FIRST OF TRADED U.S. DESTROYERS REACH ENGLAND

Report Escaping U-Boat Attack Near Coast.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The first flotilla of former American destroyers exchanged for western hemisphere defense bases arrived at a British port late today. There was no official reception for the little warships, but their arrival nevertheless was an impressive event. Lacking, too, were the tooting whistles, booming guns, and cheering public.

Their voyage from Canada, 2,500 miles away, was marked on one dark night by an apparent submarine attack, I was informed, but further details of this incident were withheld. The trip otherwise was uneventful.

A battered seagoing tug took what might be called the reception committee—a group of newspapermen, photographers and harbor officials—a few miles out, where we drifted for half an hour on a perfect sea.

Historic Event Unrecognized.

Soon the destroyers steamed gracefully into the harbor at full speed, churning the sea into a white foam. They took up a zig-zag course, one behind the other, giving a definite reminder that they were actually at war and not on dress parade.

They swept past harbor buoys in a straight line and under the bows of anchored ships and harbor craft, none of which recognized this historic event by so much as hoisting a flag.

Close to the beach promenade and in full view of homegoing crowds they swung abruptly about and entered an inner harbor where none of them had ever cast anchor before. Dock crews accepted their arrival as casually as everybody else. Subsequently the reception committee was taken on board one of the destroyers.

Called Better Than British Ships.

An officer said the ships had been drawn from active commission and delivered to the British with fully equipped guns, shells, and torpedoes. Even the original gun muzzle plugs were in place. Another officer said that in many respects he considered the American ships superior to the same category of the British navy.

All the ships' officers agreed that the destroyers, altho old, were adequate for the work which will be assigned to them. They were brought over so hurriedly they did not even get a fresh coat of paint, but the officers said they could be put to sea at once if necessary.

Nazis Behead 3 for Trying to Flee Prison in Air Raid

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (AP).—Wilhelm Schwabe, 29 years old; Paul Bugla, 30, and Walter Jenner, 41, were beheaded today for mutiny in Muenster prison. They were charged with using war conditions—especially confusion during an air alarm—to attempt escape.

On Campaign Tour with Willkie

Taking time out from his campaign routine, Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for the Presidency, is shown pouring coffee during luncheon on campaign train with Mrs. Willkie and his brother, Ed.

WILLKIE TELLS LABOR STAND IN BROADCAST

Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, explained his views on organized labor in a one minute transcribed interview broadcast yesterday over W-G-N. The broadcast was one of a series of recorded interviews with the Republican nominee. Willkie cited his record on labor in reply to a question by an Illinois voter.

"No one could have spent his youth as I did, seeing at first hand the struggle waged by the workers of the tin mills of Elwood, Ind., without becoming ingrained with a sympathy for labor and particularly for organized labor," Willkie said in the broadcast.

"As a practicing attorney in later years I represented labor unions and fought for their rights in the courts of this country. More recently, as head of an industrial enterprise, I recognized and coöperated with both major labor organizations. The unwholesome strife and warfare, which the New Deal has brought to organized labor, is a major reason why the country wants to vote a change in administration on Nov. 5."

Approximately 1,500 persons attended a dinner for Judge Oscar F. Nelson of the Superior court, Republican candidate for state's attorney, last night in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel. The Swedish American club sponsored the affair in recognition of Judge Nelson's 56th birthday. A resolution presented to him praised his work in public life and in the field of union labor and commended him for having "remained steadfast to the people from whose roots he sprung."

ITALIAN RAIDERS HURL NEW TYPE BOMB ON BRITISH

Explodes Only When It Is Touched or Shaken.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 28 (AP).—Italian raiders attacking British troops in Egypt are using a new type of aerial bomb known to the British as the "thermos" because of its resemblance to a vacuum flask, it was disclosed tonight.

The 10 pound missile is about 13 inches long. An aluminum casing rips off in descent and the bomb does not explode upon impact with the ground. Instead it becomes alive and ready for explosion if touched or shaken by vibration from a passing truck.

British Bomb Libyan Fort.

British bombers, harassing Italian operations in North Africa, attacked military objectives in the Giarabub area of Libya, scoring many direct hits, British headquarters announced tonight.

Giarabub, near Egypt, is about 200 miles inland from the Mediterranean. British pilots attacked the Italian fort there and a motorized concentration 25 miles north.

Many fires and explosions followed the attack on the transports, the British said.

Shoot Down 3 Italian Planes.

One Italian plane was shot down and the British lost one plane.

Only slight damage resulted from an Italian air raid on the British Island of Malta, the communique said, and two Italian planes were shot down.

British headquarters disclosed that several French soldiers who came here to continue the war after France collapsed were serving against the Italian offensive. A "large French reserve" also is being trained in Egypt.

Say Egypt Need Not Fight.

The newspaper Al Azima today said Egypt has not declared war on Italy, whose troops have driven a 60 mile spearhead into her western desert, because the "overwhelming superiority of the allied [British] forces over the invaders leaves no doubt as to the result."

The newspaper Messawar said military experts believe that, by not declaring war until Egyptian objectives are attacked, Egypt would be more fully prepared to take a full share of the war burden. The Italian advance, Messawar said, could not be considered as a menace and had been expected for six months.

Raided Malta, say Italians.

ROME, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Italian high command today reported Italian planes raided airports on the British island of Malta and presumably shot down two planes which counterattacked them. The Italians also said British flyers raided Garnulgrein and Jarabub, but that two planes were shot down and three others "probably shot down." In East Africa, an English raid with motor trucks in the Kassala was reported repulsed and enemy defense works bombed.

RUMANIA DETAINS 14 LEADERS OF FORMER KING CAROL'S REGIME

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 28 (AP).—Five generals and nine politicians who helped former King Carol rule Rumania were held tonight under police guard in their homes as the pro-Fascist Iron Guard government sought evidence of their alleged abuse of power and mishandling of public funds.

Gen. George Argesanu.

Gen. George Argesanu former premier who succeeded the assassinated Armand Calinescu, headed the list. Several thousand Iron Guardists were executed following Calinescu's death and today's arrests were seen as a reprisal against those in office then.

Foreign Minister Prince Costin Sturza issued a statement that Rumania was aligned with the axis powers. "Every other political connection near or far now automatically falls to the ground," it said. The statement followed reports that Rumania was withdrawing from the Balkan entente.

FRANCE SEIZES EX-MINISTER; FIVE COUNCILS OUSTED

VICHY, France, Sept. 28 (AP).—The administrative arrest of ex-Senator Abraham Schrameck, former minister of the interior, was announced today, simultaneously with a decree suspending five municipal councils "for the duration of hostilities."

Schrameck, who was a Radical Socialist senator from Marseilles, was confined at Pellevoisin. He was interior minister in the Painleve cabinet in 1925.

The decree suspending the five municipal councils brings to 13 the total of local governments discontinued by the Petain government.

A 'NIGHTMARE': 20,000 HUDDLED IN BOMB REFUGE

Writer Visits Shelter in London's East End.

BY J. NORMAN LODGE.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP).—It is hard to believe human beings take shelter in some of the poor East End's "Nightmare Arches" and storage depots which they use in a nightly flight from death. Even after seeing these places, and smelling them, it is hard to believe.

In cold, clammy, dingy hovels, thousands of London's East Enders huddle on single blankets on bumpy paving bricks and try to keep out of drafty gusts until daylight chases away the German air invaders.

People are admitted only after 5 p. m. for the night's respite from bombs, but admittance during the day is allowed for the duration of a raid. There is a scurry to be the first out, just as there is to be in line when the raids are coming.

20,000 in One Refuge.

I visited one shelter which accommodates 20,000 East Enders during the second air raid today. With me was a metropolitan policeman who attended the New York world's fair last year, and he repeatedly pointed out the difference between his surroundings then and now.

The shelter was a huge vault. There was no cleaning or disinfecting. What are known as "tube" or "shelter throats" were prevalent and coughing was almost continuous. Expectoration was frequent, and the shelter seemed a perfect breeding place for disease.

Some effort had been made to serve tea, but the metal pots in which the beverage is brewed are not easily washed when a raid is in progress. Water has to be fetched and if one goes for it one loses one's place.

In this colossal structure, where thousands have spent night after night without a change of clothing since the first mass visit of the German air force three weeks ago, were strewn dirty blankets and coverings.

A litter of dirt had been swept out of the way into nooks and corners to accommodate every kind of deck chair, stool and seat. Hastily erected composition board screens concealed the crude toilet facilities.

Ruins All Around.

Dingy little eight candle power bulbs provided the only light. Luckily smoking was not permitted. Cockneys mingled with Indians and Negroes. But as one shelter-denizen told me, "Who cares about little things like this? It's life we are seeking to keep."

Outside, one gets a view of the reasons why thousands flock to such quarters. In many blocks stand nothing but ruins, windowless and roofless buildings, the streets strewn with broken glass, furniture and masonry. The people cannot live in such places.

The government is taking steps to do away with or vastly improve the shelters in this section. The fall of France and Germany's occupation of the channel coast enabled the Nazis to conduct all-night raids. This emphasized the inadequate quality of the shelters, originally provided with the idea they would be needed only for short alarms.

REPORT FRENCH RAIDS KILLED 44 AT GIBRALTAR

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 28 (AP).—Radio Nacional today said reports reaching Algeciras indicated today that 44 persons were killed in the French bombings of Gibraltar this week. The reports said one of the dead was the aid to Vice Admiral Sir Dudley North. Another agency claimed receipt of "private advices" that more than 200 persons were killed.

BRITONS DEMAND RESIGNATION OF M. P. IN HONOLULU

Capt. A. S. Cunningham-Reid.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Conservative party organization of the parliamentary district of St. Marylebone called today for the resignation of Capt. A. S. Cunningham-Reid, who is in Honolulu. Cunningham-Reid, whose Honolulu visit to Doris Duke Cromwell, the tobacco heiress, has been the subject of parliamentary questions, was given two months "to defend his position." Qualified sources said Cunningham-Reid went to Honolulu in connection with the heiress' plan for removing English children from the war zone and that dissatisfaction evidently arose over his failure to return to England immediately to represent his constituency.

Two Visits to Honolulu.

HONOLULU, Sept. 28 (AP).—Capt. A. S. Cunningham-Reid, whose resignation from the English parliament was demanded by the Conservative party in his district, has visited Honolulu twice in connection with the plan for removing English children from the war zone. On both visits he stopped at the home of Doris Duke Cromwell. After his last visit here, about a month ago, he left his two children in a school here.

CANADA OUSTS K. P. WOE FROM SOLDIER'S LIFE

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 28 (AP).—The K. P. woes of a soldier's life, which include helping the cooks and washing dishes as members of the kitchen police detail, will be removed for men called up for 30 day training periods, starting Oct. 9, under the Canadian mobilization act. Permanent staffs are to look after the kitchen duties. "We are anxious that the men concentrate on military training," a defense headquarters officer said today.

NEW FIRES LIGHT LONDON AS NAZIS CONTINUE RAIDS

British Strike Back with Blows at Bases.

LONDON, Sept. 29, Sunday.—Flares and incendiary bombs hurled by pace setting German air raiders guided other Nazi planes to their targets in London early today in the fourth week of unrelenting assault aimed at knocking out Britain.

Three small fires burned as bright beacons below the flashes of exploding antiaircraft shells in the skies over the capital. Firemen extinguished the flames after 15 minutes, but the raids went on.

British bombers counterattacked furiously at German bases across the channel along the French coast. Observers on Dover's cliffs saw hundreds of bursting explosions in almost an unbroken line along the French side. A cold, northwesterly wind was blowing across the strait and the sea was choppy.

Use Heavier Explosives.

The flashes were bigger than anything previously seen and indicated more and heavier explosives were being used by the British in an attempt to annihilate Nazi forces which have dug in on the coast.

Some of the invaders flew to within a few hundred feet of the ground. Other bombers at the same time were attacking along the southeast coast.

Before the Saturday night raids began Germany's ever returning warplanes had forced the capital's populace into underground shelters twice, once in the morning and again in the afternoon.

The midmorning alarm came after a night of recurring raids which left new ruins smouldering in London and in other English, Welsh, and Scottish towns.

Fire French Port.

Just as thousands of Londoners were starting for the countryside with visions of rest and uninterrupted sleep this afternoon the second alarm shrilled out.

In yesterday's daytime fighting a communique of the air ministry and ministry of home security said six enemy aircraft were known definitely to have been destroyed with seven British fighters missing.

Along with the destruction of 133 Nazi planes on Friday, the air ministry reported that buildings, warehouses and lumber yards were set aflame in a three hour bombardment by British bombers of a "new invasion" base at Lorient, Atlantic port in the Nazi occupied zone of France. Continued raids on channel ports and the bombing of a large munitions works in Dusseldorf, Germany, and railroad yards at Hamm and Mannheim, also were reported.

Town Cleared Out After Nazis Drop 4 Time Bombs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

IN THE DOVER AREA OF ENGLAND, Sept. 28.—A nearby southeast coast town was hurriedly vacated this afternoon when four delayed action bombs were dropped by a German raider. Hardly had the area been cleared when one of the bombs exploded.

Wedding Planned

[Acme Photo.]

BINNIE BARNES.

And after that it's to be a family.

The British actress is to become "mother" to two nieces and a nephew for the duration of the war in Europe. And when the trio arrives, they'll greet a sister who has been in Hollywood four years.

Rosette, 15, is the one who's here. Miss Barnes has sent money for passage for Joan, 12; Edna, 9, and Joseph, 4.

Until last night, Binnie wasn't sure just when her wedding was coming off. A Sunday afternoon ceremony was spoiled when the Los Angeles baseball club won its way into the Pacific Coast league playoff. Mike Frankovitch, the bridegroom-to-be, is the club's radio announcer. When Binnie heard she'd go to work in a new picture Monday, they decided on a midnight ceremony tonight at the home of Film Comic Joe E. Brown.

DOVE OF PEACE DISCOVERS HATE; IT'S BOMB RAIDS

Some of Berlin Zoo's Beasts Enjoy Them.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—Peace loving animals and birds dislike air raids as much as peace loving humans. That was established in the Berlin zoo.

Pigeons, symbols of peace thru their membership in the dove family, nearly die of fright during air raids and baby pigeons are found dead beneath the nests, but scrappers like the lions, tigers and leopards appear to have no concern, crocodiles and alligators grunt excitedly.

Two Theories on Pigeons.

Zoo wardens are divided in their opinion about what happens in the pigeon family during the raids. Some believe the mothers are so terrified that they flap their wings wildly, killing their young, and hurling them from the nests, or that the young are pushed out of the nests in the excitement and fall to their death.

During the first raid here the elephants were quite excited, especially because one of the baby elephants was much upset. The warden succeeded in calming the baby elephant and the others then decided to take matters calmly.

Rhinoceros Has a Thick Skin.

The bears show evidence of fear, while the rhinoceros displays utter unconcern. Monkeys dislike the raids but bear them well, except the baboons. It takes a baboon almost a day to recover from a night raid.

2 RAID ALARMS SEND BERLIN TO CHILLY SHELTERS

Defenders Fire at Planes Near Capital.

BERLIN, Sept. 29, Sunday (AP).—Millions of Berliners spent two hours and 10 minutes in chilly air raid shelters early today due to two air alarms.

The first, after midnight, lasted one hour and 42 minutes; the second, which soon followed, lasted 28 minutes. Only one antiaircraft gun was heard firing in the city itself, and no planes or bomb explosions were heard. Antiaircraft guns on the city's outskirts were more active.

Germans said the raids apparently were intended to drive the population to the cellars, which are becoming chilly as the northern autumn advances. Nevertheless, regulations requiring citizens to take cover are being enforced rigidly.

Refute Raid Damage.

The raids were the first in two days and came after German officials conducted foreign newspapermen to industrial plants and Tempelhof airdrome to refute British claims that they had been damaged by bombs.

The five hour tour yesterday included the Siemens company, makers of communications and armaments material, covering 10,000 acres. An explosive bomb had struck a wood storage plant there and an incendiary bomb fell in the gardens, but no other damage was visible.

The management of the Borsig Rhine metal works, about the same size as the Siemens plant, said only one flare and 15 incendiary "leaflets" had been found following a British raid. No craters on runways or field and no damage to buildings could be observed at Tempelhof airdrome.

Report Damage in Britain.

The greatest devastation yet done by German bombers in England, however, was reported by German military quarters. Fresh flames were springing from the battered East India docks and the west end power station in London, they said, adding that 23 British planes yesterday and 101 Friday were destroyed, compared with one German plane yesterday and 38 Friday.

Docks, factories, power plants, gas works and troop camps were reported hit in London, Birmingham, Liverpool and other places in south and central England. The Silverton docks in London were said to have received especially heavy damage. "Extended blazes and heavy explosions indicated success everywhere," said a high command communique.

A plane fuselage plant at Birmingham was said to have been pelted in its center with explosives from 1,200 feet.

NAZIS SAY CANADIANS DISREGARDED NEUTRAL ZONE TO SEIZE SHIP

BERLIN, Sept. 28 (AP).—The capture of the German ship Weser off Mexico by the Canadian vessel Prince Robert was described tonight by DNB, the official German news agency, as "an act of war" in complete disregard of the American safety [neutrality] zone. It will be interesting," the agency added, "to observe whether and how the American states react to this new violation by the British of the safety zone proclaimed by them."

Mexico to Probe Seizure.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Sept. 28.—The circumstances surrounding seizure of the German freighter Weser off Mexico Thursday are being investigated by the Mexican government with a view to possible protest by the 21 American republics on the infringement by a Canadian war vessel of the 300-mile safety zone established by the Panama declaration.

REPATRIATION OF BESSARABIAN GERMANS BEGINS

GALATI, Rumania, Sept. 28.—In this Danubian port one meets uniformed Germans at every turn. The streets are jammed with motorcycles and automobiles bearing the Nazi emblem. All are part of the organization which is supervising the transportation of 90,000 Germans from Bessarabia to the Reich.

The repatriation process got under way Thursday with Galati as the central loading point. Uniformed Germans have converted the former military airfield into a huge camp where 25,000 persons, 6,000 vehicles, and 12,000 horses are sheltered.

A large number of emigrants will spend the winter in southern Austria and be resettled in the spring.

CHURCHILL HAILS RAF'S DESTRUCTION OF 133 NAZI PLANES IN DAY

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill today hailed the destruction of 133 German planes yesterday as a "third great and victorious day" for the royal air force.

In a message to the fighter command of the R. A. F. Churchill said "the scale and intensity of the fighting, and the heavy losses of the enemy, especially in relation to our own [34 planes], make Sept. 27 rank with Sept. 15 and Aug. 15 as a third great and victorious day of the fighter command during the course of the battle of Britain."

FUGITIVES POUR INTO BRAZIL FROM FRENCH PRISONS

Supplies Cut Off, Felons in Colonies 'Starve.'

BY ANTHONY PATRIC.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELEM, State of Para, Brazil, Sept. 28.—Authorities of the state of Para are being confronted with a serious influx of escaped prisoners from the French penal colonies of St. Laurent and Cayenne, French Guiana. Felons reaching this city report their escape has even been facilitated by their guards because, since the Franco-German armistice, the prison colonies have been cut off from the Vichy government and no supplies have been received for the thousands of convicts.

Recent arrivals from the camps report that conditions at St. Laurent were horrible and that the nearly 5,000 convicts there were on the verge of starvation because of the lack of supplies. Prisoners who had been discharged were said to be faring even worse, because trade in French Guiana had vanished, taking with it the jobs they had been able to obtain with merchants and agriculturists.

Seek to Fight for Britain.

Riots are said to be taking place daily among the felons and "liberes" [discharged convicts], all of whom want to be turned over to the authorities of British or Dutch Guiana, preferring to fight for Britain rather than starve under the French flag at Cayenne.

It is reported that conditions at Devil's Island are even worse and almost certain death is awaiting the prisoners there because of the lack of supplies and the fact that escape from the island is almost impossible.

Until a few years ago Belem was a haven for the fugitives who, after fleeing the well guarded prisons, made perilous journeys on obscure Brazilian trading vessels, the captains of which blackmailed them of all their money on the threat of turning them over to the authorities or landing them on a deserted island. The convicts who made their way here were allowed to stay because, on the whole, they behaved and worked for their living. Prior to the defeat of France, Belem had a colony of about 250 escaped prisoners.

Some Said to Be Prosperous.

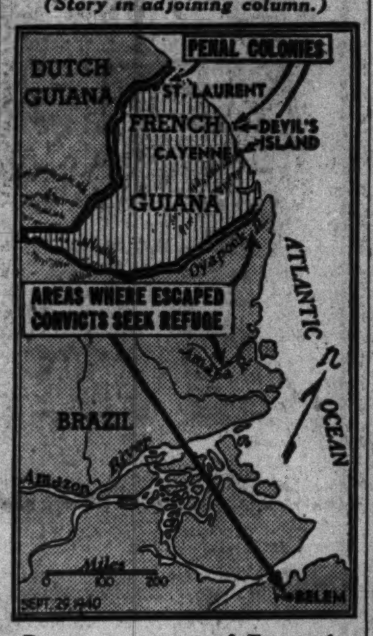
Most of the fugitives worked in small garages, machine repair shops, or furniture factories, and a few were reputed to be prosperous. A kind of unwritten law prevailed in the colony to keep it in the good graces of the police. When a member of the colony did not behave, he merely disappeared. It was presumed the colony had ordered him to leave or had taken even more drastic steps to keep the whole colony from being deported or returned to prison by the Brazilian authorites.

The Franco-German armistice, however, turned the situation into alarming proportions. Since the beginning of July great numbers of fugitives have arrived at Belem and other communities on the Oyapock and Amapa rivers. Police and state authorities found themselves at a loss in the face of the gerat influx of such undesirables who, according to the 1934 immigration law officially are denied admission into Brazil.

Para authorities, in the face of the impossibility of returning the felons to Cayenne, established concentration camps in the Amapa district, to which all newly arrived convicts are being sent. However, those who have been in Para for several years and have been able to prove that they work honestly and behave have been allowed to remain free.

War Hits Brazil

(Story in adjoining column.)



Because conquest of France has cut off supplies of French penal colonies, the influx of escaped convicts has become a grave problem in nearby state in Brazil.

KEEP ARMS UNTIL U. S. IS SUPPLIED, VETERANS URGE

The Illinois department of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War yesterday adopted a resolution supporting "the government program for adequate defense of our country and rearmament of our combat forces."

It recommended, however, that all military equipment be kept within the shores of continental United States until an army of a million men is fully supplied.

The resolution, passed during a session of the department's convention, was signed by Harvey Walker, chairman of the resolutions committee.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (AP).—The crew of a British bomber, which drifted for 84 hours in a rubber dingy on the North sea, were reported by the air ministry today to have been saved by planes and warships.

ARMY TRAINEES WILL GET GOOD CARE—GEN. FORD

The army will provide adequate shelters, hospitals, and sanitation facilities for the men selected for a year's military training under the conscription law. This assurance was given here yesterday by Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, 2d army commander.

"The folks at home," said Gen. Ford, "may be assured that their young men will be well cared for. It is believed that in later years the men who will have been selected for this training will look back on their year in the army as one of the most instructive, interesting, and valuable periods of their growth and development."

Gen. Ford also emphasized that the army is determined to select the right jobs for trainees on the basis of their previous experience. Proper consideration of qualifications of 1917-'18 draftees was largely ignored, he said.

TWO GUARD UNITS MOVE INTO NEW CHICAGO ARMORY

The new northwest armory housing three Chicago units of the Illinois guard is expected to be dedicated within the next 10 days, the state armory board announced yesterday. Finishing touches are being added to the building's interior. The armory is located at Kedzie and North avenues in Humboldt park and is the largest in the state. Two of the three units which will occupy the building already have moved in. They are the 108th quartermaster regiment and the 33d division special troops. The 108th medical regiment is expected to move into the new armory by tomorrow from its old quarters at 1339 Diversey avenue.

ARMY RECRUITING RECORD SET; 298 ENLIST IN 6 DAYS

A new recruiting record for any week since the drive began June 20 was reported yesterday by Lieut. Col. Edward F. Shaifer, army recruiting officer for the Chicago area. Col. Shaifer said that 298 men were enrolled in the six days ended yesterday, bring the month's total to 932. Col. Shaifer said that another 50 recruits probably would be enrolled tomorrow, bringing the month's figure to 982 for a new monthly record. About a third of those enlisting want to enter the air corps, Col. Shaifer said.

BOTH PARTIES FACE SENATE INQUIRY ON CAMPAIGN FINANCING

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—Representatives of the Democratic and Republican national committees will be asked to appear before the senate campaign committee next Friday to discuss the question of financialy limitations on campaign costs imposed by the Hatch act.

Announcing this tonight, Chairman Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.] of the senate committee, said, "It's my belief that the federal law now fixes an absolute limit of $3,000,000 on both collections and outlays."

Under this interpretation, Senator Gillette said that if a committee had an old deficit of $500,000 and collected funds and paid this off, that it would be limited to $2,500,000 for the present campaign.

Some other senators are known to regard the $3,000,000 limitation as applying only to expenditures on the Presidential campaigns now in progress. Some lawyers have contended that each national organization formed to support a Presidential candidate has a separate limit of $3,000,000.

ROOSEVELT PUTS ON A WAR SHOW FOR DIPLOMATS

'Surprises' Them with Air Demonstration.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28.—Reminiscent of European war displays, President Roosevelt today paraded hundreds of warplanes before foreign diplomats.

Representatives of Germany, Italy, and Japan were among those invited to attend ceremonies in connection with a cornerstone laying at the new $12,500,000 Washington airpart. They had been told only that Mr. Roosevelt would make an address and that some transport planes would land.

But they had no more than settled into their seats when from all directions came roaring flights of army and navy warplanes. Officials said there were 240 army planes and 168 navy and marine craft. The President, smiling, observed that he had staged a "surprise party."

"Flexing of Muscles."

Fighting craft were but a portion of the air strength represented. To give the demonstration a more impressive size, training planes and commercial craft were added to the massed flight.

Mr. Roosevelt himself referred to it as representing only "in a small way the power we must ultimately have."

Altho Mr. Roosevelt did not mention Germany, Italy, and Japan in his address, he was apparently aiming at the totalitarian states when he described the demonstration as "a gratifying flexing of the kind of fighting muscle democracy can and does produce."

Symbolic of Defense Drive.

"Well done! The commander in chief's compliments and thanks to all hands," the President radioed to the pilots as they went overhead and he began his speech, in which he said that the demonstration was symbolic of the nation's determination to build up its defenses to a security guarantee.

"They are here on a peaceful mission," he said of the participating pilots. "We all hope that their missions will always be in the ways of peace.

"We shall strive with all our energies and skills to see to it that they are never called upon for missions of war. But the more of them we have, the less likely are we to be attacked from abroad."

Ahead of Time

Sister Superior Rosaria of St. Vincent's orphanage holds little Joseph, 2 years old, so he can push the clock back an hour. The ceremony took place yesterday, because the children would not be up at 2 a. m. to perform the duty.

If you arrive an hour early at all functions today it's probably because you forgot to set your clock back an hour before you retired last night. Chicago and many nearby communities returned to central standard time at 2 o'clock this morning after a summer of conserving sunlight.

Since daylight saving time went into effect April 28, Chicagoans have gained 154 extra hours of daylight. The change to standard time has been observed by the suburban trains and by those in charge of the control clocks at Western Union, Postal Telegraph, and the Illinois Bell Telephone company.

Winter time will be effective tomorrow in the securities and commodities markets. Most thru trains, airplanes and buses operated on standard time during the summer.

DEMOCRATS OPEN WILLKIE OFFICES IN LAKE COUNTY

Jack H. Hoff, Waukegan real estate dealer and former member of the Lake county Democratic central committee, announced yesterday that headquarters for the county's Democratic Willkie-Green-Brooks club had been established in the Citizens National bank building in Waukegan.

Hoff resigned from the county central committee last spring to run for state representative on the ticket headed by Lieut. Gov. John Stelle for governor. He was defeated, but received more than 9,000 votes.

"We believe that at least 5,000 Lake county Democrats will vote against a third term, dictatorship and the Kelly-Nash-Nudelman machine," Hoff said. "We are still Democrats and are paying our own campaign expenses."

CENSUS OF ALL 'FIFTH COLUMN' SUSPECTS ORDERED IN URUGUAY

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 28 (AP).—Interior Minister Pedro Manini Rios today ordered a census of all residents suspected of "fifth column" activities and warned police officials that emergencies may arise.

Authorities sought the local correspondent of the Cremona, Italy, newspaper Regime Fascista to expell him because of an attack made by his paper on this country.

CONVENTION ROW FOLLOWS PLEA FOR ROOSEVELT

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Wild disorder, heightened by fisticuffs between members of the right and left wing groups, broke out at mention of President Roosevelt's name today, scarcely five minutes after the opening of the second annual state convention of the American Labor party.

The demonstration, quickly quelled by police, came when Luigi Antonini, state chairman and leader of the right wing faction supporting Mr. Roosevelt as the party's choice for Presidential candidate, walked to the rostrum amid scattered cheers and boos and said:

"I am confident that the American Labor party today will make an important decision—the decision to support President Roosevelt and the New Deal."

The left wing "progressive" faction, led by Morris Watson and Eugene P. Connolly, New York county chairman, have opposed the party's proposed nomination of Mr. Roosevelt.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The skins in any one of these coats at present market prices would have to cost $35 to $50 more. Don't wait until that happens.

Russeks Marylin Fur Coats at $195

These are extraordinary coats at $195. That isn't cross or pieced Persian Lamb—but full-sized, nicely curled Jet Black skins. That isn't dyed, singey Skunk but vibrant, natural tipped skins—nor is there anything skimpy about those full sleeves, that sweeping back. The grey Persian is made of fine imported skins, despite the fact that these have become extremely difficult to get. The sable-blended Muskrat is Northern Muskrat—and even then we have discarded all but the finer backs of the skins. And finally, this is central Madrid Raccoon, the finest obtainable. And although most Raccoon coats at this price have a mere seventeen or eighteen stripes—each one of these has a full twenty-five stripes! We repeat, these are extraordinary coats at $195.

42 COUPLES GIVE GOLDEN WEDDING HAPPINESS TIPS

Laughter and Tolerance Lead Suggestions.

"Have a family, the bigger the better."

"Go to church regularly, and practice what you preach."

"If you don't dance, and your wife does, let her."

These rules for happy married life were provided yesterday by experts, 42 couples, all married 50 years or more, who held a reunion in the Stevens hotel.

Some of the rules they expressed with sage humor thru the microphone as they took time out between singing song hits of fifty years ago and applauding the winners of a grandmothers' beauty contest. Other rules were indicated in the statistics they exchanged on hobbies and habits, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Golden Band's First Convention.

It was the first convention of the National Golden Wedding Band, recently organized by Mrs. Wilbur Glenn Voliva of Zion. "Life Begins at 70" is its slogan. All the couples were from the Chicago area.

I. Washington Cranmer, a veteran of the old Chautauqua circuit, who at 88 still lectures and writes verse, gave the tip on dancing.

"I never danced in my life," Mr. Cranmer told the assembled couples. "But my wife loved it, so so I said, 'Go ahead!'"

Mrs. Cranmer demonstrated rule No. 1 by laughing appreciatively at her husband's remark. Then she contributed another suggestion: "My father held family prayers every night before we went to bed—I've never forgotten them."

Two Couples Wed 65 Years.

The Cranmers, Chicagoans for 48 years, started married life teaching school together. They have 5 children, 10 grandchildren, and 4 great-grandchildren. They shared with Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace of Zion the honor of being the longest married couples present. Both couples have been married 65 years.

The Wallaces, however, could boast of the largest number of children of any couple present—19.

Mr. and Mrs. Mole of Zion, married 57 years ago in England, reported that his sister and his four brothers all have celebrated golden wedding anniversaries.

Judge Sabath Speaks.

Emil A. C. W. Johnson, former Chicago legislator, presided. He and his wife have been married 52 years. Judge Joseph Sabath, principal speaker, and Mrs. Sabath, were among the "youngsters" present. They were married in 1888 at Kenosha, Wis.

Mrs. Sabath, Mrs. Erick Erickson, Mrs. John O'Connell, Mrs. Chester Bard, Mrs. R. A. Cochran, Mrs. H. A. Wiche, and Mrs. Matthew Thompson won the grandmothers' beauty contest. Edgar Nelson, general choral director of the Chicagoland Music festival, led the singing.

TWO TAVERNS ROBBED

Four bandits obtained $400 early yesterday in two tavern holdups. The robbers took $245 from Anthony Samoska and two patrons in Samoska's tavern at 2656 West 69th street. They took $155 a short time afterward from Fred Frediani and a score of patrons in Frediani's tavern at 1520 North Lorel avenue.

Parks Hold Dog Show

William Hill and his dog, Rex, winner of first place in tricks contest at show sponsored by park district.

Devora Miselman and his entry, Prince Oriole.

A 4 month old Boston terrier, answering to the name of Jeeves Boke, was chosen king of Chicago's dogdom yesterday. The selection was made in the finals of the park district's dog contest at Waveland field, Sheridan road and Waveland avenue. The contest climaxed national dog week in Chicago.

Jeeves, the grand champion, belonged to Jean Nitsche, 11 years old, of 4929 Karlov avenue, who was named the best informed owner in the show. Other owners with winning dogs were William Hill, 3849 West 63d place, who showed the best trick dog; Robert McKay, 5920 Rice street, who exhibited the best groomed dog; Eugene Britt, 7125 Perry avenue, who entered the best behaved dog, and Anna Lavin, 5200 Kimbark avenue, who had the best pet dog in the show.

Special guest at the show was Peanuts, just a dog, who saved the lives of 11 persons last Monday in a fire at 2959 North Pulaski road.

WILLIS LASHES SABER RATTLING BY NEW DEALERS

'Blustering' Called Alibi for Domestic Failures.

Richmond, Ind., Sept. 28 [Special].—America is being led along the road to war by New Deal sabre rattling, Raymond E. Willis, Republican candidate for senator, charged in a speech tonight before a large audience in the Richmond coliseum.

He struck at what he termed the tendency of the New Deal to create war scares and emergencies to detract attention from its failure to solve domestic problems, "smoke screens to fog the vision of a people becoming restless under the load of New Deal failures."

"Mussolini did it in Italy," Willis declared. "Stalin did it in Russia and Hitler did it in Germany. They blustered at their neighbors and grumbled across their frontiers. Their original intention was to create a spirit of national unity in their own countries and detract the attention of their subject from their loss of liberty and opportunities under dictatorship authority.

The Chicago Bluster.

"Do you recall how Mr. Roosevelt stood at Chicago in 1937 and blustered about quarantining the aggressor nations of Europe and Asia? Do you recall the reports from the White House about submarines off the coast of Florida?

"Do you recall the meddling in the European squabble at Munich? Do you recall the 'stab in the back' epithet that was hurled at Italy? I know you recall the recent sale of 50 ships from our navy to a belligerent power without either knowledge or consent of congress.

"All this, mind you, when there has not been one finger raised against the United States by any European power."

Turn, Before It's Too Late.!

Willis said it was his paramount desire to reverse the path the country is following, to turn around and go back the other way before it is too late to save the nation's manhood from the fate that befell thousands of young men in 1917 and 1918.

And even closer to his heart, he said, is the redemption of America from the army of Reds, anarchists, and traitors boring from within.

"They have permeated every walk of life," the Republican leader asserted. "They are in our colleges and universities. They are in the professions. They find positions in key defense industries. They even hold important positions in the government itself.

"The record of the Dies committee discloses that more than 3,000 known communists are on the federal pay roll—and not one move has been made to dislodge them."

DINNER WILL OPEN COMMUNITY FUND DRIVE THURSDAY

The 1940 Community Fund drive will open Thursday night in the Stevens hotel with a dinner for the 2,000 or more industrial group chairmen and team captains. The goal has been set at $3,604,000.

George A. Ranney, chairman of the board of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, is president of the fund; Merle J. Trees, vice president of the Chicago Bridge and Iron company, is 1940 campaign chairman, and Champ Carry, vice president of the Pullman company, is industrial division chairman.

Harold H. Swift, sponsor division chairman, said yesterday that corporations contributed $1,515,945, or 41 per cent of the $3,611,000 subscribed in 1939, and would give as much or more this year.

2 NEW WEAPONS GIVEN TESTS BY ARMY EXPERTS

emi-Automatic Rifle and Tommy Gun Fired.

BY HAROLD HUTCHINGS.

Expert riflemen and gunners of the Fort Sheridan garrison yesterday gave a demonstration with two of the army's most modern weapons—the Garand rifle and the Thompson submachine gun.

The firing, accomplished on the rifle range at the post, presented graphic evidence that the Thompson submachine gun is unexcelled for close in defense and that the Garand semiautomatic rifle is capable of accurate, deadly fire at the rate of 30 shots a minute.

The rate of fire of the old Springfield rifle, which the Garand replaces, was about 10 shots a minute. In both cases the rate is based on what the army calls "aimed shots" as compared with the dispersing fire of automatic weapons. The tests were carried out at various ranges and at various speeds.

Results of Tests.

Here are the results: submachine gun at 75 yards—a clip of 20 bullets was fired in single shots. All 20 were hits. Submachine gun at 75 yards—a drum of 50 shots was fired in bursts of two or three. There were 16 hits, and the gun jammed twice, which officers said was the result of faulty ammunition.

Submachine gun at 25 yards—a drum of 50 shells was fired in bursts of five or six, as rapidly as the gunner could fire them with some care for his aim. There were 40 hits, which officers cited as positive proof that this weapon has deadly effect at this close range, which they said is the range at which the army expects the weapon to be used.

Submachine gun at 25 yards—a clip of 20 shells were fired in bursts at a target which was moved back and forth at the speed of a walking man. There were 12 hits.

Bullets Sprayed in Bursts.

Submachine gun shot from the hip, with the stock of the weapon removed—this was not fired at a target and no record was made, but the muzzle was swept back and forth slowly to show how a spray of deadly bullets can be fired in bursts of three to six against surprise targets which spring up unexpectedly, like a platoon of soldiers which might appear at the side of a road.

Garand semiautomatic rifle at 75 yards—a clip of eight shots was fired singly at slow fire, in other words, the rifleman took careful aim with each shot. All shots hit the target in a compact group, which denoted excellent shooting. Officers remarked, however, that this was easy for the Garand, saying it is accurate up to 600 yards.

Garand at 75 yards—two clips of eight shots each were fired in rapid fire, in other words as rapidly as the rifleman could aim and pull the trigger for each shot. T reehstslutwab ger for each shot. The result was that 16 rounds were fired in 32 seconds, with 15 of them on the target.

'Tommy' Will Fire Constantly.

Sgt. Raymond Janz of the 14th Cavalry fired the Thompson gun, and Corp Leonard Janosky fired the Garand. The "Tommy" gun is called an automatic weapon, because it will fire continuously until all the shells are expended if the trigger is held down that long. It also can be fired as a semiautomatic weapon, with each shot fired by pulling the trigger for each shot.

The Garand is a semiautomatic weapon—it shoots only when the trigger is pulled. Its semiautomatic characteristics come from the fact that the recoil mechanism ejects the spent shell and jams a new one into the breach with each shot. With the old Springfield the rifleman ejected each spent shell by pulling a bolt back and forth.

The Thompson shoots the .45 caliber bullet, the same as the army's .45 caliber automatic pistol. This bullet has greater force when it hits a target than the .30 caliber bullet. The .45 pistol was adopted after experience showed that in combat a man often was hit with a .30 caliber bullet but kept right on going. The .45 bullet is capable of knocking a man down.

ARMY VIEWED IN ACTION

Thousands of civilian visitors at Fort Sheridan this week-end are seeing a graphic picture of how the army fights.

The firing spectacle and a dozen other exhibitions of how the army trains, lives, and fights are being presented in a series of military shows organized and staged by soldiers of the regular army. There were matinée and evening performances both Friday and yesterday, and the final performances will be given at 2:30 p. m. today and at 7 o'clock tonight. Between 10,000 and 12,000 persons saw the performances yesterday.

Modern Army in Action.

Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, commander of Fort Sheridan and of the 5th division, expressed gratification over the attendance.

"This is the largest show of its kind ever put on in the midwest," he said. "It affords citizens a rare chance to see a modern army with its blitzkrieg weapons and the defense against them, and to get a good idea of what is going on in Europe today."

Included in the exhibition is the firing of a 37 mm. and .50 caliber anti-tank weapons at a target towed in the lake and representing a moving tank.

There also is a demonstration of the new 81 mm. infantry mortar, whose projectiles, equipped with fins similar to those of an aerial bomb, blasted the target to pieces in the first show Friday afternoon.

The horse cavalry, which has a place in the army despite mechanization, also demonstrates how it goes into action rapidly.

A platoon rides along the shore to a selected position, the combatants dismount, and the horse holders [one man in every three] retire with the horses of the combatants. The latter quickly take position and in less than a minute 18 rifles and two .30 caliber machine guns are pouring lead into targets which simulate the enemy.

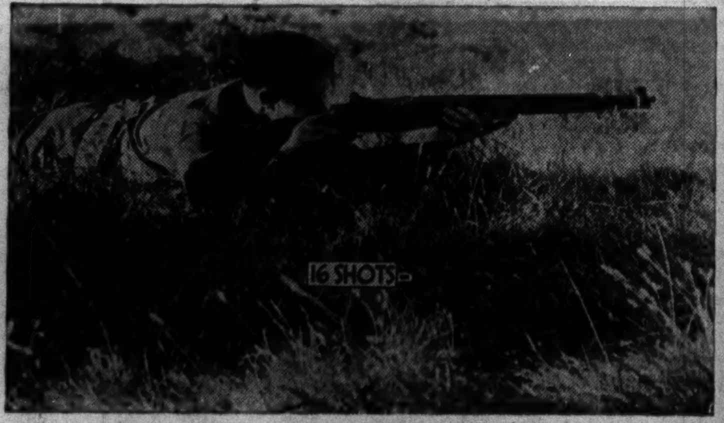
50 SHOTS
40 HITS

At a distance of 25 yards from his target, Sergt. Raymond Janz, at Fort Sheridan, yesterday fired a drum of 50 cartridges in a Thompson submachine gun and scored 40 hits. Four of the bullet holes are behind the hands of Lieut. M. W. Werve, examining the target.



Corporal Leonard Janosky, at 75 yards, fired a double clip of eight cartridges each with the new Garand automatic rifle. The shots were fired in 32 seconds.

Lieut. D. N. Hall counted 15 hits for Janosky. In some instances two or more bullets went thru the same hole.

WILLKIE CINCHES OREGON, LEADERS OF G. O. P. BELIEVE

Trip Increases Strength Held by McNary.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Portland, Ore., Sept. 28.—Wendell Willkie and Charles L. McNary probably will carry Senator McNary's home state — Oregon. Republican leaders say it is "in the bag"; the Democrats view it as a doubtful state.

The split in the Democratic party on the third term and on the radical policies of the New Deal, plus Senator McNary's hold on the farm vote are the principal factors in the apparent advantage of the Republicans in this far northwestern state with its 5 electoral votes.

Republicans are elated by the enthusiastic reception of Willkie by the people of Oregon in his recent passage thru the state and by the popular reaction to his public appearances and public utterances. He committed none of the blunders that worry political managers and he said the things that would be calculated to make votes for him in this region.

Turnout Exceeds McNary's.

To the astonishment of Republican leaders, the turnout of people to see and hear Willkie at Salem, McNary's home town, was double the number attracted to McNary's acceptance ceremony.

In his Portland speech Willkie harmonized his position on government development of electric power with that of Senator McNary to the satisfaction of the Republican leaders and apparently of the public generally. He accepted the New Deal water power developments as an accomplished fact and declared himself in favor of the distribution of the power in whatever manner local communities may choose. If they want public ownership of utilities, they should have it; and if they don't, it should not be forced upon them.

Voters Spurn Public Power.

This utterance pleased the vast majority of the residents of Portland, who had just defeated 2 to 1 an attempt to foist upon them a New Deal scheme to create a public agency which would buy out the two local electric power companies and proceed to distribute the power created by Bonneville dam. The Portland electorate spurned the plan as one that would have delivered the city into the grip of a bureaucratic dictatorship.

Here, as in every other community in the wake of the Republican nominee's political pilgrimage, one hears comment on the attractive Willkie personality, that Willkie makes a makes a friend of every person he meets, etc.

Organized labor is 90 per cent for Roosevelt, Republican leaders admit, tho unorganized labor is rated preponderantly favorable to Willkie.

Home Owners for Willkie.

Among workingmen who own their homes or have savings accounts, Republican workers report favorable reactions to Willkie arguments that the New Deal's antagonism to private enterprise is thwarting the increased production essential to the elimination of unemployment, that the New Deal's squandering and deficit financing are heading the country to inflation, repudiation and bankruptcy.

The Democratic managers are more worried over the farm vote this time than any other factor in the election. The reason is McNary's enormous popularity with the farmers. As a pioneer in the farm relief movement, the senator always has commanded the overwhelming support of the agricultural interests in Oregon. He was co-author of the McNary-Haugan bill, the first measure offered in congress designed to increase the returns from farming sufficiently to offset the disadvantage of the farmer, who buys his necessities in a tariff protected home market but is compelled to sell his produce in a free trade world market.

Blame Coolidge and Hoover.

Under the terms of the McNary-Haugen bill the farmers were to receive the proceeds of an "equalization fee" applied to the product to raise the domestic price above the world price. President Coolidge twice vetoed the bill, largely at the instance of Herbert Hoover, then secretary of commerce. The succeeding Hoover administration failed to afford the farmers the relief they sought. Altogether the Coolidge and Hoover farm policies cost the Republicans the farm vote and contributed vastly to the Roosevelt landslide of 1932.

The Republicans, in their Philadelphia platform, have indorsed the principle of the McNary-Haugen bill and have put its apostle on their ticket. Willkie has pledged the farmers to improve upon the present day farm subsidy system. The platform indicates that such improvement will take the direction of the equalization principle so long advocated by McNary, who as Vice President would be in a powerful position to get such legislation thru congress. This is the setup that is winning back thousands of Republican farmers who twice have voted for Roosevelt.

E. L. RYERSON JR. HEADS CITIZENS' DRIVE FOR GREEN

44 Join Committee to Clean Up State.

Edward L. Ryerson Jr., for years a prominent figure in public spirited activities in Chicago and Illinois, will head a new movement in support of Dwight H. Green, Republican nominee for governor. It is to be known as the Citizens' committee and the first meeting will be held at the Union League club tomorrow afternoon.

Included in the present list of members are 44 men and women, many of whose names have been closely identified with civic, patriotic, and social welfare work. Other members representing labor, parent-teacher and racial groups are to be added.

Will Be Nonpartisan.

Chairman Ryerson emphasized that the operations of the committee will be entirely along nonpartisan lines, that its purpose will be to present Green as the man who can erase the present political reputation of Chicago and destroy the power of the Democratic machine.

The members already announced are the following:

Arthur Anderson
Sewell L. Avery
Ralph A. Bard
W. McCormick Blair
George W. Blossom Jr.
Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen

Gen. R. E. Wood
Arthur H. Woodward

T. S. Youngsma

Charles F. Cutter will serve as secretary and treasurer of the committee.

"We cannot call ourselves vigilantes, because that term has been used to imply violence," said Chairman Ryerson, "but our purpose is to bring about a government under which we can live without misgiving. Clean politics is the life of democracy, but corrupt politics threatens our every activity.

Need Him for Cleanup.

"We need some one of Dwight Green's caliber to clean up the corrupt political situation in Illinois. He has shown that he is influenced by nothing beyond his own desire for clean government and the determination to achieve it.

"We shall present the true story of what citizens are up against. It is extremely important that every voter in Illinois does what he or she can do about it. The only way to insure the benefit of clean government is to go out and get it instead of just talking about it."

THE CAMPAIGN
Both Sides of it

REPUBLICAN

The Thing to Fear Is Fear!

BY CARLISLE BARGERON.

(Assigned by the Republican national committee.)

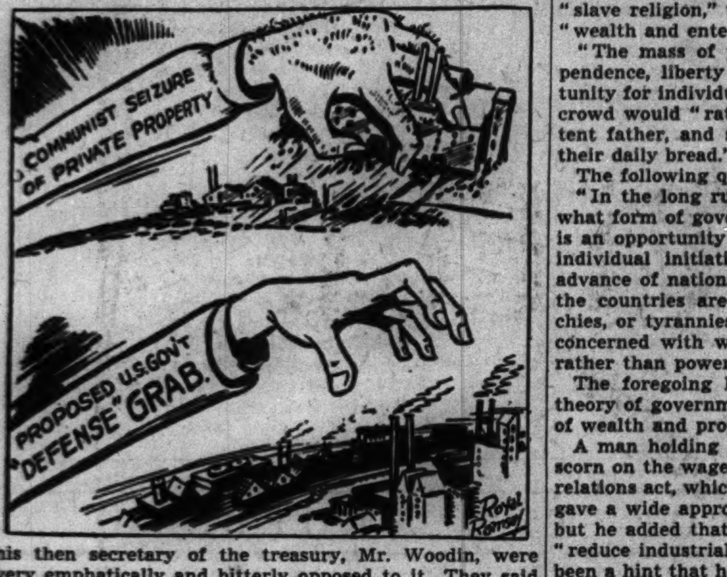
The New Dealers, in citing the achievements of their chief, list things with which he had nothing or very little to do, and, in turn, overlook those which are his real due. They insist upon crediting him with the act establishing the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation and guaranteeing bank deposits. The fact is that Republican Senator Arthur Vandenberg fathered this act and succeeded in passing it over Mr. Roosevelt's opposition. In his campaign of 1932, with the banking crisis moving on, Mr. Roosevelt wrote to an Ohio man:

"With reference to the federal government's guaranteeing deposits in all national banks, I believe that such action would be quite impossible. It would lead to laxity in bank management and carelessness on the part of both banker and depositor. I believe that it would be an impossible drain on the federal treasury to make good any such guarantee. For a number of reasons of sound government finance, such a plan would be quite dangerous."

Confirmation from Crowley.

Leo T. Crowley, New Deal chairman of the corporation, has frequently credited Senator Vandenberg with responsibility for the act. Democratic Senator Carter Glass said in the senate in 1935:

"When it was first proposed to establish the insurance of deposits fund the President of the United States and his then secretary of the treasury, Mr. Woodin, were very emphatically and bitterly opposed to it. They said they would not stand for it."



COMMUNIST SEIZURE OF PRIVATE PROPERTY
PROPOSED U.S. GOV'T "DEFENSE" GRAB.
Royal Ramsey

What the New Dealers should brag about, and it is passing strange that they never mention it, is the electrifying leadership which Mr. Roosevelt gave this country in the early days of his administration. No one who witnessed the scene can ever forget his standing there on the portico of the capitol on March 4 and saying:

"The only thing this country has to fear is fear itself."

He followed this with the dramatic closing of the banks. This was ACTION! In one fell swoop he gained the confidence of people and, what is more important, the people regained confidence in themselves.

It Was Mr. Hoover's Idea.

It was not known at the time, and it is just as well that it wasn't, that Mr. Hoover had sought to get Mr. Roosevelt to agree to the bank closing many weeks before. And millions of dollars would have been saved had he done so. Neither was it generally known that the little group of men who handled the banking crisis, who worked day and night to get the banks reopened and on a sound basis, were Republicans. To mention two—the late Ogden L. Mills and Arthur Ballantine.

DEMOCRATIC

Key to Willkie's Social Thinking.

(Supplied by the Democratic national commitee.)

The book on economics which Wendell Willkie singled out for lavish praise happens to be one of the most reactionary studies on social and economic problems published in recent times.

The book is "Capitalism, the Creator," by Carl Snyder, which the Republican nominee purchased in a Washington, D. C., book store before departing for his extended stay at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Willkie was so impressed that he invited the author to visit him during the period when he was preparing his campaign speeches. He called it the "most stimulating and provocative" work on the capitalistic system that he knew of.

Perhaps unconsciously Candidate Willkie was betraying his authentic viewpoint on social and economic problems, a viewpoint which contrasts strangely with his campaign indorsement of many, if not most, of the Roosevelt reform measures.

The entire tone of Snyder's book is in deep conflict with the social and humanitarian outlook on the problems created by mass production and the other by-products of present day industrial development.

A "Slave Religion."

Snyder has scant use for democracy as such, and even less use for the potential capacities of the average man. At one point he quotes, apparently with approval, the philosopher Nietzsche's dictum that Christianity is a "slave religion," the ethics of which are antagonistic to "wealth and enterprise." He says at another point:

"The mass of people, apparently, do not value independence, liberty of thought, freedom of action, opportunity for individual enterprise." He thinks also that the crowd would "rather submit to the rule of the omnipotent father, and seem content only if they are assured their daily bread."

The following quotation is from the book:

"In the long run it seems not to matter a great deal what form of government a people has provided if there is an opportunity for self-improvement and security for individual initiative. Over a long period the general advance of nations seems to be much the same whether the countries are empires, kingdoms, republics, oligarchies, or tyrannies. Provided always that the rulers are concerned with wealth rather than war, with progress rather than power."

The foregoing has a strong tint of the strong man theory of government—with emphasis on the acquisition of wealth and property.

A man holding such views would naturally look with scorn on the wages and hours act and the national labor relations act, which Mr. Snyder does in his book. Willkie gave a wide approval to these acts on his western tour, but he added that they should be administered so as to "reduce industrial strife, not foment it." This may have been a hint that he intends to modify them if he ascends to power.

"Paupers, Bread, and Circuses."

"Capitalism, the Creator" makes a few grudging concessions to the need for old age pensions, mostly on the ground that legislation of that character may have been necessary to head off more drastic pension schemes such as the Townsend plan. One of the chapters is headed "Paupers, Bread, and Circuses," and a subsection warns against the menace of relief on a scandalous scale. [General relief payments range from $5 a month to $47 a month per family. Earnings on WPA are $55 a month.]

The unemployed awaken small sympathy from the author, because he speaks of the "submerged tenth, or perhaps more, of the incapable, the inefficient, the morons, and the derelicts, who have existed in every society since the beginning of time. Never smaller, never less, than now."

Snyder believes that labor organization is apt to become pernicious and he thinks that in the long run unions do not help in raising wages. Why? Because, in the long run this conflicts with the "iron law" [his term] which he describes at various points in the book.

16 WOMEN BUILD A WILLKIE CHAIN; NOW THEY'RE 400

Organize in 30 Towns of McHenry County.

Thirty days ago a group of 16 women in Woodstock set out to see what they could do for Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President.

They started in what one of the 16 says was "a very unintelligent manner—thru chain letters." Today they have thriving women's organizations made up of farm women, factory girls, Democrats, and Republicans alike in 30 towns in McHenry county.

A week ago yesterday they held a meeting in the Woodstock opera house. Four hundred women left their farms and homes to attend. The rent for the hall was paid by two women who had been ardent Democrats until the 16 started to work.

Know Every Back Road.

None of the 16 had been in politics before. In that, they feel, lies their most potent weapon for good. They started to work by announcing their disassociation from any political group, and left no farm unvisited. They now say, proudly, "We know every back road in McHenry county."

"We hold our speeches down to 8 or 10 minutes," explained Mrs. Earle Phinney of Woodstock, chairman of McHenry county's Volunteer Women Workers for Willkie, "and try to offer something more than just regular political propaganda."

The women work thru what they call green tickets. These are green sheets of paper with space for 16 names. Each newly convinced woman signs a white card, pledging her support, and takes a green sheet. She then writes 16 names on it, each the name of a woman whom she guarantees to get to the polls on election day.

Avoid Personal Issues.

"It is the first time women have thought they weren't doing something foolish," Mrs. Phinney said. "These women know they are responsible for those 16 names. We try to keep it impersonal, too. We ask the women not to make it a personal issue, and to avoid personalities.

"The response has been exciting. Imagine walking into the kitchen of a farm woman—she got up at 4 that morning to see her husband get his cattle off on the train, she cooked breakfast for seven, cleaned the house and baked, and now she is making cucumber pickles—and you go in and say, 'Wouldn't you like to ask a few women in to hear some facts about why we want Wendell Willkie elected?'

"And those farm women look at you and a smile comes over their faces as they say: 'Why, surely. I'll ask 20 women in. Will you bring the speakers?'"

Mrs. Walter Lawrence, also of Woodstock, is county secretary of the group.

RADICALS OF ALL KINDS.

"Radicals of all kinds," Mr. Roosevelt wrote to the Young Democrats of America, in convention in Pittsburgh about a year ago, "have some use to humanity because they have at least the imagination to think up many kinds of answers to problems, even tho their answers are wholly impractical of fulfillment in the immediate future."

This expression of opinion is hardly needed to explain a great many things. It would explain the federal government's indorsement of the sitdown strikes led by the militant communists in the automobile union. It would explain Mr. Roosevelt's annual birthday congratulations to Stalin's commissars in Moscow.

In the light of it Mr. Roosevelt's letter of approval to the Workers' alliance, the union of the WPA workers, could be understood. Herbert Benjamin, general secretary of that alliance, told a house investigating committee that he was a member of the communist party and named six officials of the organization who likewise took their doctrine and their instructions from Moscow.

In the light of this statement Mr. Roosevelt's nomination of Thomas R. Amlie to the Interstate Commerce commission could be understood. In 1937 Mr. Amlie, as a congressman, introduced what he called a human rights amendment to the constitution providing for the complete socialization of private enterprise. In the senate hearings on Mr. Amlie's appointment he said that he thought about 75 per cent of the productive plant of the United States should be under governmental control.

Mme. Perkins is Mr. Roosevelt's appointee, and altho congress has sought to impeach her the White House has sustained her. Mme. Perkins is the government official who has protected Harry Bridges, the Australian one-man blockade of Pacific coast shipping, and overruled the immigration officials recommending his deportation. Dean Landis found that Mr. Bridges acted like a communist and talked like a communist, but didn't happen to be one. It is of small consequence to the United States in these, which the New Deal says are days of the greatest public danger, whether Mr. Bridges is what he does.

Mr. Roosevelt's liking for "radicals of all kinds" would explain why David Saposs, statistician of the Labor Relations board, kept his job when congress tried to abolish it. Mr. Madden of the Labor Relations board, which itself has been a spearhead for "radicals of all kinds," protected Mr. Saposs against the intent of congress by changing the name of the division to which he is accredited. This liking for "radicals of all kinds" would explain why the administration has blocked the Smith amendments to the labor act and the Walter bill, both of which would preserve the legal rights of citizens imperiled by executive and administrative dictate.

"Radicals of all kinds" have been encouraged by the New Deal and brought into the coalition of city machine corruptionists and war intriguers, following a conspiracy to pledge the future of the American people in domestic association with the ideas of Karl Marx and in international affairs with involvement in wars of foreign empires.

On the foreign side the coalition is represented by persons seeking to make the United States a participant in the interminable wars of Europe and on the domestic side by people who support the ideas of Rexford Tugwell and A. A. Berle. On the domestic side the New Deal prepares, as it has shown in the expropriation provision of the conscription bill, for the confiscation of private property and the taking over of private enterprise.

Mr. Roosevelt asked the temporary economic committee why so much money was stagnant in unused pools. Mr. Berle of the state department, assigned to the job of testimony giver by the Securities and Exchange commission, went before the committee to answer the question. He said that private enterprise and private financing had failed and that government must take over the job of saying what should be produced and how the money for it should be obtained. That was Mr. Roosevelt's answer to his own question, and if he can secure the third term it will be his response to what he will call a mandate.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

A good many of the American reporters in England have sent graphic accounts of the recent bombings. Americans can now be said to know that bombs explode with a loud noise and if they hit a building are likely to wreck it and kill some people. When the bombers are overhead the antiaircraft fire is intense and that also makes a good deal of noise. At night the show is a brilliant one.

Having had a good deal of information along these lines, the public in this country must have welcomed Capt. Corpening's recent dispatches in this newspaper. In them a number of hitherto neglected points were touched upon. One of them was that despite all the bombing intended to prevent British ships from navigating the channel and the Thames, ships are continuing to use these vital waterways without serious hindrance. That is a fact of tremendous importance, but both the fact and its importance seem to have been overlooked by all or nearly all of the other reporters.

Capt. Corpening was struck also by the fact that tho the damage by bombs in London has been considerable, the destruction in coastal towns which have also been subjected to mass attack for an even longer period is not great and is not seriously interfering with the productivity of these centers and with the private lives of the inhabitants. The conclusion appears to be warranted that the bomber requires an enormous target if he is to hit anything. He can hit metropolitan London which spreads over hundreds of square miles, but a ship, a dock, a power plant are targets of a very different sort. Only a very small proportion of all the buildings in a great city can be regarded as of critical importance in the military sense and the success of the Germans in smashing these objectives appears to be little greater than the laws of averages would forecast.

For an American who wishes to know how the war is going these unexcited but careful and thoughtful observations and reports are of a great deal more value than a lot of high-pitched emotional writing.

It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that two of Capt. Corpening's recent dispatches contained more meat than many other correspondents have provided in the last year. Capt. Corpening was educated at West Point, and his achievements as a correspondent reflect great credit upon the institution. His natural powers of observation were sharpened and he was encouraged to distinguish the important from the unimportant.

EGYPT.

An Italian army of invasion is more than a hundred miles past the western frontier of Egypt. That nation is a sovereign kingdom, but it has not declared war on Italy. It has an army, but the army is not fighting the Italians. The fighting is being done by the British and their position is not that of a belligerent using the territory of a helpless neutral as a battleground, but of an ally of the Egyptians performing obligations under a treaty. The same treaty obliges the Egyptians to fight beside them, but they have not, as yet, got around to that.

This state of affairs flows from a great trait of British statesmanship—the ability to seize the substance and let the forms go hang. Contradictions, it has been frequently pointed out, do not disturb the British mind so long as the thing works. Egypt, on the maps of the last 60 years, has usually been colored the same pink that denotes the British empire, but never have the people of Egypt owed the allegiance of subjects to the British king. Yet without giving that allegiance they have been ruled from London and their well being has been enormously advanced by the competence and frequent brilliance of the British civil service.

Egypt for centuries suffered a misrule that was unusual even in the orient. Its peasants, the fellahin of the Nile valley that had been the granary of the ancient world, were the worst starved and most abused in the near east. While nominal sovereignty rested for some centuries with Turkey, the real power was in the Mamelukes, originally military slaves brought into the country in the 13th century, who made and deposed rulers as the prætorian guard had done in Rome.

Their power was not broken until the rise of Mehemet Ali in the early 19th century. He was an Albanian adventurer of military talent and had an even greater talent for assassinating his rivals. His descendants still sit on the Egyptian throne.

While the British went into Egypt to eject Napoleon's army of conquest, their present occupancy of the country dates only from 1879. Ismail, a grandson of Mehemet Ali, got into financial difficulties that forced him to sell to Britain the shares that control the Suez canal, and following a military occupation, the British and French undertook joint fiscal administration of the country. The British assumed complete control in 1905. In the intervening period the administration of Evelyn Baring, Lord Cromer, who has been called the greatest of the modern British proconsuls, had not only restored governmental solvency, but had made the country rich and productive again.

At the outbreak of the first world war the Turkish sultan was still a shadow ruler over Egypt. This rule was terminated when Turkey entered the war on the German side and Egypt was declared a protectorate of Great Britain. In 1921 the nation was declared independent, but with reservations of British power, deemed necessary to protect the Suez canal and the vast British commercial interests in Egypt itself. These reservations virtually negated the independence.

It was not until 1936, following 15 years of disturbances by the rising nationalist movement of the country, that the present status of Egypt as an independent nation with a perpetual political alliance with Great Britain was confirmed by a treaty signed at London. The following year 14 foreign powers, including the United States, agreed to the gradual nationalization of the mixed courts in which all of the litigation involving all foreigners and the vast foreign investments in Egypt has been carried on. This transition to a purely Egyptian court system will be completed in 1949.

Meanwhile, as allies, the British base their fleet at Alexandria and their army and air corps operate on Egyptian soil to protect the canal against the axis invasion. The Egyptians have their independence, but the British still have Egypt.

Editorials of the Day

BALLYHOO FOR INDICTMENTS.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Some years ago the nation was shocked when Homer Cummings, attorney general of the United States, announced that he was "going to indict" Andrew Mellon, former secretary of the treasury, for income tax dodging.

It was not that anybody felt called upon to rush to the defense of the Pittsburgh millionaire; it was just the idea that a responsible cabinet officer would make such an announcement. There is only one body that indicts and that is a grand jury, and this statement was not only counter to law but also to good taste and fair play.

Mr. Mellon was never indicted. No evidence could be found to support the administration charges, but he was smeared nevertheless.

In Detroit a half-hundred of our leading citizens were indicted in the bank cases and when the political fury abated and the cases were no longer of any publicity value, they were not only all dropped but the accused were fully exonerated by the court, and the government prosecutor congratulated them on their innocence.

It is common law and ordinary fair dealing to keep all the work of a grand jury a sacred secret. Those who leak information can be prosecuted. So it is not without wonderment that the Free Press observes from day to day sensational announcements of what a federal grand jury is "going to do" in Detroit and Michigan. These announcements come from administration sources which state that the indictments will not be handed down for several more weeks.

What, then, is the purpose of all this drum beating?

If any citizen has been guilty of wrong of any kind whatsoever he most certainly should be prosecuted. This requires first his indictment, which is not in any way proof of guilt. Under our law the worst of criminals is entitled to his day in court. This barrage of ballyhoo, as tho it were proclaiming the coming of a circus to town, is not only without dignity but is a violation of the spirit of true law enforcement.

What's behind it?

NOT THE MR. BUCKLEY?

[Christian Science Monitor.]

For sheer darkness, Boston's Thomas J. Buckley, winner of the Democratic party's nomination for Massachusetts state auditor, outshines the average "dark horse" by several shades of obscurity. When his nomination was announced nobody seemed to know who—or even whether—he was. One election official promised information about him if he could be found.

Mr. Buckley was found. Then began a discussion as to how he won the nomination. Some experts thought the voters confused him with another Buckley—Thomas H.—well known as a former state auditor. Mr. Buckley himself thought some of his votes came from the publicity he received from political workers who tried to turn away votes by explaining he was not the other Mr. Buckley.

Probably the theories will become more and more involved before the plot clears up. And some voters may have a few of their own, including one about how much better it would be for some politicians to be complete strangers than too well known. But it should not be overlooked that Mr. Buckley—that is, this one—never made a speech in his own behalf. Does his nomination show that the public, despite the doubts of some statesmen on the point, has a capacity for gratitude?

GOVERNMENT AND THE FARMER

BY WALTER MACK.

[Former Manager Gov. Lowden's Farms.]

There is no issue in the Presidential campaign more clouded and confused than the farm problem. If, however, we examine carefully the conflicting claims of New Dealers and Republicans, we will find that they present radically different principles of procedure. This difference, I think, can be fairly stated by saying that the New Dealers argue that the farm problem is primarily a problem of bringing production down to the level of consumption, whereas the Republicans hold that the problem is to bring consumption up to the level of production. Of course, the aim of both is to increase the farmer's income.

To prove that their policy has accomplished this aim, the New Dealers compare farm prices as of today with farm prices in 1932. This is manifestly unfair, if not dishonest, because, as every one knows, 1932 marks the depth of a world-wide depression, in which prices in every line of business were shot to pieces. The only fair comparison is between prices in a typical New Deal year and a typical Republican year, as for example, 1940 and 1926. Such a comparison in the three major crops will show:

NEW DEAL, 1940.		REPUBLICAN, 1926.
Corn, per bu.	$ .83	Corn, per bu.	$1.25
Wheat, per bu.	.94	Wheat, per bu.	1.15
Cotton, per lb.	.09	Cotton, per lb.	.19

This comparison is all the more disastrous to the New Dealers when we recall that prices in 1940 are based on a depreciated dollar, containing a third less gold.

If we compare the total farm income during the first six years of the New Deal, the only ones for which we have a complete record, with the last six years of Republican rule, we get an even more damning argument against the New Deal farm policy.

Total farm income, six New Deal years, $44,649,000,000.

Total farm income, six Republican years, $52,811,000,000.

The six New Deal years include the benefit payments, and the six Republican years include the disastrous depression year, 1932, and yet the total farm income for the six Republican years is over eight billion dollars greater than for the six New Deal years.

Now, if we inquire into the reason for this vast difference in the farm income during the six Republican years as compared with the six New Deal years, we find it due to the fact that in the Republican era—at least up till the depression—our factories were running at capacity and wage earners were fully employed. As a result there was a much greater demand for farm products, and this greater demand, of course, resulted in higher farm prices.

To a farmer who is also a business man, and my experience as manager of Gov. Lowden's Sinnissippi farms for six years convinces me that every successful farmer is also a business man, the most damning thing about the New Deal is its attitude toward business. To say that this attitude is unfriendly is to put it too mildly. It is and has been ruthlessly hostile and destructive. What with oppressive taxes, government competition, and wild-eyed denunciation, business has been fighting for its life with its back against the wall.

Every one knows that if business were allowed to absorb the nine million men still unemployed, despite wartime orders, the consumption of farm products would show a sharp increase and farm prices would rise. Suppose each of these nine millions were to earn an average of $25 a week, or $1,200 a year. The total increase in the national income would be over 10 billion dollars. I venture to say that this would so increase the farm income as to make the subsidies to farmers unnecessary. It would also help pay the national deficit, which is increasing at the frightful rate of $8,000 a minute or a half million dollars an hour, and which the farmer will find to his sorrow constitutes a lien on every farm in the country.

If Mr. Wallace will stop his silly chatter about Republicans being for appeasement, and tell the country how much of this huge deficit is being paid to the farmer in the form of benefit payments and what the farmer's share in its ultimate payment will be, and if he will also explain how the vast stored surpluses of grain are to be eventually disposed of, he might regain some of the respect he has lost among thinking farmers.

And if Mr. Roosevelt would stop his vicious attacks on business, and recognize that what the country needs is a well rounded policy of encouragement to both business and agriculture, free from politics and personal abuse, we might hope to regain the lost prosperity of 1926, or even surpass it. And let no New Dealer say that 1926 was not a prosperous year. It was the year selected later by the New Deal finance committee of congress, as the year when prices were fair and when the dollar established a fair balance between debtor and creditor. It is the year, the wholesale price index of which was chosen by the bureau of labor as 100 per cent normal. Wages were high and there was little unemployment. I need hardly add that it was a year when both industry and agriculture were free from New Deal interference, and, to quote Theodore Roosevelt, asked "nothing but a fair field and no favor."

Wendell Willkie is making no rash promises to the farmer, but he does promise to encourage business and put idle men and women to work, and this is the best way to help the farmer. If he is elected, I believe he will not only free both industry and agriculture from the palsying hand of government, but he will bring about a closer coöperation between the two. Farmers have hardly begun to realize the tremendous possibilities of such coöperation, but as Henry Ford and other far seeing industrialists have pointed out, the next great advance toward a higher plane of prosperity in America will be the utilization of the farm as a source of raw materials for our factories. The raising of soy beans is one of many examples that might be mentioned.

As I see it then the two great needs of the farmer today are, first to get rid of political interference, and secondly, to coöperate more fully with industry in creating a better market for both. It is because I believe Wendell Willkie is especially fitted to bring about these desirable ends, that I want to see him elected President.

SMOOTH SAILING DURING THE CHANGE OF LIFE.

EVERY woman is confronted sooner or later with the transition which marks the termination of the childbearing period. Apparently nature dislikes to surrender this function and the protests that are made may be far from mild.

Some are fortunate enough to pass thru the episode without the slightest discomfort. On the other hand, such exhibitions as hot flushes, mental and emotional unrest, dizziness, headache, insomnia, and so forth, may prove viciously disturbing. When the manifestations are severe the victim may be awakened many times during the night to find the bed soaked with perspiration—with a feeling of so much heat that she may exclaim, "I am burning up." Headaches, too, may come at any time during the day.

Whether the cessation of the output of the ovaries is wholly responsible is not clear. At any rate, this must be the trigger element in the picture and it is logical to assume that the reduction in this particular internal secretion starts a chain of too little hormone production. We know how to identify the product of the ovaries and this may be tested for and will usually be found greatly reduced—if not absent entirely. Curiously enough, as the organs become less and less active, the pituitary becomes more so. It appears as tho the control element over this latter gland were lost.

Fortunately, a clearer understanding of what is occurring has enabled us to furnish artificially the missing chemicals. In this fashion, with adequate doses, many patients who need endocrine therapy can be carried safely and easily thru this interval. But this does not mean that every woman will require them. Some will be utterly unaware that the "show" is on—so far as the emotional side of their lives is concerned.

Estrogenic preparations are now available and striking results have been reported following their injection. One or two forms may be taken by mouth, and it is certainly gratifying to note the disappearance of fears and worries under their influence. Most of them are reliable and harmful results are almost unknown. The oily type, for muscle injection, has the advantage of slower absorption—thus prolonging the effect. The dosage depends upon the symptoms and the ease or difficulty with which they are relieved. At the outset, a large quantity is sometimes necessary, with a very moderate or fractional maintenance amount weekly thereafter. This plan may be continued for several months.

The question is asked frequently, "Will the use of these secretions lead to the development of cancer?" So far as is known, a categorical answer may be made—namely: "No." There is no evidence to indicate that supplying the normal essential of a gland will stimulate the growth of cancer cells. In fact, hundreds of thousands of doses have been given without the slightest tendency in this direction. The quantities are so small in comparison that this fear is unfounded.

No rule can or should be laid down that every woman—when she approaches the menopause—should receive hormones. The physician must be guided by the results of his examination and by the reaction to the process. In 90 per cent of the cases there will be no occasion for their use. But when they are needed, we have at hand a remedy that literally changes night into day. Relief is dramatic and the patients are most appreciative.

CRAMPS AT NIGHT.

L. O. writes: For about a month I have had cramps in my right leg during the night. Afterward the leg feels weak for about an hour. What is the cause of this condition?

REPLY.

Look to the circulation and the state of the blood. Hardening of the arteries or anemia may be present. In addition, fatigue should be avoided—overactivity during the evening hours. Massage for 20 or 30 minutes will help.

BONE DISEASES.

K. V. writes: Did you ever hear of a person starting to get bowlegged at the age of 24? I thought this could happen only in infancy.

REPLY.

There are certain diseases of the bone in which softening may occur. Lack of vitamin D or too little secretion from the parathyroid glands may be responsible. In osteomalacia, for example, marked deformities will result.

PEOPLE FIT FOR LIBERTY.

New York, Sept. 24.—To one great newspaper in each of a number of large cities, I respectfully submit the following, written during the 19th century by John Stuart Mill, a member of the British parliament.

"A people may prefer a free government; but if, from indolence, or carelessness, or cowardice, or want of public spirit, they are unequal to the exertions necessary for preserving it; if they will not fight for it when it is directly attacked; if they can be deluded by the artifices used to cheat them out of it; if, by momentary discouragement, or temporary panic, or a fit of enthusiasm for an individual, they can be induced to lay their liberties at the feet even of a great man, or trust him with powers which enable him to subvert their institutions—in all these cases they are more or less unfit for liberty; and even tho it may be for their good to have had it even for a short time, they are unlikely long to enjoy it."

CLARENCE S. BROWN.

AS TO PRECINCT CAPTAINS.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—You have struck on a timely subject. I have often wondered whom the precinct captain was supposed to represent.

There are indeed many citizens who desire to enter politics but would not wish the obnoxious title of war heeler, or have to cater to some ward committeeman.

The solution to the problem is the formation of a citizen's nonpartisan committee for the election of precinct commiteeman, and it is my belief that civic organizations, better government groups, progressive political leaders and candidates, together with public spirited citizens would support such a movement. I for one, as an independent voter, will donate $1 toward the formation of such a committee.

WM. KOREYWO.

WHAT NEXT?

Chicago, Sept. 25.—The following is the definite trend:

Two out of every three military planes constructed in the U. S. A. go to a belligergent.

Fifty of our reconditioned and modernized destroyers go to a belligerent.

Conscripts go [?]. Certainly they go. This propaganda in regard to building up our own defenses is but a subterfuge.

We are going down the same trail that leads to war that we traveled once before. We do not seem to have learned anything from our past experience.

Have you noticed how the propaganda for war has been stepped up?

WILLIAM D. WEBBER.

UPSIDE DOWN SCHOOLING.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—What kind of a school system do we have now where the girls are taught plumbing and manual training and the boys are taught sewing and cooking?

My niece, aged 12, has just finished learning how to take a toilet apart and put it together again, and now she is learning how to mend breaks in broom handles. Instead of learning how to keep house and take care of her own clothes, she is being taught this sort of thing.

Also in this same school one teacher, instead of teaching the children reading, writing, and arithmetic, teaches them how to make little doo-dads out of colored paper and paste.

My own child is just starting to school, but if this is the kind of education she is going to get I shall send her to private school.

MRS. L. ROSSI.

HE'S FOR IMMIGRATION.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—In reply to "Peril in Immigration": One of the main reasons for the remarkable growth of this country has been immigration. Until about 15 years ago this country was an asylum for the oppressed. Then we reversed our admirable human policy, and stopped immigration. And we know it hasn't cured unemployment. We would not have had as many unemployed now had we kept our doors open to all desiring to come to our shores—barring none. Only then could we call ourselves civilized and true to the principles of democracy and fair play.

LEON LOWELL.

AGED 30; CAN'T FIND WORK.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—What is happening to our world of today when a man of 30 is unable to find work so that his family can exist? For four months my husband covered entire Chicago, only to be turned down. He is willing to do anything. When he walked into an agency and saw that a man was wanted to drive a truck he asked for the job, but was told that he was too old for that. Too old to drive a truck to supply his wife and son with food, but not too old to go to war.

AN INSULT TO THE MASS.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—I was surprised to see Vox Pop lend its columns for "dirty little digs" like Kathryn Ward's doggerel from Thomas Hardy on the mass—a gratuitous insult to thousands of your readers for whom the mass is the most solemn and sacred act of worship. Even unbelievers speak reverently of the mass as a liturgical act.

Maybe she is all "het up" because of the attitude of the recent Negro congress toward race suicide. Bet she is one of those soured old birth controlers.

[REV.] EDWARD S. KEOUGH.

GARBAGE CANS O. K., BUT—

Chicago, Sept. 24.—Your garbage can campaign is a great health movement, but it is useless until the junk, rag, and bottle pickers are restrained from undoing what is corrected by having cans.

I have installed cans on several different occasions, and they always disappeared. Who takes them?

But when I did have them, the garbage after being deposited in the cans would soon be found dumped out and scattered all over the alley by these bottle pickers. Stop them and you will have a great improvement in the condition of your alleys.

MESSAGE TO MOTHERS.

Marshalltown, Ia., Sept. 25.—I want to say to the mothers of the United States: If you don't want your boys to go to war vote for Wendell Willkie. A vote for Roosevelt means war and dictatorship.

L. H. HOOKER.

A BIT TOUGH ON THE DOVES.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—You have printed letters expressing regret that the mourning doves will be among the victims of the hunters' guns in October. This was taken up with the department of conservation at Springfield, and the protest passed on to the department of the interior, fish and wild life service, Washington, D. C. The following is an excerpt from the reply:

"We appreciate the great interest and support you have developed and maintained for the protection of wild life. However, many citizens enjoy taking a few doves each autumn for recreational and food purposes. We believe it fair to permit these citizens to harvest a reasonable crop of doves so long as the annual take does not exceed the annual production of these birds."

Those who love the birds can but hope that hunters may be more merciful than state and federal conservation officials.

A CO-OPERATIVE EMPLOYER.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—I call to your attention an instance of an employer's willingness to coöperate with an employé who is a member of the Illinois National Guard.

While on my vacation this summer I spent my time off and three weeks of my own time in a National Guard training camp. I was agreeably surprised on my return to receive a check from my employer covering the period during which I was absent from work.

The check being given me in recognition of the fact that I spent the time off in training essential to national defense, and this at a time when the problem of defense is of the utmost importance.

JACK GAN,
Elevator Operator.

WE PASS THIS IDEA ON.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—It seems to me that if the English were smart they would place lots of about 100 war prisoners in various parts of London and other parts of the island, which Hitler has been bombing, and then notify Hitler of the action so he might know that when he drops his bombs his own men are getting the "benefit" along with British people.

This might help to change the situation. I don't care if you pass along the suggestion to Dad Churchill.

HOUSE LEASE.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a lease on the bungalow I am renting to May 1, 1941.

1. It contains a 60 day clause to the effect that if the building is sold I am to vacate in 60 days.

2. The new owner has asked if I would consider moving by Oct. 1 instead of Nov. 1, as I am entitled to.

3. If I have to pay a higher rental where I am going, am I not entitled to the extra amount for the month of October?

4. Am I entitled to my moving expense?

5. If so, by whom, the new owner here or the real estate agent I am renting from?

A. K.

1. We could advise to better advantage if the wording were before us.

2. We assume from this that there has been a sale and that the new owner is asking you to move sooner than he would be legally entitled to.

3. If he is asking you to do something you are not legally obliged to do, this is another way of saying that you can name arbitrarily the terms on which you are willing to do it.

4. See 3.

5. You state that the new owner is the one with whom you are dealing. If you wish to work out an arrangement for allowances, presumably that arrangement should be made with him.

NEW MINNESOTA LABOR ACT CUTS STRIKES IN HALF

Pushed Thru Legislature by Gov. Stassen.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 28 [Special].—Strikes in Minnesota, a state which has been notorious for its labor strife, were reduced more than 50 per cent during the first year's operation of the Minnesota labor relations act, a report by State Labor Conciliator Lloyd J. Haney disclosed today.

The act was one of the prime projects of Minnesota's young Republican governor, Harold E. Stassen, who is supporting Wendell Willkie, G. O. P. nominee for President. Gov. Stassen blocked a conservative legislature from passing a reactionary labor law and insisted on the measure in its present liberalized form.

The basic principle of the Minnesota act and its main point of difference with the National Labor Relations act is the use of voluntary means of settling disputes before a strike or lockout has begun. The Minnesota law is modeled in part after the Mediation and Conciliation law of Canada and the United States railway act.

Picket Line Replaced.

By substituting the conference table for the picket line, only 25 strikes took place in the state during the fiscal year ending last April 24. An average of 62 strikes occurred during the preceding three years. Only 2,996 employés were on strike during the year under the Minnesota act, compared with an average of 15,865 strikers for the two preceding years.

Operation of the act brought peaceful settlement to 625 disputes before the division of conciliation, which functions solely as an umpire and has no authority to impose settlements.

Conciliator Haney said the turn in the state's labor affairs has resulted in a healthy growth of labor organizations, better working conditions, and steadier employment.

Business Shows Profit.

"Employers have kept their businesses going on a profitable basis," Haney said. "Business has increased, and business men again are looking to Minnesota for locations for new industries."

A special procedure has been established under the law for strikes which affect the public interest, where the life, safety, health, or well-being of the public is involved. These disputes are taken to the governor for appointment of a fact finding commission. This commission, representing the public, labor, and industry, has 30 days to investigate, hear witnesses, and submit a report to the governor.

The governor in turn summons the disputing factions and attempts to bring about a voluntary settlement. During the first year of the law's operation there were 10 fact finding commissions appointed. Five of these cases were settled before the commissions completed their work.

2 BURN TO DEATH AS 2 BIG TRUCKS COLLIDE HEAD-ON

Two truck drivers, one a Chicagoan, were burned to death yesterday when their trucks collided head-on on U. S. route 6, east of Nappanee, Ind., and burst into flames. When the drivers saw the collision was imminent, both swerved to the same side of the road. Both then turned to the other side of the road in a final effort to avert the crash and the big trucks came together.

The Chicago victim was Charles Taylor, 37 years old, of 4446 North Racine avenue. The other driver was Arthur Sours, 35, of Fort Wayne, Ind. Sours was hauling several drums of oil, which fed the flames and made rescue by other motorists impossible.

Herbert McGann, 40, an accountant, died in St. Anne's hospital after his automobile collided with a street car at North and Lockwood avenues. He lived at 1646 North Mason avenue.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday, 633 persons had been killed in automobile accidents in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these, 468 were killed in Chicago, where 17,316 were injured in the same period.

MISSING LUMBER DEALER BELIEVED AMNESIA VICTIM

No trace of Elwood J. Carr, missing partner in the Carr & Moody Lumber company, 3039 South Halsted street, has been found, his associates reported yesterday.

The 28 year old executive disappeared Sept. 12 after leaving his office with $200 in cash and $700 in checks for bank deposit.

Carr's wife, Mary Elizabeth, holds to the belief that he is suffering from amnesia. She said he had been injured in two serious motor accidents in his lifetime, one at the age of 4 and another 10 years ago. He lost his sight for several weeks following one of these, and, until the time of his disappearance, suffered from headaches, she said. Mrs. Carr and their two children live at 12423 South 71st street, Palos Heights.

Crane Lifted Out of Park Lagoon

ARREST 5 UNION MEN AS LEADERS OF FACTORY RIOT

Felony Charges Follow Beating of Police.

New York, Sept. 28 [Special].—Two officials and three members of an A. F. of L. union were arrested today on indictments charging them with responsibility for an outbreak of labor violence last Tuesday in which 50 policemen were beaaten when they defended the strike beset plant of a company filling government contracts.

The riot, at the Triangle Conduit and Cable company plant in Glendale, was described by District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan as the most serious of its kind in the history of Queens county. Three thousand strikers beat and routed 50 policemen, who said they were warned by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia they would lose their jobs if they drew clubs or guns.

Dozen Men Face Arrest.

Twelve arrests in addition to the five made today are expected to follow yesterday's action by the Queens county grand jury. The five under arrest are members of local 30 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. None ever was employed by the Triangle company, police said.

They are Harry Von Arsdale, 34 years old, business manager of the local and one of the better known labor leaders in the city; Frederick Hansen, 51, assistant business manager of the union; John Dineen, 36; Louis Wipflier, 56, and Leonard Copicotti, 36, union members.

After being fingerprinted and photographed, the men were taken to the Queens county jail pending arraignment Monday. Prosecutor Sullivan said that if bail was sought he would ask that it be set at $50,000 in each case, because of the seriousness of the labor outbreak.

"The police lines were broken repeatedly," he said, "by surging groups of men armed with rocks, sticks, and other missiles and who, during the course of the riot, laid down veritable barrages.

Damages Is Tremendous.

"The result of all this was tremendous damage, not alone to the property of the corporation and its employés, but to outsiders as well and to many policemen assigned to duty in the vicinity. The violence was so great as to be in utter disregard of all law and order. We are determined that peace be preserved in Queens county."

The grand jury indictment charges those arrested and others with violation of a rarely invoked section of the penal law which lists rioting as a felony. Conviction under the law carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and a fine of $1,000 on each count.

Disorder at the Triangle company plant has been frequent since a strike was called Aug. 1. The union accused the company of refusing to negotiate a contract. The company said the union signed a contract with a competitor setting a lower wage scale than existed in the Triangle plant.

ROSE CHATFIELD-TAYLOR TROTH IS TO BE ANNOUNCED

The engagement of Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor of Washington and Lake Forest, to Frank Goodnow MacMurray, will be announced today. This was learned in Washington last night.

Mr. MacMurray is the son of John Antwerp MacMurray, ambassador to Turkey, and Mrs. MacMurray. He was graduated last June from Princeton university, where he was a member of the Cap and Gown club and the 150 pound crew.

Miss Chatfield-Taylor, whose father was assistant secretary of the treasury, was presented to society last December at a dance. She is a graduate of the Estover school and attended Bennington college in Vermont. Her father has just returned from a year in Europe, gathering information for the American Red Cross.

A 90 ton crane, operating from a barge, raised the Chicago park district's demolition crane from the Diversey avenue slip of the Lincoln park lagoon yesterday. The park district crane, of 37 ton capacity, fell into the lagoon Friday with a loss of two lives when a bridge span collapsed unexpectedly while being wrecked.

Coast guardsmen and park district officers continued dragging the slip, after removal of the crane, in an effort to find the body of Wharton McCoy, 35 years old, of 741 East 48th street, one of the two WPA workers who drowned. The body of Anthony Llewellyn, 40 years old, 4439 Evans avenue, was recovered shortly after the accident. Both men were colored.

The crane was breaking up the center span of the three span Outer drive bridge, just south of the Lincoln Park Gun club, when the accident happened.

30 LIVES SAVED AS SHIP SINKS IN THE ATLANTIC

Radio Brings Assistance to Stricken Freighter.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 28 (AP)—The freighter Alice Tebbs sank 100 miles northeast of Jacksonville in the Atlantic today, coast guard divisional headquarters announced.

The 30-man crew of the Alice Tebbs, a 2,426 ton wooden steamer, was taken aboard the steamer Samuel Q. Brown before the Alice Tebbs sank, radio messages from the rescue ship said.

Radio Tells Plight.

Earlier, a message to coast guard divisional headquarters from the Alice Tebbs said:

"We abandoning ship soon as she will not last much longer. We will go aboard steamship Samuel Q. Brown. We have man with broken leg and internal injuries."

Another message from the Alice Tebbs, which radioed early today that her seams had opened and that she was waging a losing fight against waters rising in her hold, asked the coast guard to meet the Samuel Q. Brown with medical aid for the injured sailor.

The cutter Tallapoosa was dispatched to the scene. The steamship Malabar is also standing by.

The stricken freighter is owned by the Southland Steamship company of Aberdeen, Wash.

Chartered for Defense Program.

The ship sailed from St. Helens, Ore., on Aug. 24, and passed thru the Panama canal Sept. 12. She discharged lumber and piling in the Canal Zone and was chartered for two Baltimore-Canal Zone round trips for the national defense program her owners said.

SEEK TO IMPOUND 2% STATE SLUSH FUND RECORDS

The Circuit court of Will county will be asked next week to compel leaders of the Democratic statehouse machine to disclose records of collections and disbursements of the 2 per cent political assessment against salaries of state employés during the last five years.

Attorneys for plaintiffs in a suit for an accounting of the slush fund announced their plans yesterday afternoon after two more witnesses ignored subpenas issued in an effort to force them to give depositions before a notary public at Joliet. The two are Earl Means and W. H. Luthin, clerks at the penitentiary at Stateville, who have been identified as two of the 97 bonded collectors for the 2 per cent club.

The records the court will be asked to impound will include the private files of the late F. Lynden Smith which he secreted in the vault of his Pontiac lumber company before his mysterious death on March 9 in a bathtub of a Springfield hospital. The judge also will be asked to open the records of Miss Pauline Rithmiller, now employed in the Hershey-for-Governor headquarters, who has been bookkeeper for the 2 Per Cent club for five years.

Among the state house machine's leaders against whom a court order will be sought are Director of Finance Samuel L. Nudelman and Patronage Boss William J. Walsh.

Behind them will move a hearse and two caskets. The parade is intended to show motorists the need for safe driving and to impress upon pedestrians the necessity for caution. MAP INDICTMENT OF NITTI FOR BAR UNION "CAPTURE"

Nelson Renews Charges Against Gilbert.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

Frank [The Enforcer] Nitti, No. 1 gangster of the middle west, again took the spotlight in the dispute surrounding the race for state's attorney yesterday. At the same time it was announced that his indictment as a labor union pirate will be sought from the September grand jury.

Judge Oscar F. Nelson, Republican candidate for state's attorney, renewed his verbal duel with Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for State's Attorney Courtney, implying that Nitti was the daily golfing companion of Gilbert last spring at a time when Courtney reputedly was seeking Nitti's arrest.

Smear Attempt Alleged.

Nelson, whose labor affiliations have been under fire, had charged in previous statements that Courtney, who is seeking reëlection as a Democrat, was playing politics in the investigation of labor racketeering charges.

Nelson accused Courtney of attempting to smear him by linking him with George Scalise, ousted president of the Building Service Employés International union, convicted recently in New York of stealing union funds.

Reiterates His Charges.

Judge Nelson's charges against Gilbert yesterday were a reiteration of an earlier statement in which he stated that Gilbert and Nitti fraternized at Hot Springs, Ark., last April, when Nitti was being sought by Courtney's office. Gilbert replied that he had not seen Nitti since 1932, and that Courtney's office was not hunting Nitti last April.

William Crawford, assistant state's attorney in charge of the investigations, said yesterday that he would go before the grand jury, probably tomorrow, to seek Nitti's indictment on charges involving the "capture" of the bartenders' union.

LEE COUNTY WPA QUOTA DOUBLED, AS PREDICTED!

Dixon, Ill., Sept. 28 [Special].—Lee county officials today were casting about for new projects in the hope of being able to keep busy an additional quota of 150 WPA laborers unexpectedly authorized for the county. The new order will raise the county's WPA pay rollers to 272.

Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee for President, has called upon Attorney General Robert H. Jackson for action under the Hatch clean politics law on his charge that the Roosevelt administration is planning to pack the WPA rolls for the coming election. Willkie cited figures show that WPA rolls have increased significantly in every election year.

The Lee county board of supervisors, after several unsuccessful attempts during the summer to obtain more WPA help, finally planned its construction program for the coming year on the basis of the 122 men now employed. Fred W. Leake, county superintendent of highways, said it will be a problem to find enough work for the sudden wholesale increase in the local WPA force.

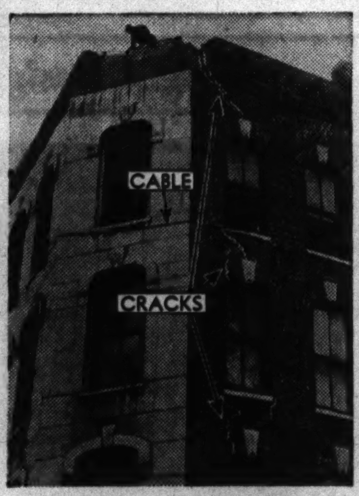
JAIL RACKETEER SUSPECT IN JOB FEE FRAUD QUIZ

Jobless men have told the police sad stories in recent weeks. A stranger promised them jobs as elevator operators, met them in the buildings where they were to work, collected his fees of $10 to $20, and then went upstairs to make arrangements. But the stranger never came back. Yesterday Sergt. John Warren of the detective bureau confidence detail announced that Joseph Parsons, 37 years old, of 944 Leland avenue, has been arrested on the victims' accusations. Warren said that Parsons was recently released from the Bridewell, where he was sent on a charge of participation in a similar racket.

$1,200 PIN REPORTED LOST

Police were trying yesterday to locate a platinum bar pin, set with diamonds, reported lost by Mrs. Marie Peters of 7050 North Paulina street. Mrs. Peters said the pin was worth $1,200.

Collapse Prevented



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

A subway disaster was narrowly averted yesterday when workmen bound four steel cables around a building at 1000 South State street to prevent collapse of its front wall.

The wall, four stories high and taking up a 75-foot frontage on State street, broke away from the two sides of the structure, leaving a crack several inches wide extending a story and a half down from the top. The area was roped off and workers tied the wall so securely with cables that subway officials said there was no further danger of a collapse.

Air wells for subway ventilation are being built under the building. It was formerly used as a hospital for the Santa Fe railroad.

Mrs. Minnie Stoxen [top] and Mrs. Louise Brandes.

Two McHenry county sisters who believe they may be the nation's oldest twins will celebrate their 90th birthday this afternoon. They are Mrs. Minnie Stoxen of Union and Mrs. Louise Brandes of Harmony. Born in Germany, they were brought to the United States by their parents at the age of 5. They have lived in Illinois ever since, most of their adulthood being spent in McHenry county. Both are widows.

The celebration will be in the home of Mrs. Stoxen's daughter, Mrs. H. V. Woleben of Union, with whom Mrs. Stoxen lives. Among those expected to be present are Mrs. Stoxen's four other daughters, eight grandchildren, and one great-grandchild, and Mrs. Brandes' five daughters.

ALLMAN FINISHES 9 YEARS IN POLICE POST TOMORROW

Police Commissioner Allman will complete his ninth year as head of the police department tomorrow. He has held that office longer than any predecessor. The previous record was held by Capt. Francis O'Neill, who served four years and nearly three months from his appointment in 1901.

Commissioner Allman was appointed by the late Mayor Cermak in 1931 and was reappointed by Mayor Kelly. He is 64 years old and has served as a member of the department for the last 40 years. His office does not come under the compulsory retirement law.

Commissioner Allman said he will observe his anniversary by going to his office, as usual, before 9 a. m. and doing a full day's work. The commissioner, who is a bachelor, likes to play golf and pinochle.

GREEN WILL ASK UNIONS TO DRIVE RACKETEERS OUT

A. F. L. Executive Council to Meet Tomorrow.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today that he would ask the executive council, at a meeting here Monday, to take action against gangster penetration of its affiliated unions.

"We have dealt decisively with gangster penetration in our federal labor unions in Chicago and New York, where we had the power to do it," said Green.

Internationals Rule Selves.

The federal unions are under the direct control of federation officials as distinguished from international unions which are described as autonomous and self governing.

Daniel J. Tobin, a member of the council and head of the Teamsters union, recently called on his union for new powers to deal with racketeers. The council session will be devoted largely to the preparation of its annual report to the A. F. L. convention, in New Orleans, Nov. 18.

Urges Racketeer Purge.

New York, Sept. 28 [Special].—Adolf A. Berle, assistant secretary of state, today urged the American Labor party to try to drive racketeers and all foreign influences from the ranks of organized labor.

Berle addressed the state convention of the party after a fist fight had threatened to develop into a major mêlée. Police restored order quickly.

Berle warned against the abuse of labor's power. He said labor must use the strike and its power only for the honest protection of honest labor.

Recalling numerous recent convictions of labor racketeers, Berle said, "It is important that labor leaders be as straight as bankers. You and I and the public have a right to demand this."

With tulip bulbs so scarce few gardens will enjoy their beauty next spring. Make yours one of these few!

KEEP JULY 13TH OPEN; IT'S DATE OF THRILL SHOW

Committee Starts Work on 1941 Program.

The fourth Chicago Police and Fire Thrill show will be held in Soldiers' field at 2 p. m. Sunday, July 13, 1941. A profit of the first three shows totaling $11,097.47 is credited to the show management and is deposited in the First National Bank of Chicago.

This guarantees the 80,000 spectators expected at the fourth entertainment an even bigger and better show. The show is conducted jointly by the Chicago police and fire departments, the Chicago park district, and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

More than 220,000 men, women, and children have attended the first three demonstrations which not only entertain but also educate the public in the heroic work which is done as a part of the everyday duty of firemen and policemen.

Committee Prepares for Show.

The executive committee already is preparing for next summer's show. This group consists of Police Commissioner James P. Allman, Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan, and Chief Roger F. Shanahan of the Chicago park district police.

An auditor's report on the three exhibitions, prepared by Jerome Huppert, principal clerk in the finance department of the park district, shows there has been a steady increase in paid attendance. Attendance figures follow: 1938, 54,120; 1939, 60,817; 1940, 61,448. Receipts have been as follows: 1938, $11,362.65; 1939, $12,545.25; 1940, $12,869.90. Expenses were as follows: 1938, $4,758.74; 1939, $9,189,38; 1940, $11,732,21.

The increase in expenses is due to construction costs and to the practise this summer of giving small American flags to the more than 20,000 boys and girls who attended. A federal amusement tax was paid on the 25 cent adult admissions this year for the first time. This amounted to $1,465.08. Children are admitted for 10 cents. The park district collects 10 per cent of the gross receipts, plus a maintenance charge.

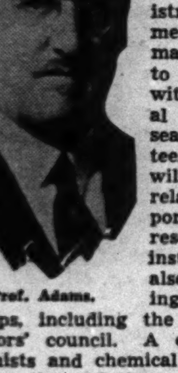
Reserve Fund Necessary.

Those in charge of the first show discussed the feasibility of turning over the net profits to some charitable group, but this plan was dropped, as it has been found necessary to have a reserve fund from which to operate the next year's entertainment.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly is honorary chairman of the show. Members of the coördinating committee are James M. Gleason, chief automotive engineer of the fire department; Frank C. McAuliffe, chief of the fire insurance patrol; Anthony J. Mullaney, first deputy fire marshal, and John C. Prendergast, chief of the uniformed force, Chicago police department. Harry M. O'Rourke is executive secretary of the entertainment.

U. OF I. CHEMIST, HEADS DEFENSE RESEARCH BODY

Thomas Midgley, chairman of the American Chemical society, yesterday announced the appointment of Prof. Roger Adams, head of the University of Illinois chemistry department, as chairman of a group to coöperate with the National Defense Research committee. The group will aid in correlating and supporting scientific research on war instruments. It also is coöperating with other groups, including the National Inventors' council. A census of all chemists and chemical engineers in the country and the specialized services which they can perform is being made. The list will be sent to the federal government.



Prof. Adams.

Opens Printing Week

Chicago's first printing press will be memorialized at noon today. A bronze plaque will be unveiled at the southwest corner of Clark street and Wacker drive, where the first issue of The Chicago Democrat, the city's first newspaper, was printed Nov. 26, 1833, by John Calhoun.

The ceremony will open Printing week in Chicago, which will commemorate the 500th anniversary of Johann Gutenberg's invention of movable type.

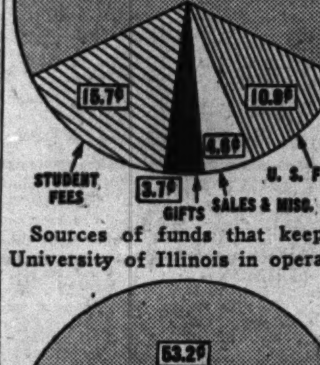
The unveiling ceremony is sponsored by 92 organizations associated with printing, including newspapers, the Chicago Federated Advertising club, the Chicago Club of Printing House Craftsmen, the Chicago Graphic Arts federation, Typographical union, No. 16, and Pressman's union, No. 3.

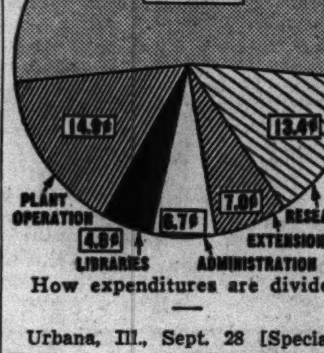
Among those who will speak at the ceremony are the Rev. John Evans, religion editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE; Dr. James Alton James, vice president of the Chicago Historical society; Ulmer Turner, a radio news commentator, and Robert Collyer Fergus. Fergus is a grandson of Robert Fergus, a pioneer Chicago printer who printed the first edition of the Chicago city directory in 1839.

The ceremony will be broadcast from 12:15 to 12:30 p. m. by W-G-N, which will send its mobile unit to the scene. The announcer will be Cliff Williams.

Money of U. of I.



Sources of funds that keep the University of Illinois in operation.



How expenditures are divided.

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 28 [Special].—The value of buildings, land and equipment of the University of Illinois increased $2,199,130 during the last fiscal year ending June 30, the comtroler's annual report revealed today. The complete plant was valued at $34,091,112.

Educational and general expenses of the university during the year were $8,299,468, more than 13 per cent of which was spent for organized research. Because of excess of total expenses; both operating and construction over total income, the working balance fund decreased $106,168 during the year.

In detailing the value of the educational plant, the investment in the Urbana-Champaign campus and in agricultural experiment fields located in 25 counties was placed at $29,519,106. Investment in the university's Chicago campus, where are located the colleges of medicine, dentistry, and pharmacy, was listed as $4,572,006.

WEDNESDAY EVE WILL MARK NEW YEAR FOR JEWS

100,000 in Chicago to Attend Rites.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Rabbis assert that a main difference between the religion of the Jew and that of the Christian is that the Jew thinks most of conduct and not so much about faith, belief, or dogma. They add that this accounts for the Jew's strict observance of holidays, the chief of which, New Year's, or Rosh Hashanah, begins Wednesday evening.

Anniversaries, as they come year after year, mean more when a way of life is recalled than when a way of believing is thought of, the rabbis explain. Hence, when Wednesday's sunset comes, with its mark of the year 5,701 "from the beginning of the world" of ancient Hebrew reckoning, it will be for the Jew a time to examine his life and conduct.

100,000 to Observe Rites.

As one hundred thousand or more Jews of Chicago move toward their temples and synagogues Wednesday night, many will be heard to call out the greeting, "Leshanah tobah tikateb v'tehatem," or "May you be inscribed and sealed for a good year." The response, when translated, is the well known, "Same to you—Gamata!"

Most Jewish holidays deal with the Jewish community as a whole. They are either historical, or of agricultural origin. The passover, recalling the flight from Egyptian tyranny, emphasizes the social value of human freedom; hanukah stresses the social ideals of religious and cultural liberty. But New Year's holidays, ushered in by Rosh Hashanah, are days of awe—"yamim noraim"—for the individual. They recall no historical incident, nor emphasize no agricultural cycle.

The 10 day season is more like the Christian's lent because the Jew uses the time for self examination and in looking back over his life. He abstains from ordinary tasks. Schools are closed; business is curtailed.

Sanctification Prayer Recited.

At home, the kiddush, or sanctification prayer, is recited. A piece of sweet apple is dipped in honey with the person performing the symbolic act saying, "May it be God's will to grant a good and sweet year." Bread also is dipped in honey in token of hope of worthiness for a pleasant year.

But the blowing of the ram's horn during the synagogue service is the climax of the ceremonial. Like the sanctus bell of the mass, it calls the worshiper to deepest solemnity. The great moment has come!

Every temple in the city will be crowded Wednesday night. Announcements of services will be found in the Metropolitan section of today's TRIBUNE.

CHAMPION LOSES AT 46TH BIG ROCK PLOWING MATCH

Orvis Schroyer of Lily Lake, who won the Lily Lake plowing match last week and the Wheatland plowing match the week before, was defeated yesterday in the championship class of the 46th annual Big Rock plowing match on the John Evans farm, three miles west of Big Rock in Kane county. Twenty thousand spectators attended the match.

Schroyer, who won the Big Rock title last year and the year before, placed third in a field of five champions, getting 89 of a possible 100 points. The winner was Nelson Levee.

Clarence Shoger of Wheatland took the Farmers' class title; Robert Erickson of Plainfield won in the class for boys under 19 years od, and Frank Zink of Plano was first in the boys under 16 class, defeating, among other entrants, Mary Catherine O'Connell, 11, of Big Rock.

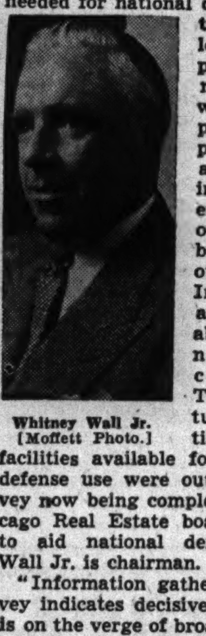
REALTORS LIST ADVANTAGES OF CITY'S LOCATION

Both Factories and Labor Are Available.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]



Whitney Wall Jr.
[Moffett Photo.]

Chicago possesses every advantage needed for national defense manufacturers — suitable location, transportation, climate, skilled workers and power. It has plenty of living accommodations in all price brackets and ample office space in both loop and outlying districts. In addition there are funds available to finance new industrial construction. These manufacturing, residential, and office facilities available for governmental defense use were outlined in a survey now being completed by the Chicago Real Estate board's committee to aid national defense. Whitney Wall Jr. is chairman.

"Information gathered in the survey indicates decisively that Chicago is on the verge of broad industrial expansion, supplemented by the government defense program," Wall said.

Expect Detailed Report Soon.

A detailed report of the national defense committee's findings will be given the war department within 20 days, according to Wall.

The industrial subcommittee report made by J. J. Harrington Jr. of J. J. Harrington & Co., and L. D. McKendry of the Chicago Title and Trust company shows 50 qualified and improved properties ranging from 25,000 to 240,000 square feet each available for manufacturing purposes.

More than 1,250,000 square feet of warehouse space is available, altho some of this area is now in use for temporary storage. This space is in 50 qualified warehouse locations varying in size from 30,000 square feet to 250,000 square feet each.

Loft Space Available.

Loft space was found in many sections of the city, with 250 locations varying from 5,000 to 100,000 square feet each. These are available on a straight lease basis, it was said.

"There is an unlimited amount of vacant property with good transportation facilities, dockage, railway or highway, ranging in price from 15 cents to $1.25 per square foot," Harrington said.

"Financial houses in Chicago provide a background of financial ability much greater than any other large metropolitan center, with the possible exception of New York," McKendry said, "and there are funds available to finance new industrial construction."

Chicago has a great number of experienced machine shop workers, foundry, and forge men, and workers in nonferrous metals, according to C. R. Findeisen and E. H. Pruess of the Illinois Bell Telephone company. They reported on general factors influencing selection of Chicago as a city for defense industries. Experienced workers in the Chicago industrial area total 538,775, they said.

Fuel and Water Adequate.

Chicago possesses 20 vocational schools and 12 grade schools teaching varied trade subjects from watch making and welding to Deisel work and applied science. Research and engineering laboratories are maintained in Chicago by 128 manufacturers. There are 13 universities and colleges conducting research in this area.

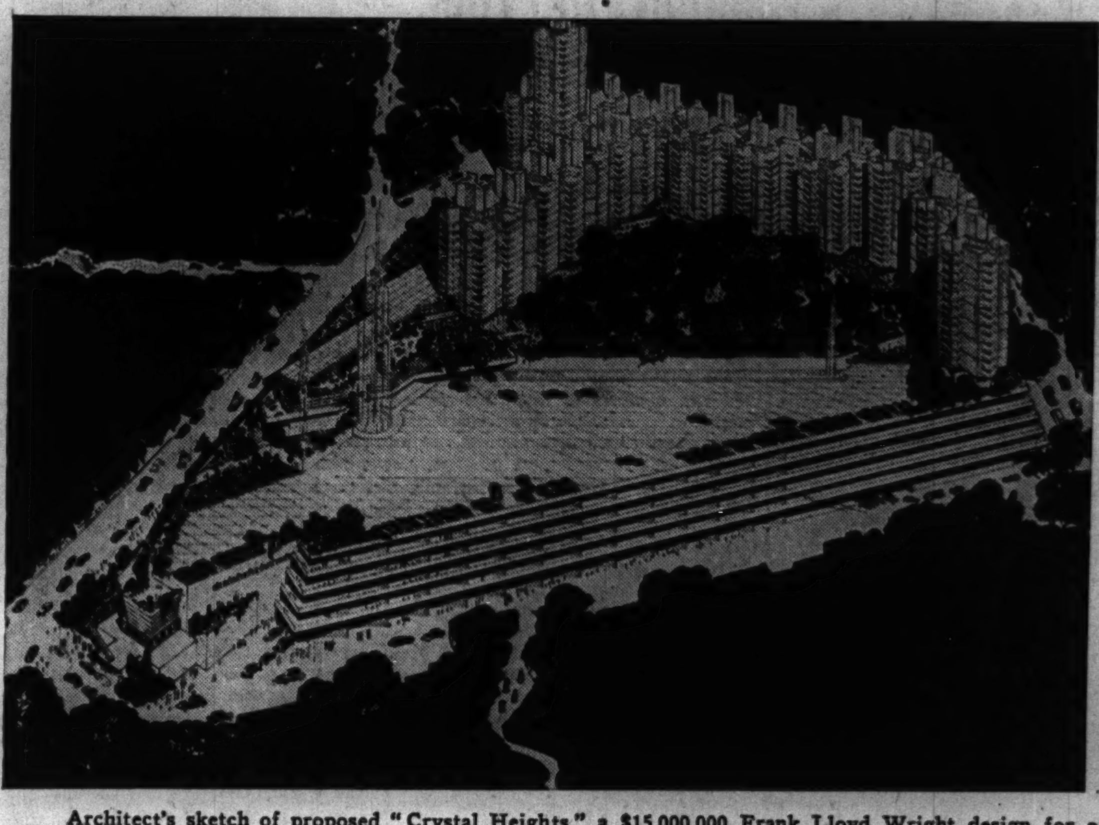
Supplies of energy other than man power are ample for many times the present amount of industry, according to the Wall survey. The Chicago power pool has in excess of 2,000,000 kilowatts of electricity at low cost, and there are adequate supplies of gas, oil, coal, and water.

In regard to aircraft activities, the committee said that during 94 per cent of the year ceiling and visibility in Chicago are good, with a 700 foot ceiling and three-quarters of a mile visibility 344 days out of the 365.

Modernize One Purpose Building; Rent All Space

The three story building at 420-22 East 47th street, built in 1928 for the furniture trade, has been converted from a one purpose to general tenancy project. Herbert E. Heyman of Landau & Perlman has negotiated three leases for all of the space. New fronts and a new entrance to the upper floors were installed from plans by Newhouse & Bernham.

Wright Designs Big Washington, D. C., Project



Architect's sketch of proposed "Crystal Heights," a $15,000,000 Frank Lloyd Wright design for a "skyscraper city," announced for Washington, D. C. Scheduled for the 10 acre Temple Heights tract at Connecticut and Florida avenues, N. W., it will contain a 2,500 room apartment hotel, 1,000 seat theater, and a shopping center with parking facilities for 1,500 cars, arranged on different levels. Roy S. Thurman is head of a syndicate which is financing the development.

$816,000 Paid for 46 Small Flat Buildings

The John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company of Boston within the last few days has sold 46 Chicago apartment buildings for a total of $816,000. These properties, which contained a total of 167 flats, were purchased by two groups, one from New York, which is entering this market for the first time, and the other a Chicago corporation.

George Umansky and William Lurie, both of New York city, are president and secretary, respectively, of three corporations which took title of 12 6-flat buildings, all on the south side. They paid a total of $362,000. The three corporations are: Lurman Realty company, Rose-Anne Realty company, and the Wave Realty company. John H. Smalley of McKinney, Felonie & Grear, was attorney.

Jobisco, Inc., of which Charles E. Joern, head of William Joern & Sons, is président, and Cushman B. Bissell of the law firm of Lord, Bissell & Kadyk is secretary, bought 34 small apartment building properties from the John Hancock Mutual for $454,000. The corporation negotiated $408,600 in mortgages, 15 years, at 3 per cent. Whitney Wall Jr. acted as consultant but no outside brokers were represented.

The 34 buildings contain 95 rental units of 2, 3, 4, and 6 flats. They will be turned over to the new owners on Oct. 1.

PLAN 5 STORY HOSPITAL ANNEX IN ENGLEWOOD

Bids are being taken on a five story fireproof addition to the Englewood hospital, 53 by 68, which it is estimated will cost about $175,000, including equipment. It will be south of and adjoining the present hospital building, at the southeast corner of Green and 60th streets. It will front on Green street and will give the hospital a new main entrance. Puckey & Jenkins drew the plans.

The new unit will contain 40 rooms for general patients, giving the hospital a total capacity of 140 beds. It also will contain a new maternity department, a laboratory, physiotherapy department, waiting rooms and a lobby.

According to S. W. Rice, hospital superintendent, the contract probably will be let the first part of October,

All will be designed by Carl Heimbrodt, architect, and will be priced from $6,100 to $6,450. They are of brick, with full basement. They are to be built on the south side of 96th place, between Cicero and 49th avenues.

After you make a small down payment, you figure 6% yearly on the balance. This sum is payable each year—and it covers both interest and payment on the principal.

Opportunity Farms are real values recognized by experienced farmers who know farms. For the year ending August 31, 1940, 1051 of the 1172 Opportunity Farms sold were bought by farmers. Of this number, 664 were bought by tenant farmers who saw their chance to own thriving farms.

Why wait longer to own the farm you've always wanted? Consult your Opportunity Farms agent today and see how easily you can share in these excellent farm values.

Sessions will be held in the Drake hotel for three days. More than 1,200 mortgage bankers, life insurance executives, government agency officials and real estate men from 40 states are expected to attend, Byron T. Shutz, president, said yesterday.

The mortgage association's fourth annual exhibition of new building products and equipment will be concurrent with the convention.

A golf tournament will be held Thursday afternoon at the Sunset Ridge Country club in Winnetka.

On that date it will be given to one of the persons who has visited it.

Designed by Bertram A. Weber, Chicago architect, the house is said to have cost approximately $10,000. It has a living room, with a fireplace, dining room, kitchen, and powder room on the first floor. There are three bedrooms and a bath on the second floor. A one car garage is attached. The house is heated with a forced warm air gas fired furnace. The full basement will contain a recreation room.

The house, of Georgian design, with walls of red brick, stands on a 50 foot lot given to the Lions club by the Jewel Tea company.

One of Woodlawn's oldest and best known business structures, the Towle building, at the southwest corner of 63d street and Dorchester avenue, was sold yesterday by the New York Life Insurance company to the 63d and Dorchester Building corporation for $110,000, according to revenue stamps on the deed. It was built in 1892 during the south side building boom prior to the 1893 world's fair.

The property fronts 200 feet on 63d street and 170 feet on Dorchester avenue. The four story building on the 63d street side contains 13 stores and 31 apartments. On the Dorchester avenue side is a five story 80 room hotel. A proposed remodeling program includes new store fronts on 63d street, it was said.

MOTOR CARGO, INC., EXPANDS IN EASTERN CITIES AND CHICAGO

Improvements in terminal facilities in several cities were announced yesterday by Motor Cargo, Inc. Extensive improvements are planned for its Akron, O., terminal. A 16 door terminal and freight dock will be built in Mansfield, O. Its Philadelphia terminal will be enlarged and new equipment will be installed in its Youngstown, O., terminal.

The company, which operates 200 motor freight trucks between Chicago and eastern points, and which has 55 terminals, has started work on a freight terminal and office building at the northwest corner of Halsted and 29th streets.

Motor Cargo, Inc., is now at 1235 West 21st street. H. W. Busbee is regional manager of the western division, in charge of operations. Chicago sales are handled by William P. Whalen, manager of sales, W. E. Felton, and William M. Daly. Owen O. Orr, president, has offices in Akron.

This will be the fourth motor trucking terminal on the west side of Halsted street between 27th and 29th streets. The others are Interstate Dispatch, Inc., at 2700 South Halsted; Great Central Transport corporation, at 2800 South Halsted, and Indianapolis Forwarding company, 2840 South Halsted.

SAYS DRAFT AGE WILL NOT AFFECT FHA MORTGAGES

John R. O'Connor, FHA state director for Illinois, yesterday confirmed the report from Atlantic City, where the American Bankers association held its convention, that the Federal Housing administration will not discriminate against men of military age in considering home mortgages for its insurance.

The decision was made by Washington FHA headquarters that home buyers seeking FHA mortgage insurance who might be within the draft limits should not be declared ineligible for such insurance but considered entirely on the merits of their application, O'Connor said.

Only about 20 per cent of the mortgages insured by FHA are for persons within the 21 to 35 age eligible for the draft, he said. These, preponderantly, in the married classification, would be exempt for the most part, he added.

SURGICAL GOODS FIRM TO DOUBLE PLANT CAPACITY

Starts Work on Factory in Clearing District.

The Johnson Suture corporation, a subsidiary of Johnson and Johnson, a surgical dressing manufacturer, yesterday became the first new industry to start building in the recently opened addition to the Clearing Industrial district. Construction was started on a one story plant, containing 32,000 square feet, at the southwest corner of Lavergne avenue and 67th street. The new factory will double the concern's manufacturing facilities, officials said.

The company now employs 100 persons in its plant at 2212 South La Salle street, a total that is expected to be increased in the new plant. The principal reason for the move, according to R. G. Humphreys, president and general manager, is that the Johnson Suture corporation has outgrown its present plant.

Outgrows Present Plant.

The moving of the Johnson Suture corporation to the new plant will concentrate all of Johnson and Johnson's midwest manufacturing in the Clearing Industrial district.

The decision to build new quarters for the suture division emphasizes the growth of the midwest division of Johnson and Johnson since the company began operations here in 1933.

When the concern, which is one of the world's largest makers of surgical dressings, first entered the Chicago area seven years ago, it leased 156,000 square feet of floor space. The plant since then has been increased to 332,000, and it recently was purchased by the company.

In addition to this plant, and the new one now under construction, the company has under lease nearly 100,000 square feet for the manufacture of gas masks for the government. In all, the concern will have nearly 500,000 square feet of floor space for midwest manufacturing.

Will Be Air Conditioned.

The new building, to be used for making surgical sutures, the materials used in the sewing together of wounds, will have all interior walls of glazed tile. Fluerescent lighting will be used thruout. The plant and offices will be air conditioned. The building will be equipped with a double truck dock and provisions for future switch track.

The opening of Clearing's new 26 acre addition to the industrial district was begun about July 1. Development work on sewers, water, streets, sidewalks, and landscaping has been completed.

The finished project has opened up a new entrance to the district, allowing west bound traffic on Marquette road to proceed directly across Cicero avenue into the manufacturing area.

NEW McINTOSH HOME PROJECT TO OPEN TODAY

Arthur T. McIntosh & Co. yesterday reported the opening this weekend of a 40 acre residential development to be known as Forest Home, half a mile west of Midlothian. The land is bounded on the north by 151st street, on the west by Lavergne avenue, on the south by 153d street, and on the east by Cicero avenue. Five homes already are under construction. These and seven others have been sold. The houses have four and five rooms and are in the $3,000 and $4,000 bracket. According to Hilding N. Johnson, sales manager, the company's Garden Homes project, at 149th and Crawford, has been sold out.

Chicago Firm Finances South Dakota Home Group

Dovenmuehle, Inc., Chicago mortgage banking house, yesterday completed negotiations for a $117,500 mortgage which will be secured by a 46 duplex home project to be built in Rapid City, S. D. It is a 4 per cent FHA insured loan, maturing in 27 years. Harry C. Eigelberner, secretary of Dovenmuehle, said the housing project is being built on the leveled-off top of a high hill only four blocks from the business center.

MINNESOTA BEATS WASHINGTON; OHIO WINS

GAME-BREAKERS RANGE THE FOOTBALL FRONT

Tom Harmon, having just returned the opening kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown against California and given Michigan a 14 to 0 lead with a subsequent 72 yard touchdown run, is stopped for a yard loss by an unidentified Bear lineman. Harmon later went 86 yards for a touchdown, plunged eight yards for a fourth and passed five yards for a fifth as the Wolverines helped the Gary, Ind., product celebrate his 21st birthday yesterday by beating California at Berkeley, 41 to 0. No. 63 is Ralph Fritz, Michigan guard. California players, in white jerseys, are No. 66, Center Dave Gueen; No. 45, Tackle Bob Reinhard; No. 52, End Ted Staffler, and No. 37, End Ray Dunne. Michigan flew to the coast in three big air liners. When Harmon got started it was California that was up in the air. [Associated Press Wirephotos.]

George Franck, one of the Western conference's leading sprinters, helped Minnesota make it a sweep for the Big Nine over Pacific coast schools by returning a kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown against Washington at Minneapolis. Chasing Franck on his dash are Guard Ed Friedman (No. 66) and Quarter Back Roy Carlson (No. 21). The Gopher (No. 86) is Tackle Ed Lechner. Minnesota won, 19 to 14.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 28.—George Franck led Minnesota's Gophers to a thrilling 19 to 14 victory over the University of Washington this afternoon in Memorial stadium. An opening day throng of 46,000 watched the intersectional rivals meet for the third time in a series in which the Huskies never have been victorious.

Franck scored Minnesota's first touchdown. This soon proved insufficient to halt the Huskies, who not only immediately matched the touchdown, but overcame an added Gopher field goal in the stirring second period. Then, after Washington's second touchdown march sent the visitors to the front 14 to 10, Franck raced 98 yards with the subsequent kickoff.

Franck Injured Saving Game.

Thus, the Gophers led at the intermission, 17 to 14. As later events proved this was the payoff, but before the story had been completed, Franck saved the advantage he had created. Early in the fourth period, after Ernie Steele had taken the ball from Dean McAdams of the Huskies on a fake kick, Franck crashed into Steele and Rudy Mucha, his blocker, along the south side lines. Franck knocked both Mucha and the ball carrier out of bounds, saved a certain touchdown run, and was himself stretched unconscious.

Five minutes later Franck was led from the field as the thousands in the stone and steel horseshoe stood and applauded. It was announced after the game that Franck had suffered no serious injury.

The scoring, except for a safety which Washington presented to Minnesota in the third period when Mucha passed the ball over McAdams' head and out of the end zone, came in the first half. This scarcely affected subsequent play of either team, altho it was precaution against a possible tying field goal by the Huskies.

Huskies' Attack Is Deceptive.

Even with the decline in scoring, the second half was replete with action, missed opportunities, fumbles, and finally an error in judgment by Minnesota's quarter back which gave the Huskies a last chance in the closing minute when the game should have been carefully tucked away for the Gophers by a fourth down kick.

It was a spectator's game thruout. Every form of scoring was included in the parade, touchdowns, points after touchdowns, a field goal, and a safety. There were splendid kicks, far more deception in attack by Washington than Minnesota wanted, but in any survey honors must go to Franck.

With his individual brilliance Franck checked what might have become a rout. Washington had jammed and passed its way 75 yards for the touchdown pass from McAdams to Bill Marx, right end. That touchdown and subsequent point sent Washington ahead, 14 to 10. One minute and 28 seconds remained in the first half.

Mr. Franck Sets Sail.

Eighteen seconds later Franck caught Johnny Mizen's kickoff on Minnesota's 2 yard line. For twenty-five yards he ran straight up center field apparently into the enveloping

Berkeley, Cal., Sept. 28 [Special].—Tom Harmon became a man today. In celebration of his 21st birthday the former Gary, Ind., high school star practically singled handed routed a highly touted University of California 11 with touchdown runs of 94, 86 and 72 yards as Michigan opened its season with a 41 to 0 triumph before 35,000.

He Kicks Points, Too.

Harmon began the afternoon by receiving the opening kickoff on his own 6 yard line and racing back thru a bewildered California defense. His second touchdown came on a seventy-two yard return of a punt by Tackle Bob Reinhard early in the second quarter. Later in the same period, Harmon started wide around California's right end, cut back outside of tackle, and sped up the center of the field past Safetyman Ora Tatcher for eighty-six yards and another score.

He place kicked the extra points after each of these touchdowns and then was replaced by Cliff Wise, who got the fourth Michigan touchdown on a one yard plunge. Tom came back at the start of the fourth period and immediately put the finishing touches to an unbroken seventy-six yard advance by blasting thru the California line from the 7 yard line and again adding the extra point.

It's A Blow to Bears.

Late in the final period, after Michigan had blocked a California punt to gain the ball on the Bears' 41 yard line, and five plays had moved it to the 5 yard line, Harmon tossed a pass to Half Back Dave Nelson for the last Michigan touchdown. His attempted place kick for the extra

AS PARK DIMENSIONS GO, SO GOES SERIES—HERE'S DOPE ON LAYOUTS

[This is the first of a series of three stories discussing the world series between the Cincinnati Reds and Detroit Tigers which opens Wednesday in Cincinnati.]

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Sept. 28.—Ever since Joe Marty batted .500 for the Cubs against the Yanks in the 1938 world series, after a thunderous .243 in the regular season, we have been mighty timid about experting short baseball sets on the basis of all-season statistics. And we're not fixin' to do so now, tho we have tons of baseball numerals at our elbows.

About the only statistics that can be relied upon in jumping from regular season play into the world series are the park dimensions. There are to be no encroachments on the playing field in either Cincinnati or Detroit, so we feel free to expert both Crosley field, home of the Reds and Briggs stadium, home of the Tigers, without the danger of feeling silly later on, like a New York prize-fight prophet.

Dimensions Bear on Strategy.

The dimensions of the ball park have a great bearing on the strategy employed by the teams playing in it. Players are bought and developed to a marked extent on the basis of the way the parks are laid out. Parks that have short foul lines like pull hitters; parks that have close right field fences like left-handed hitters with adjustments for short left field areas favoring right-hand hitters, etc.

For the first time in five autumns this year's world series is to be played on equitable premises. The Yankee stadium is a trick layout built for home runs by left-handed hitters. The right field wall, and it's only 3 feet high, is only 296 feet away. There is another low

OUR BOOTS WINS $67,000 BELMONT FUTURITY EASILY

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Closing with a rush, the 6 to 1 shot, Our Boots, won the $67,000 Belmont Futurity today before 25,000.

The victory put Our Boost, a bargain 2 year old owned by Royce Martin of Toledo, at the head of the current juvenile ranking over King Cole, Whirlaway, and New World. These three trailed Our Boost in that order at the end of the six and one-half furlong sprint down the Widener straightaway.

Comes Up on Inside.

Well back soon after the start, Our Boots came up on the inside to finish a length and a half in front of King Cole, the 5 to 2 favorite owned by Ogden Phipps of New York. The Bulldog colt paid $14.20 to win, $6.80 to place and $4.60 to show.

The winner's time was 1:15 3-5. The crowd bet $221,886 on the race, pushing the total for the day well over a million.

In addition to the 51st Futurity Belmont had the 21st running of the Jockey club gold cup, a two mile event. It was a galloping victory for William Woodward's 3 year old, Fenelon, a 1 to 5 favorite. He easily distanced the other two starters, Joseph E. Widener's Iron Shot and the Barrington stable's Olympus. Fenelon won $6,700.

Our Boots Repeats.

Our Boots was virtually an "unknown" when he won the Futurity trial last Tuesday, defeating Whirlaway and New World. Today his performance firmly established him as one of the leaders if not the best of the season. He came back off the fast early pace to run over the leaders and win going away.

Whirlaway, from the Chicago owned Calumet stable of Warren Wright, got off to an unusually fast start, but faltered in the stretch and trailed King Cole by two lengths while finishing the same distance ahead of Alfred Vanderbilt's New World. King Cole couldn't get to the front as he usually does. He ran into the lead about a furlough out, but tired after making New World stop and was unable to stave off Our Boots.

STANFORD WINS, 27-0; FIRST FOR SHAUGHNESSY

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 28 (AP).—Playing its first game under Clark Shaughnessy, former University of Chicago football coach, Stanford university today defeated the University of San Francisco, 27 to 0.

In the first game of a double header in Kezar stadium the University of Santa Clara routed University of Utah, 34 to 13.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Sept. 28.—Ohio State university's football team is ready to defend its Western conference championship. Capt. Jim Langhurst, Charley Maag, Don Scott, Charley Anderson, and their Buckeye colleagues today allowed they hanker to keep the title with a convincing 30 to 7 trouncing of Pittsburgh's Panthers before 52,877 in Ohio stadium.

Altho they revealed nothing startling for the benefit of their future rivals' espionage agents, the Buckeyes demonstrated that they still boast the power native to Ohio State elevens. The regular eleven was excused from duty for practically the entire last quarter, and their replacements came thru with the fourth and final touchdown of the afternoon.

Maag, the big, blond kicking specialist of the Ohios, provided the only points in the first half, his field goal from the Pitt 30 yard line in the fifth minute of the second period producing a 3 to 0 intermission lead. He left the game early in the third period, but not until he had blocked a quick-kick and set up a touchdown plunge by Langhurst.

Thurbon Scores for Pitt.

The Panthers' widely heralded Ed [Special Delivery] Jones didn't quite live up to advance notices, his thunder being stolen by Full Back George Kracum and Half Back Bob Thurbon, who accounted for the Pittsburgh touchdown with a sixty-five yard march in the third period.

The last three Ohio touchdowns were made via passes, Scott pitching two of these, one to Langhurst and another to Anderson, the big Negro sophomore whom Buckeye constituents are touting as the end of the Humorists, poets, sport commentators—they've all combined their talents to pack this 64 page volume with variety.

NEW WAKE BOOK

INDIANS FINALLY BEAT TIGERS, 2-1; NEWSOM LOSES

Boudreau Bats In Both of Cleveland's Runs.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Sept. 28.—The Detroit Tigers, 1940 American league champions, today took the first of their preworld series workouts. They were assisted by the Cleveland Indians, who still were pretty grim about things, what with their pennant disappointments and the fight for second place.

By the way, the score was 2 to 1, Cleveland.

The exercises were viewed by 18,346, but don't be puzzled too much by the turnout. Under the assumption the pennant race still would be raging, more than 35,000 forehanded Clevelanders and Detroiters had purchased tickets for today. When they were informed that there could be no rebates, 18,346 of these forehanded purchasers or friends of theirs, decided they had nothing better to do than go out to see the anticlimax show.

Newsom Is Loser.

There was no tomato throwing today. When four carloads of Detroit fans breezed into town, their luggage was scanned for possible weapons, but, aside from a few bottles, there was no contraband. The Detroit hot sports made it clear they had not brought the bottles along to throw. There was evidence supporting their statements.

Three of the Tiger pitchers expected to work in the world series, Johnny Gorsica, Buck Newsom, and Schoolboy Rowe, loosened up in the workout today, and in the course of the calisthenics Newsom was nipped for his fifth defeat of the season.

Mel Harder pitched all the way for the Indians and held the Tigers to seven hits. The one run made by the Tigers scored on an error.

Chapman Wakes Up.

Newsom entered the scene at the start of the fifth and lost the decision in the sixth. Ben Chapman, of all people, singled to center and so did Roy Weatherly [if they had done as much on any of three occasions yesterday, the pennant race might still be blazing].

Newsom tried to pick the punchy Chapman off second, but threw into center field, both runners advancing. Lou Boudreau then singled to center, scoring Chapman and Weatherly.

The Tigers leave for home by special train after tomorrow's game and will entrain for Cincinnati Monday afternoon. A huge civic demonstration is planned for the Tigers arrival tomorrow night. Score:

Blues Shut Out Colonels, 1-0; Play-Off Tied

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 28 (AP).—The Kansas City Blues tied the American association final playoff series at two all tonight by shutting out the Louisville Colonels, 1 to 0. All four series games have been decided by one run.

Phil Rizzuto, Blues shortstop who batted in the only run, came near to being the goat when his low throw to first on Ernie Andres' grounder prolonged a Colonel ninth inning rally with two on base. Woody Williams ended the game wit ha line drive to Hitchcock.

Singles by Johnny Sturm, Frenchy Bordagaray and Rizzuto after two were down, produced the winning run in the third.

Altho ineligible to play in the series, since he joined Detroit too late in the season, his teammates voted him a generous cut in their profits. The world series between the Tigers and Cincinnati Reds starts Wednesday in Cincinnati.

White Sox and Smith Defeat Browns, 5 to 1

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox yesterday assured themselves of a cut in the world series purse. Under the southpaw guidance of Eddie Smith, they defeated the Browns, thus making it a mathematical certainty that they can finish no worse than in a fourth place tie with Boston. The score of Smitty's expert job, his 14th success of the year, was 5 to 1.

One of Smith's most able helpers was Bob Kennedy, who, altho held to one hit, provided more of a lead than the towheaded left hander needed. Kennedy tripled in the second inning, and as the bases were filled at the moment, the wallop produced maximum results. The hit cut short the assignment of Jack Kramer who was followed by Roxy Lawson, and Bill Trotter, both of whom were abused slightly.

Appling Gets Two.

Luke Appling, who still has a chance to win the league batting title for the second time in his career, didn't experience any unhappiness against the trio of Brown pitchers. Luke helped to arrange for Kennedy's cleanup by walking. He singled in the third, walked again in the sixth, and tripled in the eighth. Rip Radcliff, the little Brownie who was also interested in the crown, made his 200th hit of the year, but it was his only one in four attempts.

Kennedy Tees Off.

Solters' single to left set off the Sox's eruption in the second. Appling walked. Wright flied to Radcliff. A wild pitch let Solters and Appling advance, so with first base unoccupied, Kramer decided to walk Rosenthal. The idea failed because Kennedy whistled his triple into right center. Smith walked, but the fun was halted abruptly on Kolloway's double play grounder to Clift.

McQuinn, who tripled past Rosenthal with two out in the second, was the only Brown on base in the first two innings. In the third two of them survived. Cullenbine walked and Lucadello singled, but two were out, and Radcliff fouled to Tresh. A pass to Berardino at the start of the fifth did no harm. But Radcliff's single with one gone in the sixth brought on trouble for Smith. He walked Laabs and Clift followed with a double to center, scoring Radcliff. Smitty snuffed out the threat quickly on McQuinn's pop to Appling and three strikes for Berardino.

Sox Get Productive.

Appling opened the sixth with a pass and galloped to third on Wright's single. He scored on Rosenthal's fly to Radcliff. Wright reached third safely when Berardino tried to cut him down on Kennedy's roller. Then Smith lined to Radcliff and Wright might have scored, but he had run half way home when the ball was hit and after going back he decided he had best stay there.

Because fourth place is at stake, John Rigney will pitch the season's final today against the St. Louis Browns, who will use either Elden Auker or Bill Cox.

Jim Webb, the Sox second baseman, who took a week off because of a flu attack, was back in uniform yesterday, thus assuring his presence during the city series.

BRADLEY DODGES SHOWDOWN WITH VITT ON 1941 JOB

Cleveland, O., Sept. 28 (AP).—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians asked President Alva Bradley today for a showdown on his status next year—but didn't get it. By accident, Vitt said, he met Bradley shortly before today's game with Detroit and said he'd like to know where he stood.

"To tell the truth, Oscar, I don't know," Bradley replied. "Nothing will be done until the board of directors meets after I come back from a vacation."

Vitt's job has been in doubt since a delegation of players petitioned for his removal in June. At that time Bradley compromised the revolt. Bradley said Steve O'Neill's resignation as manager of the Buffalo International league club had no significance with relation to the Cleveland situation. O'Neill formerly managed the Indians.

Del Baker, Detroit manager, said he knew of no developments regarding reports O'Neill would be named a Tiger coach.

NEWARK BEATS BALTIMORE, 12-6, TO LEAD SERIES

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 28 (AP).—Newark took the important fifth game in the International league playoff series with Balltimore today, pounding five Oriole pitchers for a 26 to 6 victory. The Bears now lead in the series, three games to two.

Flody Stromme, Oriole right hander who was knocked from the mound in the first inning of the third game, lasted only until the second today when the Bears scored five times on five hits and an error.

SOFTBALL FINAL TODAY.

The 19th Ward Democratic Organization's softball finals will be played today at 87th street and Oakley avenue. Murphy Nabors will meet the Longwood Manors for the championship. The Duffys and Trojans will fight it out for third and fourth place awards.

Cardinals Win from Cubs, 4-3, in 12 Innings

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 28.—The Cardinals and Cubs battled 12 innings today in the semi-final game of the season before the Cardinals won, 4 to 3, for their second straight over the Chicagoans.

The Cubs, counting three runs in the second inning, led 3 to 1, until the eighth, when the Cardinals solved Bill Lee for two runs and a deadlock, which lasted until one was out in the 12th, when Martin Marion singled with the bases loaded. It was the 15th Cardinal hit and the ninth off Lee, who was charged with his 17th defeat. He has won nine games.

Gabby's Plans Go Wrong.

Tuning up for the Chicago series with the White Sox, Manager Gabby Hartnett had intended letting his pitchers go three innings apiece, but after Larry French worked the first three and Claude Passeau the next three, Lee remained on the Chicago mound to the end.

Southpaw Max Lanier, who now has won nine games and lost six, went the 12 innings for the Cardinals, and, altho he yielded 12 hits, pitched shutout baseball after the second inning.

Eleven strikeouts were registered by the Cub flingers, French having two, Passeau five and Lee four. The victory was the Cardinals' 13th over Chicago in 21 games this year.

Cubs Get Three Runs.

Glen Russel opened the second inning with a single and Jim Gleeson followed with a double, Dallessandro hit a long liner to Walker, McCullough doubled and Mattick singled to complete the Cubs' three run assault.

The Cardinals picked on Passeau for one run in the fourth on Slaughter's infield hit, Mize's single and Stu Martin's long fly. St. Louis tied the score on Lee in the eighth on singles by Brown and Walker, a force play, Slaughter's stolen base and Gillenwater's single.

barrier at the end of the 301 foot left foul line. There is no such snide architecture involved in this year's world series.

It's Well Kept Up.

Crosley field is an old time plant, not very well located and not of eye-pleasing exterior. Despite its poor location, it is not too far from the heart of the downtown section of Cincinnati and only two blocks from Cincy's magnificent new Union station. But it is well kept up, and presents a playing area fair to contestants on both sides.

The normal capacity of Crosley field is only 29,401, and will be sprung for the world series to something under 33,000 with the addition of circus seats—in foul territory. But we didn't set out to expert the gate receipts.

It's a 387 Foot Smack.

The distance from the home plate to the high concrete wall in center field is 387 feet, a good smack but not too far for a good boy when he gets hold of one. The right foul line is 366 feet long [70 feet longer than in Yankee stadium.] The left field line is 328 feet long.

The foregoing dimensions, especially the ones in left, offer no advantage to the home team. If Hank Greenberg and Rudy York find they like the pitching of Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters they are going to love that left field wall in Cincy.

Briggs stadium, except as viewed from the outside, scarcely is recognizable as the same plant in which the Cubs blew the world title five years ago. There was no permanent stand in left field then and none in center, a dinky bleacher in right. Now double and triple deck stands surround the field.

Detroit Capacity Is 58,000.

The capacity of this, best located park in the majors in proximity to the downtown section, is 58,000 [sold out, by the way, for the three games scheduled for Detroit, with four applicants for every seat].

The distance from the home plate to the center field wall in Briggs stadium is 440 feet. [Same as Comiskey park.] The left field line, which runs into a high screen, is 340 feet. The right field line is 325 feet. There also is a screen at the end of this line.

Thus, the left field line in Detroit is 12 feet longer than in Cincinnati, the distance to the center field wall is 53 feet farther, while the right field line is 41 feet longer in Cincinnati than in Detroit.

The pop and hot dogs are excellent at both parks and so are the peanuts. You can get hamburgers in Detroit, but the line has been discontinued in Cincinnati.

Cleveland Sends Tigers Apology for Fruit Bombs

Cleveland, O., Sept. 28 (AP).—The city of Cleveland officially apologized to Detroit's Tigers today for the fan flung fruit barrage which interrupted the deciding game in the American league championship race yesterday.

Sincerest apologies and congratulations upon winning the pennant were transmitted to Del Baker, Tiger manager, by Henry S. Brainard, city law director and acting mayor.

Betty Jameson Again Takes National Title

Del Monte, Cal., Sept. 28 (AP).—Betty Jameson of San Antonio retained her women's national golf championship today by scoring a 6 and 5 victory over Jane Cothran of Greenville, S. C.

In retaining her title gained in the finals last year over Dorothy Kirby, Miss Jameson was six over par at lengthy Pebble Beach, and Miss Cothran was 16 over. It was Miss Cothran's first trip to the finals in many years of campaigning.

The Texas miss scored a two over par 40 to Miss Cothran's 42 on the first nine. But on the back nine she won seven of the nine holes, and might have made it eight had she not conceded a five foot putt for a half on the 18th. For the morning, Miss Jameson scored 78, two over women's par, and Miss Cothran had 88.

After the morning round Miss Jameson appeared to have a good chance of setting a new record for high scoring, the present mark being made by Glenna Collett in 1938, a 13 and 12 victory over Virginia Van Wie.

But on the 20th Miss Cothran picked up a birdie. On the 22d, after sinking a 20 footer for what appeared to give her the hole, the champion notified officials she had touched the ball and caused it to move in addressing it. She was penalized one stroke and halved the hole.

Miss Jameson then pushed one off on the 23d to lose to a par and her chance for a new record score was gone.

TODAY DECIDES APPLING BID FOR BATTING CROWN

Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees, Luke Appling of the White Sox, and Rip Radcliff of the Browns will draw the baseball spotlight today in the final games of the 1940 major league season. This trio battles it out for the American league's individual batting championship, with DiMaggio entering the last day with a percentage lead of .00283 over Appling and .00499 over Radcliff.

Appling, by getting two hits and two walks in four trips to the plate yesterday, boosted his average from .345 to .34699, and retained a chance to overtake DiMaggio, who won the title in 1939. DiMaggio, in a double header yesterday, cracked out four hits in nine official times at bat, and increased his mark from .348 to .34982.

Radcliff, leader thru most of the season, practically was eliminated from the race when he got only one hit in four times at bat yesterday, dropping from .345 to .34483. Averages of leaders follow:

	AB.	H.	Pct.
Joe DiMaggio	506	177	.34982
Luke Appling	562	195	.34699
Rip Radcliff	580	200	.34483

ADVOCATOR WINS $5,000 HANDICAP AT HAWTHORNE

It's 4th Stake of Season for Howard Stable.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Charles S. Howard's racing establishment won its fourth stake of the Chicago season when Advocator led the way home in the $5,000 Autumn handicap yesterday at Hawthorne. After going around his rivals on the last turn Advocator charged up to take the lead soon after the stretch run began. Jockey Jack Richard kept him running powerfully to withstand Bob's Boys' closing rush. His margin of victory was a length. Mrs. J. F. Waters' Talked About, which had made the pace for more than three-quarters of a mile, had enough left to save third money.

This was the second stake Advocator had won for his owner this season. He had taken the Stars and Stripes handicap at Arlington Park. The Howard organization had scored again with Mioland in the American Derby and Porter's Cap in the Washington Park futurity. In the absence of Trainer Tom Smith, Burley Parke has been conditioning Advocator.

A Big Day for Richard.

It was quite a day for Jockey Richard. Advocator's victory gave him a clean sweep for riding honors in the three $5,000 stakes on the Hawthorne schedule. Earlier in the meeting he had brought in Burning Star in the Hawthorne handicap and Valdina Myth in the Juvenile handicap.

Talked About went out with a rush to take the lead in the sprint for the clubhouse turn. Jockey Johnny Adams took a hold of him as they started the run down the backstretch with Montsin racing in second place. Busy Morn and Rude Awakening were close up. Advocator had been shuffled back on the turn, but showed a strong disposition to run as soon as he settled into stride in the backstretch.

Approaching the far turn, Talked About maintained his lead, but his rivals began bunching up in close pursuit. On the turn Advocator, sweeping around on the outside, moved up steadily and was ready to challenge the pacemaker as the run thru the stretch began. Busy Morn, too, was in a contending position, having found plenty of racing room along the rail when the others went wide.

Bob's Boys Closes Fast.

Between the head of the stretch and the eighth pole Advocator and Talked About put on a vigorous duel. Then the Howard colorbearer prevailed.

Meanwhile Bob's Boys had been coming up from far behind. He closed resolutely in the last furlong to pass Talked About, but he couldn't endanger Advocator.

Comendador II. outran a field of good sprinters in the Bull Dog purse, secondary feature on the program. After taking it easy for the first half mile while three of his rivals were setting an exceptionally fast pace Comendador II. moved up rapidly in the stretch, got to the lead in the last sixteenth and drew away to win by a little more than a length. Ballinderry was second and Designer third.

Michigan and Harmon Crush California

point was wide, leaving his point total for the day at 28.

It was the worst licking California has taken since Southern California rolled up a 70 to 0 score against it in 1930. At no time did California threaten the Michigan squad, which operated as efficiently with a reserve lineup in the game as it did when fine down field blocking was clearing the way for Harmon's long gains. Only once did California invade Michigan territory, getting to the Wolverines' 40 yard line in the fourth period when a desperate pass by Hank Zacharias, substitute quarter back, was completed to End Ray Dunne. Michigan's line quickly threw back the threat and the Wolverines took the ball.

The statistics:

	Michigan.	Cal.
First downs	23	3
Total yards gained	351	32
Yards gained, rushing	295	8
Yards gained, passing	56	24
Forward passes attempted	13	9
Forward passes completed	7	2

TROJANS TIED BY WASHINGTON STATE, 14 TO 14

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 28 (AP).—The University of Southern California held its annual coming out party today, but Washington State, supposedly the poorest team in the Pacific Coast conference, proved the surprise. The northwesterners tied U. S. C., 14 to 14.

The game, played before 40,000 in Memorial coliseum, was hardly two minutes old before U. S. C. scored on a break. A bad pass from center slipped by Half Back Bill Sewell, Bob Jones of U. S. C. recovered on the Cougar 11 yard line, and three plays later Bobby Robertson hit the right side of the Cougar line for a touchdown.

In the second period Billy Sewell started a triple lateral. The ball went to Les McLennan, thence to Dale Holmes—and then over the Trojan goal line, all for a distance of 36 yards.

In the third quarter Peoples passed to Jack Banta and he crashed over for a touchdown. Seven minutes before the end of the game, Sewell fired a pass to Felix Fletcher, who raced for a touchdown on a play that measured 60 yards.

Motisi Ready for 2d Battle with Taylor

The rematch is set for eight rounds, three more than a previous meeting won by the C. Y. O. fighter last year. It was 1 of 11 straight victories scored by Motisi, Jack Rymer becoming victim No. 11 in Kansas City on Feb. 22. After holding Jack Cooper to an eight round draw decision in White City in a subsequent encounter, Motisi's undefeated string was snapped by Leonard Bennett. Tony returned to action June 17 by beating Johnny Pleasant, also in the Marigold arena.

Three additional matches of eight rounds are on tomorrow's card. Nate Bolden, 1937 intercity Golden Gloves middleweight winner, will be searching for his fifth consecutive triumph against Joe Sutka. Elza Thompson, former Indianapolis sectional Golden Gloves heavyweight winner, is paired with Clarence Brown, and Al Tibbits, Danville, Ill., light heavyweight, with Settimo Terracina.

In his last Chicago appearance Thompson finished Henry Wacker in one round. Elza, who weighs 233½ pounds, also knocked out Alex Kettles in Chicago, but he is not unbeatable as testified by a two round knockout he suffered at the hands of Emanuel Murray in New York last summer. Brown qualified for the match by conquering Johnny Whiters in Omaha.

There also will be a professional wrestling show in White City and an amateur boxing show in Broadway armory tomorrow.

Havre de Grace Handicap Won by Challedon

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 28 (AP).—They couldn't jinx Challedon today.

He won the 29th running of the $15,000 added Havre de Grace handicap and became the only horse ever to win this race twice and the only one ever to tote 130 pounds first across the finish line. His time of 1:50 2-5 was 1-5 second off the track record.

Honey Cloud Second.

The big bay son of Challenger II.-Laura Gal, the 1939 horse of the year and current king of the handicap division, won as he pleased.

With 12,000 fans on hand to welcome the Maryland bred star in his first appearance at home since he took the Pimlico Special last November, Challedon scored by two lengths and a half over Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud.

The Brandywine stable's Masked General was third, a half length behind Honey Cloud, and the front running Volitant, from the Saratoga stable, was last in the field of four, 10 lengths behind the leader.

Third Time for Woolf.

George Woolf, the only jockey who ever rode three winners of the mile and an eighth fixture, let Challedon run his usual race, keeping him well back, while Volitant and Honey Cloud battled for the lead, but when Woolf took the wraps off him coming into the homestretch Challedon pointed his nose toward the finish line and came breezing in like a homing pigeon.

Challedon picked up a purse of $11,700, running his life time earnings to $312,860. Heavily favored, he returned only $2.50 to win and $2.30 to place.

Budge Defeats Tilden, Enters Pro Net Final

Donald Budge and Fred Perry, former world's amateur tennis champions, will meet today for the world's professional championship at the Chicago Town and Tennis club.

Budge, who is from Oakland, Cal., gained the final round of the 14th annual tourney yesterday by a straight set victory over the 47 year old Bill Tilden. The scores were, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

Budge Too Fast.

Tilden bowed to Budge's superior speed and power yesterday. Repeatedly Tilden's famed accuracy and sharp shooting court tactics failed.

Tilden's best chance came in the first set when Budge, leading at 5-4, was down 15-40 in the tenth game. A series of cross court shots that flicked the baseline pulled Budge out of this situation, however, and he won the set 6-4.

In the second set, Budge was at the top of his game. He won three of his service games at love. Tilden made a final desperate try in the third set. With the score 3-2 against him, he finally cracked Budge's service to tie up the set. But again Budge had little trouble in running out 6-4.

Play Doubles Final.

The championship match today will start at 1:30. Following the singles final, Budge and Perry will play Tilden and Vincent Richards for the doubles title.

They won their semi-final match yesterday from Nogrady and Art Hendrix, coach at the United States Naval academy, in four sets, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, 9-7.

Giants Whip Eagles, 20-14, Before 25,000

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 28 (AP).—Ward Cuff, former Marquette university star, led the New York Giants to a 20 to 14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles in a National Professional Football league game before 25,000 at Shibe park tonight. Cuff contributed 14 of the 20 points, scoring one touchdown and kicking two field goals and two points after touchdown.

Davey O'Brien sparked the Eagles to a touchdown in the opening minutes, but the defending eastern division title holders came roaring back to go ahead on Cuff's forty-one yard run and in the second half twice held the Eagles for downs on the 6 yard line. Cuff preceded his run with a field goal from the 37.

In the second period, after another Eagle drive was stopped on the 18, a series of forward passes put the ball on the Eagles' 25. On fourth down Cuff booted his second field goal from the 30 yard stripe to give the Giants a 13 to 7 edge at the half.

A thirty-seven pass, Eddie Miller to Jim Poole, gave the Giants another touchdown soon after the second half started, but the Eagles rallied and with O'Brien sparking the drive, went to the 15. O'Brien then tossed to Kolberg fo ra first down on the two from where Dick Riffle went off tackle for the score.

The Eagles made 15 first downs to 8, but gained only fortythree yards by rushing to the Giants' one hundred and fifty-three. O'Brien completed 14 of 30 passes for one hundred and sixty-nine yards. Lineups:

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox and the Cubs, on Tuesday, will touch off another chapter in what is known as City Series strife. They have been doing this thing almost annually for so long that one or the other should be wised up to the fact that it might be well to let the event lapse by default. But the Cubs, the guys who really should know by this time that they have no business being in the same ball park with the Sox, have challenged, so the show will be renewed. The Sox can't be blamed for not ignoring the defi. They know all about that old axiom—"never give a sucker a break."

It is almost generally conceded that the Cubs made a 100 per cent mess of their National league affairs this year. By the series of brilliant trades for which they have become so noted, by the nursing of sacred cows on which there isn't enough healthy meat to make up a five cent hamburger, and by all around smugness, the Cubs have deteriorated to such an extent that a good portion of the National league seems to have gone away and left them. But this doesn't mean they are a cinch to flop again in their toil with the Sox.

An Old Fashioned Team.

The Sox really had a pretty good ball team this year. There wasn't a team in the league that wasn't afraid of them, and this respect wasn't built up merely because Mr. James Dykes, the manager, is a convincing talker. The Sox built up the respect by going out and doing things to the best of their ability.

For one reason or another, they cling to the quaint idea that a ball player isn't decked out in a fancy uniform and paid good wages so that he can provide amusement for autograph seekers. The Sox aren't afraid to get a little mud on their shoes or dust on their uniforms. They merely try to play baseball, which after all isn't a bad idea, being as they are in that particular business.

For the city series, Mr. Dykes is going to be well fixed for pitchers. He'll have Ted Lyons, John Rigney, Thornton Lee, Eddie Smith, and one or two others, and he'll hardly need all of them against a team that nobody has dared accuse of being powerful at bat. And, of course, Mr. Dykes will have a few hitters and a few infielders as well as a quantity of spirit.

Sox Have Wide Margin.

The Cubs have had difficulty with the Sox ever since 1906, when their fall meeting was a city as well as world series. The Cubs of that period were excellent workmen on the ball field. The Sox were the "hitless wonders," so when the experts balanced this weak attack against the Cubs' pitching and hitting, they rightfully figured the Sox were lambs on the way to the packing house. The Sox won that world series without much trouble and judging by subsequent happenings thru the years the Cubs still haven't recovered from that shock.

In 22 city series, the White Sox have won the Chicago baseball championship 16 times. The Cubs have won five. Their first rivalry, in 1903, ended in a tie after each had won seven games.

While Cub fans might not be vitally interested in the impending series, feeling as they do, that it is just going to be another one of those same things, they really should come out and take a look. It might be their last chance to see Gabby Hartnett's present combination. Some of the members thereof looked so feeble during the season that it is a cinch a few of them will be traded. Just who'll take 'em, we don't know, but maybe the club's front office can figure it out.

Tuesday—Wrigley field, 1:30 p. m.
Wednesday—Wrigley field, 1:30 p. m.
Thursday—Comiskey park, 8:15 p. m.
Friday—Comiskey park, 1:30 p. m.
Saturday—Comiskey park, 8:15 p. m.

ILLNESS FORCES OUT BOUDREAU AS ILLINI COACH

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 28 [Special].—Plans to engage Louis Boudreau, Cleveland shortstop and former University of Illinois basketball and baseball star, as a part time member of the Illinois staff have been thwarted by his necessity to undergo an operation.

Boudreau's appointment to assist in basketball and baseball during November, December, January, and February had been made by the board of directors of the athletic association and approved by the trustees of the university.

However, Boudreau today notified W. S. Wilson, director of athletics, that his physician had ordered an appendectomy after the close of the baseball season and that it would be impossible for him to take the post. It is regarded as probable that he will come here next year after the close of the baseball season.

N. U. Varsity Gives Frosh 25-0 Beating

Northwestern put on a football dress rehearsal yesterday for Saturday's opener with Syracuse by defeating the freshmen, 25 to 0, in what amounted to one-half of a regulation game. The rest of the afternoon was devoted to an intrasquad scrimmage.

Don Clawson, junior full back, scored two touchdowns on a series of line smashes. Ike Kepford, junior half back, scored one touchdown on a ten yard run and set up another on a thirty-five yard dash down the side lines.

The varsity opened the game with the second team and shortly after the kickoff recovered a fumble on the freshmen's 25 yard line. The touchdown was accomplished in two plays, Paul Soper going over from the 12 yard line.

In the second quarter it took the varsity five plays to go sixty yards for a score. Clawson going over from the 8 yard line. Bill De Corrovont engineered the next touchdown march as he threw a fifteen yard pass to Jim Smith, followed by another of twenty-five yards to Clawson. Kepford went around end for ten yards to score.

Later, Kepford intercepted a pass and returned twenty-five yards to the frosh 30 yard line. De Corrovont passed twenty yards to Kepford and Clawson hit center for ten yards and touchdown, Dick Erdlitz converted.

ILLINOIS VARSITY WINS.

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 28 [Special].—The Illinois varsity today defeated the freshmen, 27 to 0, before 4,480 spectators. The frosh never penetrated beyond the varisty 25 yard line.

After a slow start, the varsity second team pushed over two second quarter touchdowns. Paul Milosevich, left half back, passed to Bob Gibbs, sophomore end, for a score. Myron Pfeifer, sophomore full back, went eight yards around left end for the second touchdown.

Johnny Worban led the third period drive, going over from the 3 yard line. Good's thirty-five yard pass to Don Elting completed the scoring.

VARSITY ROUTS IRISH FROSH.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 28 [Special].—Bill McGannon and Bob Saggau today led the Notre Dame varsity to a 57 to 13 victory over the weakest freshman team in years. McGannon scored on runs of fifty-three, thirty, and five yards. Saggau sprinted nineteen and fourteen yards for touchdowns, and tossed a scoring pass twenty-eight yards to Steve Bagarus, right half, who ran another twelve. Saggau also made a twenty-six yard run to the 4 yard line, from which Capt. Milt Piepul, full back, who kicked two extra points, booted a field goal on first down.

Creighton Miller, left half back; Russell Ashbaugh, quarter back; Matt Bolger, right end, and Bob McBride, full back, saved the frosh from a shutout. Miller, whose father captained the 1908 Notre Dame team, provided the best frosh kicking, running, and passing. He tossed a twenty-nine yard touchdown pass to Bolger late in the second quarter. Later Miller's passes to Ashbaugh sparked a sixty-six yard freshman drive against the third varsity team.

BADGERS CALL OFF SCRIMMAGE.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 28 [Special].—Because of several minor injuries on the Wisconsin varsity squad, Coach Harry Stuhldreher today called off the scheduled scrimmage with the freshmen and ordered a light drill, in which timing of forward passing plays was emphasized.

Stuhldreher indicated he may dispense with further scrimmage before the Marquette game next Saturday. The first and second teams got their first look at some of Marquette's plays this afternoon in a dummy scrimmage drill.

Squad members who are expected to be ready for heavy duty when practice is resumed Monday include Dick Embick, senior guard, who has been out with a broken hand, and Len [Bud] Seelinger, sophomore left half back, who is in the infirmary.

MOTORCYCLE RACES TODAY.

More than two score ace riders from six states are entered in the eight event program of motorcycle races at 2 o'clock this afternoon on the Hammond Raceway oval, on Route 41, two miles south of Indianapolis boulevard.

Purdue Beats Butler, 28-0, in Opening Game

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 28 [Special].—Scoring on sustained drives in each quarter with a versatile attack that fully utilized the Boilermakers' speed, Purdue opened its football season here this afternoon with a 28 to 0 victory over Butler before a crowd of 17,000.

The fast starting Boilermakers, with a number of sophomores making their first collegiate appearances, dented the Butler line for more points than the Bulldogs yielded all last season.

Score After Six Minutes.

Six minutes and 15 seconds after the kickoff, John Petty crashed over from the four yard line after a 65 yard drive down the field in which Mike Byelene and John Galvin played important rôles. In the second period, with a large sophomore delegation bearing the brunt, a 57 yard march ended with Tony Berto, sophomore right half back, slipping thru from the 3 yard line for the second touchdown.

Roll up 16 First Downs.

Purdue rolled up 16 first downs, 12 on running plays and four on passes. Butler picked up only three, one by penalty. Purdue gained 247 yards on running plays and 78 on forward passes. Butler gained only 43 yards by rushing and nine yards by passing.

Butler played without Regular Quarterback Harold Mossey of Ottawa, Ill., who became ill early today and was taken to a hospital. Trainers expressed belief he may have suffered a concussion in one of the practice sessions. Tonight he was reported to be resting easily.

Coach Mal Elward used 48 Boilermakers, testing untried material in preparation for the Ohio State game at Columbus next Saturday. Lineups:

Rockne Week in South Bend to Open Today

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 28 [Speical].—There will be an air show in South Bend tomorrow, and Knute Rockne week will be officially under way. Before the week has run its course, this thriving industrial city will have established all manner of records for itself.

The world première of "Knute Rockne—All-American" will be held in four South Bend theaters at 8:30 o'clock Friday night, and Notre Dame will première its 1940 football team against College of the Pacific at 2 o'clock Saturday. There will be a première banquet for 1,000 invited guests in the Notre Dame dining halls Thursday evening, and a première ball in the Palais Royale following the movie Friday evening.

Officials of Warner Bros. Pictures corporation estimate that upward of 100,000 persons will visit the city and campus over the week-end.

Four Network Broadcasts.

Notre Dame's record for an opening crowd at home, 40,000 for the 1939 Purdue game, seems almost certain to fall.

Four network broadcasts will originate here in three days, including Vox Pop and a W-G-N-MBS broadcast from the banquet hall [7:30 to 8 p. m.] Thursday, the Kate Smith show at 7 o'clock Friday night in the John Adams High school, and the W-G-N-MBS broadcast of the game Saturday with Guy Savage and Ronald Reagan at the microphone. Reagan, a former Des Moines sportscaster, plays the rôle of George Gipp, first Notre Dame All-American half back, in the Rockne picture.

Pat O'Brien, who plays the title rôle; Gale Page, who portrays Mrs. Rockne; Mrs. Reagan [Jane Wyman]; Donald Crisp, who enacts the part of Father Callahan; Bob Hope, Rudy Vallee, Florence Rice, Rosemary Lane, Irene Hervey, Anita Louise, Irene Rich, Lucile Fairbanks, Charlie Ruggles, and other Hollywood celebrities will attend the various functions.

Message from President.

Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. will attend the Thursday banquet to deliver a personal message from his father, the President, to Mrs. Bonnie Skiles Rockne and the Rockne children. Mrs. Martha Rockne, 81 year old mother of Rockne, also will attend.

Mayor and Mrs. Jesse Q. Pavey will give a luncheon at the South Bend Country club Thursday noon. Among the guests will be Postmaster General Frank Walker and Gov. M. C. Townsend of Indiana.

At 11 o'clock on Saturday morning the city's guests will join Father John Cavanaugh, C. S. C., vice president of the University of Notre Dame, and Mrs. Rockne and family, in a visit to the Rockne grave in Highland cemetery.

Willkie Speaks Tomorrow.

The C club of the University of Chicago, with no team of its own to cheer, is planning an excursion of Chicago alumni to the game to honor Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg, College of Pacific coach who handled the Chicago reins thru 41 years of gridiron glory and returned in 1938 to beat the Maroons, 32 to 0, in Pacific's first intersectional game.

Adding to the week's excitement was the word received late in the week that Wendell Willkie, Republican candidate for President, will address the Notre Dame student body from the steps of the Administration building Monday morning.

In addition to the downtown showing of the Rockne film, the Notre Dame student body will have two private showings on the campus Friday afternoon. And, since the football players will be practicing at that time, they will get to see the production Thursday evening.

The game itself shapes up as one of the nation's outstanding attractions of the day. The Irish will open their 52d season with their 399th contest. Coach Stagg will be opening his 51st season, having been honored by the nation's coaches on his golden jubilee last year. His teams have played 538 games, winning 318, losing 195, and tying 35.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 28.—Chicago's brash young Cardinals, the National league's latest despoilers, go stalking more football giants here tomorrow. At the stroke of 2 in State Fair park, site of the championship playoff last December, they clash with the Green Bay Packers, who a week after the most miserable exhibition in their history come back to the scene of one of their greatest triumphs.

There was, approximately, a dozen touchdowns difference, if there was any comparison at all, between the Packer team which defeated New York for the world's championship here nine months ago and the one which lost 41 to 10 to the Chicago Bears in Green Bay last week. The Packers hope to make amends for that Bear debacle tomorrow by getting back into stride against the Cardinals, who conquered the Bears Wednesday night.

Cardinals Are Handicapped.

The champions will be the favorites and will be a fairly safe bet if their two field generals, whose preparations for the Bear game consisted of six lessons from Mme. La Zonga, have shaken off their acidity. Joe Laws, the other member of the Packer signal calling corps, who was ready for the Bear game, announces himself fully recovered from the bumping that sent him out of last week's contest with a noticeable limp.

The Cardinals, unbeaten in three starts, with ties against Pittsburgh and Detroit to their credit in addition to the Bear victory, enter the game with little in their favor. It is not likely that Coach Jimmy Conzelman can lift them to frenzied effort again in so short a time after the Bear game. And injuries, to Tackle Joe Beinor and End Alton Coppage, weaken the first line of reserves.

Teamwork and a flaming mental attitude carried them to victory Wednesday night. This unified effort may be present again tomorrow, but two games against championship favorites in four days is a little too much to ask of any team, particularly one composed largely of rookies.

It's Goldenberg Day.

One of the largest crowds ever to see a professional contest in Milwaukee is expected to be on hand for this 35th game of a series which began with a 3 to 3 tie in 1921 when Paddy Driscoll and Coach Curley Lambeau each kicked a field goal. Since then the Packers have won 19 games, the Cardinals 12, and 2 have been tied.

Some of the crowd will come to honor Guard Buckets Goldenberg, former Wisconsin high school product who starred with the University of Wisconsin eleven before joining the Packers in 1933. Others will be attracted by a desire to see the team that whipped the Bears, and a few, undoubtedly, will come to give a cheer for Jimmy Conzelman, the Cardinals' new coach, who still has something of a reputation around here as coach of the Milwaukee Badgers back in the '20s. But most of the expected 25,000 will come to see whether certain of the Packers have as much will power as Rollie Hemsley.

Wailing Wall Meeting Set for Tomorrow

Moving pictures of the Washington-Minnesota game of yesterday will be one of the features of the first luncheon meeting of the Alumni Wailing Wall at noon tomorrow in the Sherman hotel. Frank McCormick, Minnesota director of athletics, will describe the pictures. Jim Masker, veteran football official, will explain the 1940 rule changes.

H. L. Wessling, general chairman, will preside, assisted by Eugene Lysen and Dr. A. A. Strauss.

The Alumni Wailing Wall was organized by a group of college alumni who desired to meet weekly during the football season to play over the previous week's games, particularly thru the medium of moving pictures of at least one of those games.

No tables are reserved and no membership fee is required. Any football fan will be welcomed. The only charge is payment for the luncheon itself.

CRICKET LEAGUE TITLE AT STAKE IN GAME TODAY

Lake Forest will play Hyde Park this afternoon in Lake Forest in an effort to clinch the Illinois Cricket league championship. Lake Forest has won 15 games and lost 2 to lead the league with a total of 30 points. Winnetka is second, 2 points behind, with 14 won and 3 lost. If Lake Forest loses today and Winnetka defeats Lake Shore at Skokie field, Winnetka, there will be a tie for first place.

Lake Forest vs. Hyde Park, at Lake Forest.
Winnetka vs. Lake Shore at Skokie field, Winnetka.

Almost Enough for a McAfee Eleven

BEARS' ROOKIE COMES FROM A FOOTBALL CLAN

George [Lefty] McAfee, versatile rookie back field star of the Chicago Bears, comes from what is known as the Football McAfees down in Ironton, a city of 16,000 in the southern tip of Ohio.

The McAfees did not have a complete football team due to the fact three of their 12 children are girls. Eight of the boys did star in high school at Ironton, but it remained for John to start the family to fame in collegiate competition. He was a member of the varsity at Ohio State when Coach Francis Schmidt took over at the Buckeye stadium. John now coaches at Youngstown, O.

George McAfee, all-Ohio high school back in 1935, refused to follow in the footsteps of his older brother and enrolled at Duke university, Durham, N. C. He closed a sensational career there last year and this fall is making his debut in professional football.

At Duke the name of McAfee is being carried forward on the college front. His younger brother, Wesley [Rebel] McAfee, is being groomed to fill his shoes on the Blue Devil team.

C. P. McAfee, the father, is a Y. M. C. A. secretary at Russell, Ky. Altho he and Mrs. McAfee attended football games at Ironton High for ten years, he was never a star player. He admits playing "a bit" with a Centre college team in Danville, Ky.

Columbia Club Trophy Taken by Osprey II.

Osprey II., Dr. Jay Webb Lowell's 32 foot cutter, won the Commodore's cup of the Columbia Yacht club yesterday by capturing the last of the season's three races for the trophy. Osprey sailed the course of 10 nautical miles [equal to 11½ statute miles] off Chicago harbor, in 1 hour, 58 minutes, and 26 seconds in a light southeast breeze. Josephine, William and Gilbert Conover's entry, was second to finish and runner up on corrected time.

The Wade-Lange syndicate owned Star boat Skippy won the club's final race for the Commodore's cup in the Star class, but the cup went to Alcor, owned by the Drielsma-Horton syndicate.

Osprey Handicap Winner.

The yachts also were timed at the finish according to the club's handicap system. On this basis, Race Committee Chairman R. F. Hatfield revealed that Osprey was first with a corrected time of 1:33:56, and Ariel, Robert Richheimer's R class sloop, second in 1:38:06.

The club's final handicap series race for the racing and cruising divisions will be sailed at 3 p. m. today.

Cruising yachts of the Jackson Park Yacht club were led by Sally, Manning Hodgdon's cutter, yesterday, in the last race for the club's fleet of large craft. Sally sailed the four and one half mile triangular course in 1:53:02, under command of Harold Johnson.

Two Women in Crew.

GOPHERS WHIP HUSKIES, 19-14, BEFORE 40,000

Franck Runs 98 Yards After Taking Kickoff.

mass of blue shirts. Then he veered sharply, at right angles toward the south side line. Without other help than the bulk of his defenders, he now had left behind him, Franck sprinted wide to turn down the side line. He flung o one tackler with a stiff arm, dodged another at the 50 yard line, and then sprinted within a foot o fthe side line to outrun all defenders. Jay McDowell, Washington left end, retracing his course and quartering across the gridiron, never had a chance to overtake the fleet Gopher.

A Minnesota Drive Stalls.

Two plays after the kickoff, the teams went to their quarters for the intermission. Momentarily in the third period Minnesota seemed headed for another touchdown. This drive was checked, however, after a march of three consecutive first downs had carried to Washington's 6 yard line when McAdams intercepted Joe Mernik's second down forward pass and was dropped on his own 4 yar dline.

Minnesota got two points on the Minnesota got two points in the next play. With McAdams back in his end zone to kick, Mucha loosed a tremendous pass from center. It sailed so high over McAdams' head that the Huskie half back didn't even leap for the ball. The safety automatically gave the Gophers two points.

Trick Play Shakes Steele Loose.

Washington's first bid for victory in the heartbreaking fourth quarter came on the play when Franck was injured. On third down on his own 20 yard line, McAdams faked a punt and handed the ball to Steele, who came behind him from McAdams' left. Before the Gophers had realized the trick Steele had circled Minnesota's left end, and was racing down the south side line convoyed by Mucha.

Franck came over fast and when Mucha didn't declare his block, Franck drove into both men with a body block that tumbled them out of bounds.

Mucha also was the goat of Washington's second drive, which missed fire on Minnesota's 5 yard line. Paffrath's fumble, recovered by Steele, had given Washington the ball on Minnesota's 42 yard line. Three plays carried to the Gophers' 27, and after Steele had plunged for two yards, McAdams passed the ball to Steele in the left flanker position and Steele drove to Minnesota's 5 yard line.

Bad Pass Stops Huskies.

On the next play, Mucha did not give Full Back Stackpool a lead for a plunge into the left side of the Gopher line. The ball bounced on the ground and was pounced on by Bill Johnson, Minnesota co-captain.

With only four minutes to play, Minnesota played deliberately. Franck, Minnesota's field general, was gone, of course, and disaster threatened when Warren Plunkett, quarter back, elected to send Bob Sweiger into the line on fourth down for required inches and a first down. Sweiger was stopped and Washington took possession on Minnesota's 31 yard stripe.

A flurry of passes failed and Minnesota had the ball, but in the final minute fortune again beckoned the tired Huskies. Ed Steinbauer, Minnesota's third full back, fumbled and Ralph Emerson recovered for Washington on Minnesota's 34. One play—an attempted pass by Peter Susick—failed when the ball was batted from his hands and recovered by Minnesota's Jim Lushine.

Gophers Cash In on Fumble.

Steele's fumble on the first play of the game from scrimmage opened the door for Minnesota's first quarter touchdown. Johnson recovered on Washington's 21 yard line. Sweiger plunged for three yards and then Franck fired a pass to Johnson for a first down on Washington's 5 yard mark. Sweiger was stopped at the line and then he took a short pass as it bounced from the hands of Washington's Stackpool. Minnesota was on Washington's 2 yard line. Franck took the ball from Sweiger on a reverse and sprinted around Washington's right end for the touchdown. Bruce Smith drop kicked the point as he did after Franck's winning touchdown later.

After an exchange of punts Washington started from its own 20 and in 10 plays had the tying score. In the series was a twenty-six yard pass from McAdams to Steele, which placed the ball on Minnesota's 2 yard line. The second smash at tackle by Stackpool carried over and Mizen place kicked the point.

Minnesota's next threat ended early in the second period when Franck failed by inches to lunge over the goal line from Washington's 3 yard line. McAdams kicked out to Washington's 33. Again Washington held, but on fourth down, with the ball put into play on Washington's 17 yard line, Joe Mernik place kicked for three points. Franck held the ball.

Huskies March 75 Yards.

This 10 to 7 lead was wiped out immediately. Washington received and 14 plays went 75 yards for a touchdown. McAdams' twelve yard run on fourth down, when he saw no receiver open, kept the parade moving and put the ball on Minnesota's 13 yard line. Again on fourth down, with the ball on the Gophers' 4 yard line, McAdams threw the scoring pass to Marx in the end zone.

Chapin & Gore Move Up.

The Chapin & Gores currently are showing greatest possibilities in the North End Traveling league, having twice beaten the Schamberger Schlitz, defending champion, while turning in a 3,086 series last week. The triumph moved them into a three-way tie for second place with the Budweisers and Koenig Brau—one game behind Samuelson's Kids. Leo Faetz, captain and anchor man, is leading the C. & G. five's drive toward the top, having compiled a 216 average, aided materially by a 706 series last week. Rudy Habetler of the Jolly Jacks is second with 208. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Two Lincolnshire leagues, each with 20 teams, have been organized. The Lincolnshire Country club league, made up of members, living in Chicago, will roll each Monday night at Stevenson's. The Lincolnshire Estates Residents' league, headed by Paul Blanchard, will compete Wednesday and Friday nights in Chicago Heights. Each of the 40 teams is made up of three men and two women. . . . Bowling has its ups and downs. Witness the Pepsi-Cola five made up of Steinke, Keegan, Siwe, Gratz, and Munch. It's leading the tough Randolph league, and is last in the ten team North End Traveling circuit.

Otto Mauge's 677 series, including a 257 game, helped keep him far out in front among individuals in the Windy City league last week. Otto has a 213—8 average. Runnerup is Donald Watson with 206—7, and he is followed by Clarence Edinger, who, tying Mauge for the night's top honors with 677 Monday, pulled his average up to 205. . . . BUCKEYES WHIP PANTHERS, 30-7, BEFORE 52,877

Ohio Scores 27 Points in Last Half Spurt.

Pittsburgh provided the early fireworks by driving from their own 40 yard line, following Scott's first punt, to the Buckeye 23 yard stripe, whereat the move was halted by a pass interception.

Ohio State responded with a drive of its own, Langhurst finding a hole at left guard and scampering twenty-eight yards to his 43 yard line. Langhurst then tossed a lateral to Fisher, who romped to the Pitt 30 yard line before the play was recalled and the Buckeyes penalized for holding. The Panthers put an end to this when Thurbon intercepted Scott's pass on the Pittsburgh 46 yard mark.

Thurbon ultimately kicked out of bounds on the Ohio State 25 yard mark, and the Buckeyes then proceeded to set the stage for Maag's field goal. Kinkade was the leading contributor to this progress, making a first down as the quarter ended. Then on a reverse he took the ball from Langhurst and picked up thirty yards. On third down, Fisher, on a reverse from Langhurst, took the ball to the Panthers' 20 yard line. Three thrusts by Fisher and Langhurst yielded only four yards, and on fourth down, Maag stepped back to the 30 yard line and booted his field goal.

A Busy Third Period.

The Buckeyes, thanks to Maag's alertness, took a 10 to 0 advantage in the first sixty seconds of the third quarter. Maag kicked off to Thurbon, who fumbled, but scooped up the ball and brought it back to his 19 yard line. He got three yards in two plays, and Pitt was penalized for holding. Jones then attempted a quick-kick, but Maag drove in, blocked it, and took the ball over the goal line, only to be charged with having stepped out of bounds at the 4 yard line. On the next play, Langhurst went over right tackle for the touchdown and then he held the ball for Scott's successful placement.

The Panthers, undaunted, took Maag's out of bounds kickoff on their own 35 yard line and started their touchdown parade, with the indispensable Kracum leading the march, with a bow to two smashes of seven and eighteen yards by Thurbon. The latter finally went over from the 2 foot line, and Sekela made the extra point.

The ensuing kickoff and three plays, on one of which four yards was lost, sufficed to give Ohio State its second touchdown. Scott returned the kickoff thirteen yards to his 28 yard line. On the first play Langhurst cut thru right tackle, then fired a lateral to Fisher, who made the total gain 31 yards by going to the Pitt 41 before being knocked out of bounds.

Scott's Pass Scores.

Langhurst then was spilled for a four yard deficit, and Scott then hurled his first touchdown pass. He stood on his own 45 yard mark and threw to Langhurst, who took the ball on the Pittsburgh 15 and continued over the goal. Scott made the placement.

The third Ohio State touchdown originated with Anderson's interception of Bonelli's pass, Anderson traveling fourteen yards to the Pittsburgh 35 before being stopped. On the second play, Fisher broke over right tackle for 17 yards. Scott then threw a fourth down touchdown pass over center to Anderson, who strolled ten yards to the line. Graf made the placement.

After five minute sof the final quarter, the Buckeye substitutes decided to crowd into the scoring. Taking Thurbon's punt on their own 45 yard line, the understudies continued therefrom to the goal line, the march culminating with Sexton's scoring pass to Fox. Graf's attempted placement was wide.

WAR INDUSTRIES FORGE AHEAD AS ORDERS PILE UP

Speculative Market Trends Varied.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

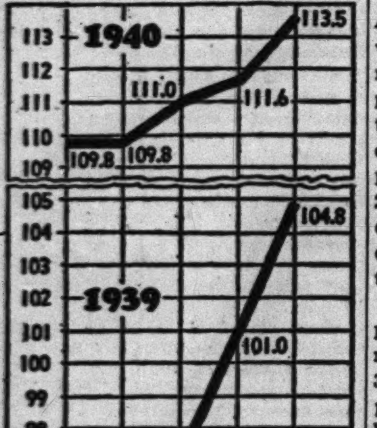
Several major industries which are keyed to the national defense effort expanded production volume last week, giving business a forward push in spite of setbacks in some other lines.

While the army and navy were placing orders totaling hundreds of millions of dollars, straining productive capacity of many plants, bankers studied ways to help bear the financial burden of factory expansion.

Meanwhile trends varied in the speculative markets. Prices of copper and some other essential war materials advanced. In the securities markets sentiment was adversely affected by the failure of the British drive on Dakar, France's strategic West African port, and the tension between America and Japan.

Find Bank Credit Available.

Bankers and government officials gave increasing attention to the financial aspect of the rearmament program. The national defense advisory commission made a "test mobilization" of bank credit available for arms plant construction and announced that commercial banks have at least 3 billion dollars available for such purposes.



The course of industrial activity in recent weeks, as measured by the Associated Press seasonally adjusted composite index, which is based on 1929-'30 activity as 100.

In a statement based on a quick survey by the federal reserve system, the defense commission said the banks indicated they are ready to make all necessary loans. The loans would be made to companies having government orders, and the contracts would serve as security.

Members of the American Bankers' association convened at Atlantic City, N. J., and discussed, among other things, the armament program and government fiscal policy generally.

Bankers Fearful of Inflation.

Expressing fear that the arms making boom would turn out to be a "time bomb," the bankers warned that federal spending may cause inflation, urged wider use of private bank loans, and declared piling up of the federal debt threatens the solvency of the entire national economy.

While broad matters of policy were being considered by the bankers and federal authorities, individual industries were making adjustments to fit their prospects. Numerous plant expansions were announced, hiring of additional workers was reported, and some indices of industrial activity rose to the highest marks in a year or longer.

Automobile production rose to 95,990 units, from 78,820 in the preceding week, the latest available figure for railroad freight loadings was the highest of the year, residential construction reached a new 1940 peak, cotton textile output climbed, and unfilled orders for machine tools were reported to have reached an all-time high level.

Freight Car Needs Rise.

Producers in the middle west who use freight cars estimated that their requirements in the next three months will be 915,938 cars, an increase of 7.6 per cent as compared with the number needed in the last quarter of 1939.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity topped its 1939 high mark and climbed to the highest level since November, 1929. The index compared as follows:

	This wk.	Prv. wk.	Yr. ago.
Auto Production	103.2	95.0	78.0
Steel Mill Act.	124.2	124.7	112.5
Cotton Mfg. Act.	135.5	133.3	133.5
Electric Pwr. Prod.	129.4	128.9	125.1
Residential Bldg.	*119.7	114.7	99.7
Total Car Loadings	*75.5	75.7	75.6
Composite Index	*113.5	111.6	104.8

*New 1940 high.

Steel production, retail trade, engineering construction awards, bank clearings, and electric power output were among the indices which declined as compared with the preceding week. Steel mill schedules averaged 92.5 per cent of theoretical capacity, compared with 92.9.

Company Tax Lifted to 24% in New Plan

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—A senate-house committee tonight voted to increase to 24 per cent the normal income tax rate on all corporations with net income of more than $25,000, in reaching agreement on the major provisions of an excess profits tax bill. The present rate is 20.9 per cent. The committee decided to make no change in the tax on corporations with income of less than $25,000.

These decisions represented a compromise between a senate amendment providing for an increase of 3.1 per cent in the tax on all corporation income, and the original house bill which contained no general income tax increase.

Estimate Yield Up to Billion.

Senator Pat Harrison [D., Miss.], committee chairman, estimated that the bill as it now stands will yield 900 million to 1 billion dollars annually.

Harrison announced that the committee would meet tomorrow morning with "very strong" hopes of reaching a final agreement on all phases.

During the day, the committee decided to eliminate a house provision imposing a 4.1 per cent income tax increase on those corporations which elected to use the so-called "average earnings" method of computing their excess profits tax. Generally, corporations with high incomes during a base period—1936 to 1939 inclusive—would use this formula instead of an optional "invested capital" method. In the place of the 4.1 increase, the committee voted to cut the average earnings credit from 100 per cent to 95 per cent.

Example of Deduction.

For instance, if a corporation had average earnings of $1,000,000 a year during the base period years, it would be allowed to deduct $950,000 from its income for 1940 and subsequent years before figuring its excess profits tax.

As to the invested capital formula, the committee adopted the senate provision exempting earnings up to 8 per cent of invested capital from the tax. It was decided, too, to exempt the first $5,000 of a corporation's earnings. These rates were agreed upon:

	Per cent.
Less than $20,000 [of excess profits]	25
From $20,000 to $50,000	30
From $50,000 to $100,000	35
From $100,000 to $250,000	40
From $250,000 to $500,000	45
Over $500,000	50

PLAN SPEEDIER RAIL SERVICE TO PHOENIX, ARIZ.

Plans for faster train service between Chicago and Phoenix, Ariz., are being worked out by passenger officials of the Rock Island and Southern Pacific railways. The Rock Island is expected to ask authority shortly to purchase two 2,000 horse power Diesel electric locomotives which would pull the train as far as Tucumcari, Ariz., with steam engines pulling the train the rest of the run to Phoenix. The two Diesels will cost about $375,000.

Two trains would be used on the 1,916 mile run, with departure from Chicago and Phoenix every other day. The westbound run would be about 39 hours 40 minutes and the eastbound 38 hours 30 minutes. Several hours, is was said, would be cut from existing schedules.

The Pullman company is expected to provide de luxe streamlined passenger equipment under its equipment contract with the two roads.

MISSISSIPPI TRAFFIC IS SO HEAVY THAT PILOTS ARE SCARCE

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 28 [Special].—The scarcity of pilots on the Mississippi river is becoming acute, the Rock Island district office of the United States engineers at the Rock Island arsenal disclosed today. The office has received numerous calls from boats headed upstream, but has been unable to fill all of the requests.

H. P. Warren, head of the operations division of the engineers, received a request for a pilot for the steamer Chotin, which is making its way up stream with a three barge oil tow from Baton Rouge, La. The Chotin is a 600 ton steamer, owned by Chotin and Pharr of Berwick, La., and is making its first northern trip.

Twelve tow boats with 43 barges are operating in the Rock Island district at present, and fall business is breaking all records. Oil and coal shipments are being rushed during the two months left before the navigation season closes.

SMYTH TO OPEN NEW EVANSTON FURNITURE STORE

The John M. Smyth company tomorrow will open its new Evanston store at 820-24 Church street—in the heart of the university city's shopping district. Four stories high, the new building is entirely air conditioned. The Smyth company, one of Chicago's oldest furniture and home furnishings company, five years ago rented space at 816 Church street, containing 10,000 square feet. The new building contains 32,000 square feet.

"We have carried out our original intention of providing in the Evanston shopping center, a complete home furnishings store of which any metropolitan city could be proud," John M. Smyth, president of the company, said yesterday.

The Smyth company was founded by the father of the present president in 1867. Its main store is at 703-71 West Madison street. All space in the Evanston store will be devoted to display, with warehousing and shipping conducted at the main store.

ARGENTINE PLAN IS THREAT TO U. S. TRADE PROGRAM

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 28 [Special].—Argentina has sent a delegation of leading financial and economic experts headed by Finance Minister Federico Pinedo to Rio de Janeiro to negotiate with Brazil a bilateral compensation trade agreement similar to the one Argentina has with Germany.

Official sources said that Argentina hopes by this pact to establish a perfect balance of trade between the two countries and at the same time arrange for reciprocal purchases of each other's excess production.

The negotiations are being watched closely by Pan-American diplomatic observers who believe the pact will signalize introduction of totalitarian economic ideology into inter-American trade. These observers say that success of the negotiations will tend to break down existing trade agreements with South American republics, especially agreements between the United States and Brazil.

Steel Making Rate Will Rise in Chicago This Week

Steel mills in the Chicago district are scheduled to start operations tomorrow at 96.7 per cent of theoretical capacity compared with 95.1 per cent a week ago. The increase results from the restoration of steel making facilities closed down for repairs. Pittsburgh district mills are scheduled to start tomorrow at 89 per cent, off a point from last week.

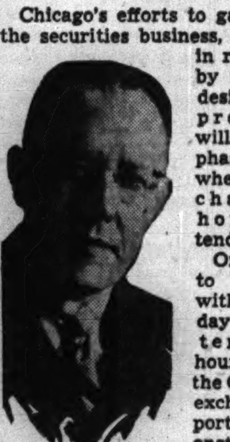
Chicago Board Adds One Hour to Trading Day

Chicago's efforts to gain stature in the securities business, marked within recent months by various steps designed to improve trading, will enter a new phase tomorrow when stock exchange trading hours are extended.



Arthur M. Betts.

One hour added to the sessions, with the Saturday period extended by ½ hour, will give the Chicago Stock exchange an opportunity to demonstrate whether it can achieve more complete independence from the New York Stock exchange, as sponsors of the lengthened sessions hope.

All other securities exchanges east of Chicago will close simultaneously with the New York Stock exchange, as Chicago has done since establishment of its market.

Expect Increased Volume.

The extension of trading until 3 p. m. [11:30 a. m. on Saturdays], will make the Chicago market the only major exchange in the United States, except for that in San Francisco, to remain in session after the close of the "Big Board."

The experiment, decided upon recently and put into effect by Arthur M. Betts, chairman of the Chicago exchange's board of governors, has attracted the interest of brokers and stock market traders thruout the country.

Betts and others directing the drive for new business have expressed the conviction the additional time for trading will bring in a substantial volume of transactions. Their argument is that heretofore, the exchange has closed virtually at the height of the normal business day; that New York, closing one hour later relative to its business day, has held an advantage, and that the additional hour will give traders an opportunity to transact securities business which lack of time previously had not permitted.

Some Stocks Dually Listed.

San Francisco has developed what many brokers consider a satisfactory business in dually-listed stocks in trading after the Wall street close. Chicago will be placed in the same position. Both exchanges trade in a number of stock issues also listed, and in many cases having their primary markets in New York.

A Chicago exchange announcement yesterday called attention to the fact Illinois has no state tax on the transfer of securities, such as levies in effect in New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania. This was stressed as an advantage for trading in Chicago.

Milwaukee Road Reports Larger Net on Operations

The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railroad yesterday reported net operating income of $1,865,588 for August, against $1,028,738 a year ago. For the first eight months of 1940, the total was $5,371,854, against $1,242,125.

COAL CONTROL LAW EFFECTIVE NEXT TUESDAY

Adds Many Millions to Nation's Bill.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Amid charges that it will add $44,000,000 to $60,000,000 annually to the nation's coal bill, the government's schedule of minimum prices for the bituminous coal industry will go into effect Tuesday.

The effectiveness of this price fixing scheme, set up by the Guffey act of 1937, will climax six years of battling. During this period cities and states joined with private interests in trying to prevent the legislation because they believed it would bring greatly increased coal costs. Millions of words of testimony were accumulated in protracted hearings in all parts of the country.

During the six year period the original Guffey coal act of 1935 was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court because of certain labor provisions. A revived Guffey act of 1937, the present measure, received a legal clean bill of health last spring when the Supreme court declared it constitutional. Unless its life is extended by congress, it will expire April 26, 1941.

Vast Control Required.

The price fixing scheme puts under government control about 13,500 mines shipping to 150,000 destinations. It attempts to classify tens of thousands of different kinds, qualities, and sizes of bituminous coal. It was said that up to June 5, 1939, those administering the act had received data regarding 500,000 different price schedules in the Appalachian area alone.

John A. Howe, executive vice president of the Truax-Traer Coal company, Chicago, and chairman of the committee of bituminous coal producers asking amendment of the Guffey act, charges that the act is unfair to mine operators and the public, and is unworkable. While presuming to assist the coal industry, he said in a statement commenting on the approaching effectiveness of the measure, the act already has added approximately $30,000,000 to the coal industry's operating costs.

Explains Heavy Burden.

This burden, Howe explains, consists of $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 collected to support the act, $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 levied in assessments for the district boards which work with the bituminous coal division of the department of the interior, the department charged with the enforcement of the act, and upward of $15,000,000 consumed in hearings, red tape, governmental relations work, and legal and accounting fees during the last three and a half years while prices were being promulgated.

"No one has benefited from the act during these three and a half years except the elaborate and costly staff of employés that has been set up at a time when the government needs every dollar for national defense," Howe declared. "After many delays, a schedule of minimum prices designed to protect the coal industry against loss goes into effect. Altho the legislation was passed approximately three and a half years ago, and expires in less than seven months, the department of the interior has just now arrived at the enforcement of its major provision.

Difficulties Are Vast.

"This delay has been the result of the impracticability of the legislation in its present form. The schedule means that there will be 500,000 different prices for bituminous coal. The difficulty of operating under that kind of a price structure is manifest.

"More important, however, is the increase these new prices will mean in the nation's fuel bill. This increase may be estimated conservatively at $44,000,000 and may run as high as $60,000,000. Efficient elements of the coal industry do not need to place

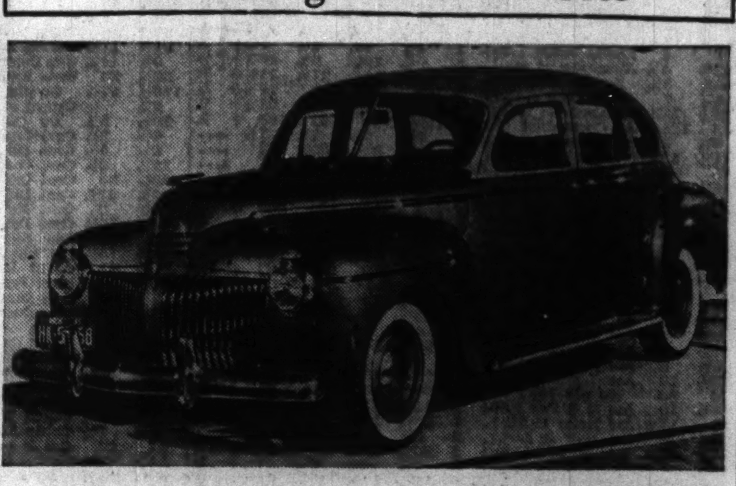
Introducing the '41 De Soto



Here is the 1941 De Soto custom four door sedan. It is longer and wider than the predecessor models and may be had equipped with fluid drive.

De Soto Offers Fluid Drive in Its '41 Models

Longer, lower and wider bodies and numerous mechanical refinements and improvements are included in the 1941 automobiles built by the De Soto division of the Chrysler corporation which were shown to the public yesterday. The biggest change, however, is the optional fluid drive in conjunction with De Soto's "simplimatic transmission" which makes it possible to drive without shiftng gears.

Changes have been made in the appearance of the 1941 models, accomplished thru the use of heavy die chrome forms about the vertical patter grille and flat fender tops which are in one piece with the sides of the hood. The rear window is 47.5 per cent larger than in last year's models. There is no bulge to mark the luggage locker.

His Inside Hood Lock.

The hood is of the alligator type, with a release located in the driving compartment so that when the car is locked the hood cannot be opened. As an added safety measure there is an outside catch that must be released.

The wheelbase is 121½ inches and the overall length has been increased by 5½ inches. Bodies are 2¼ inches wider. A new type of frame made it possible to lower the entire car 1⅛ inches without loss of headroom.

Car interiors include two-tone treatment of upholstery, instrument panel and interior hardware in the custom models. The upper half of the steering wheel is left clear to provide uninterrupted view of the instruments.

The accelerator pedal has been more conveniently located.

De Soto officials predict that half their sales this year will be cars equipped with the fluid drive. However, those who elect to take standard transmission will find improvements to give easier gear shifting.

Safety Rim a Feature.

Other improvements include a safety rim which prevents a punctured tire from being thrown off the rim and makes it possible to drive at 50 or 60 miles an hour on a tire without air in it. A new stabilizer bar attached between the frame and the rear axle lessens side motion, particularly on rough roads.

The engine develops 105 horsepower and is improved with a new type of bearing for the crankshaft which De Soto engineers say has a life 300 to 500 per cent longer than the former type.

New to the De Soto Custom line is a 4 door town sedan, a brougham and club coupe with a full width rear seat. A variety of color choices, including two-tones, is offered.

LEWIS STRIVES TO SAVE UNION'S FUNDS HE LENT

Cash Is Sunk in New Dealer's Mines.

BY JOHN FISHER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28.—The once highly-touted social experiment conducted in the Colorado coal fields by Josephine Roche, New Deal socializer, has run into the rocks and she has sought government funds to help bail out United Mine workers' money which John L. Lewis put into the enterprise, it was learned today.

Lewis has been in the position of assessing the miners in order to pay them higher wages thru the Rocky Mountain Fuel company, second biggest coal producer in Colorado, which Miss Roche nominally heads. The investment made by Lewis has been a closely guarded secret, and it is believed doubtful that the union members know where their assessments have gone.

Lewis Has Full Control.

Lewis has complete financial control of the union of which he is president. In 1936 he used $500,000 of its funds to help reëlect President Roosevelt and has made political capital of the donation ever since.

According to reliable sources, the labor dictator has poured approximately $361,000 into Rocky Mountain Fuel thru loans to Miss Roche. These loans have gone to help meet fixed charges which haven't been earned in Beginning September 30th, The Milwaukee Road will transfer the handling of less than carload traffic from its Union Street Station to the new Galewood Station.

Located on the west side at 1900 No. Central Avenue, Galewood is free from the street congestion that delays truck movements in the Loop area. In addition, the facilities for the prompt handling of a greatly increased tonnage, will benefit not only local shippers and receivers, but all those having freight moving through Chicago.

12 to 24 Hours Saved

A saving of from one-half to a full day will be realized in the transfer of much of the freight through the new Galewood Station. Combined with speeded up Milwaukee Road freight schedules, this will provide shippers with faster service than ever before.

Interchange traffic from or to connections, formerly handled through Union Street Station, will be handled through Galewood, as well as city local traffic not handled through Freight House No. 1 at Union Street.

Less carload shipments when handled by shippers' own trucks may be delivered or received at House No. 1, Union Street Station, as well as other business which cannot be handled as advantageously at Galewood Station.

At Cortland Street and Healy Stations, freight will continue to be handled as at present.

STOCK MARKET ENDS BAD WEEK ON RISING NOTE

Domestic Business News Inspires Upturn.

New York, Sept 28 (AP).—After four successive losing sessions, the stock market today finished the week with an attempt at recovery.

There was little change in the confused international picture, but the broadening of the domestic business advance apparently was sufficiently inspiring to bring in support for recently lagging leaders.

Trading got off to a ragged start. Buyers then came out in the final hour for steels, rails, specialties and an assortment of preferred issues. Among common stocks gains ran to a point or so at the close, altho minor fractions predominated. Upturns of 1 to 4 points were recorded for selected preferreds.

Index Lower for Week.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was up .2 of a point at 44.3, but for the week showed a net decline of .1. Transfers totaled 204,080 shares, compared with 258,880 last Saturday.

Defense spending, most analysts believed, remained as the principal market prop. At the same time, nervousness over foreign affairs was believed to have kept a number of potential buyers out of the market.

Preferred stocks finishing ahead included those of McKesson & Robbins, Certain-Teed; Budd Manufacturing, Southern railway and General Steel Castings.

Steels, Motors Advance.

Prominent gainers among common shares were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Smelting, United Aircraft, New York Central, Great Northern, American Shipbuilding, McKesson & Robbins, New York Shipbuilding and White Motors.

On a turnover of around 30,000 shares against 46,000 a week ago, curb market gains were registered for American Cyanamid "B," Brewster Aero and Jones & McLaughlin.

Stocks had their best day of the week Monday when war tension lessened a trifle and business hopes strengthened. Customers began to cash profits Tuesday and prices slipped. The downturn continued Wednesday and Thursday and was more pronounced Friday. Nervous selling Friday followed announcement of the military and economic agreement between Japan and the Rome-Berlin axis aimed specifically at the United States.

HEAVY BUTCHER HOGS TOP PRICE LIST IN CHICAGO

Heavy butcher hogs weighing more than 300 pounds made the best showing in the hog market last week, closing 10 to 25 cents a hundredweight higher than a week earlier. Increased shipments depressed quotations on young light grades, which were 10 to 45 cents lower for the week.

For the first time since last October "lard hogs" headed the price list, with 300 pounders mostly 25 cents a hundred pounds higher than 200 pound spring pigs and 50 cents higher than 175 pounders. Sows showed advances of 5 to 15 cents.

Steers and yearlings closed about steady for the week, altho the six day average declined 10 cents to $11.30. Lambs were little changed.

Practically all live stock received yesterday went directly to packers. Hogs carried a nominal top quotation of $6.60 a hundred pounds.

WHEAT FUTURES BOUND AS CASH GRAIN ADVANCES

Trading Is Most Active in Months.

Wheat futures advanced about [illegible] cents a bushel in a broad market yesterday, stimulated, according to brokers, by advancing prices for cash grain. Futures closed 1⅞ to 2¼ cents higher, the December delivery moving to a peak since June at 82⅜ cents, and the May contract selling at a seasonal high.

Brokers, reporting speculative interest in the market at the highest pitch in months, attributed the rising cash quotations to the diminishing supply of "free" grain not under government loans. Some observers expressed the opinion farmers will not sell more liberally until the cash market has gone still higher.

Mill Interests Active.

Mill interests were reported active buyers of the futures. Shorts and commission houses also were active in the market as prices rose and peak quotations were made near the close of trading.

Country run No. 2 red winter wheat was quoted as high as 90 cents a bushel at the close of the Chicago cash market, or 9 cents above the government loan basis. Cash interests reported purchases for deferred shipment from the country totaled only 10,000 bushels.

Wheat prices in all leading terminal markets with the exception of Minneapolis and Duluth are above the government loan basis.

Winnipeg surprised the trade by advancing 1¼ to 1⅜ cents, with all deliveries selling about 1½ cents a bushel above the minimum prices. The advance was the largest for one day in about four months.

Corn About Steady.

Strength in wheat had little or no effect on corn, which closed unchanged to ⅛ cent higher. The coarse grain was held in check by increased country offerings of old grain for deferred shipment and a break of 1½ cents in Buenos Aires. The October delivery there closed at 27⅛ cents, or more than 30 cents under the December contract on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Oats closed ¼ to ½ cent higher with December selling at a new high mark since last June and the May option was in new high ground for the season. Rye finished 1¼ to 1⅝ cent higher in sympathy with wheat. Soy beans went ½ to ⅝ cent higher.

PRESIDENT'S NEW CLUB BRANDISHED AT U. S. INDUSTRY

He Tells Procedure for Seizing Factories.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28.—President Roosevelt today established procedure under which his administration will move to commandeer plants of corporations which refuse to fill all or any part of critical defense orders.

In identical letters to the secretaries of war and navy, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the hope that industry will continue to fill defense orders voluntarily so that he would not have to employ the dictatorial powers granted him under the conscription act.

Section 9 of the selective service act empowered the President, acting thru the heads of the war or navy departments, to take over any plant which refuses to accept or give preference to orders for defense material.

Letters an Experiment.

By sending the letters to his cabinet officers, Mr. Roosevelt swung experimentally the latest club over industry which has been placed in his hands by congress. The action was interpreted in business circles as calculated to frighten plant operators so that they would not oppose the government on any phase of the defense program, regardless of questions of right and wrong.

Mr. Roosevelt advised the secretaries to place all mandatory orders with the Defense Advisory commission in order to provide for uniformity in the negotiation and placing of such orders under section 9 of the selective service act.

The President's Note.

"Your proposal when so transmitted should contain your conclusion that action under Section 9 is necessary, together with the reasons therefor, the views of the army and navy munitions board with reference to all aspects of the matter within its purview, a statement that the product or material desired is normally produced or capable of being produced by the person involved, a statement that the price of the material or product desired as determined by you is reasonable and a statement of the preference over other contracts or orders to which the proposed order should be entitled," the President wrote.

"There should also be attached to the proposal all other documents relating to the case.

Further Instructions.

"If the commission, with the voluntary coöperation of industry, is unable to effect a solution in a manner satisfactory to you, it shall return the case to you with such recommendations as it may consider appropriate.

"In the event that both you and the commission agree as to the necessity of placing an order pursuant to Section 9 for the product or material desired, you are hereby authorized so to do. If, however, you and the commission do not agree, you will, of course, refer the matter to me.

"In the event of a refusal by such person to comply in whole or in part with any order so placed, you should transmit the case to me with specific recommendations from you and the commission for further action pursuant to Section 9."

U. S. WHOLESALE TRADE IS 5.7 PCT. ABOVE YEAR AGO

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 [Special].—Dollar value of wholesale trade in August was 5.7 per cent higher than the total for August a year ago, the census bureau reported today. The increase, however, was less than that noted in July, when the year's gain was 10.5 per cent. Total sales of 2,875 reporting firms in August were put at $217,647,000.

Twenty-seven of the 36 lines of trade showed that August sales exceeded those of the corresponding month of 1939, while nine reported a decrease, according to the report.

Four trades—heavy hardware, industrial supplies, metals and machinery, equipment and supplies—reported gains of more than 20 per cent. Sales of groceries and foods, except farm products, declined 2.3 per cent, reversing the trend of five of the first seven months of 1940.

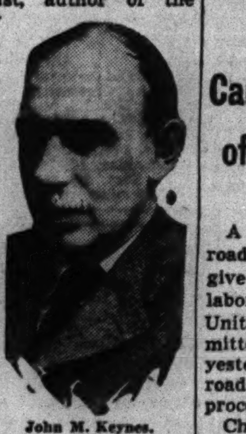
GREAT BRITAIN RICHER AFTER YEAR OF WAR THAN IN 1937—KEYNES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



John M. Keynes.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—John Maynard Keynes, economist, author of the "compulsory savings" plan, and hitherto bitter critic of the government's wartime financial policy, startled London's financial district this week by suddenly revealing himself to be a convert to the cult of optimism about the state of this country's finances after a year of hostilities.

"After a year of war," he confidently assured his listeners, "Great Britain remains richer in national wealth than she was at the beginning of 1937." a couple of years.

Official treasury figures show that last week alone the government's war and civil expenditure was practically six times income. The budget deficit for the current financial year is now 1,833,000,000 pounds [about $7,332,000,000] compared to 210,000,000 pounds [about $840,000,000] at the same time last year, but Keynes in a nation-wide broadcast pooh-poohed the danger of inflation and belittled the physical losses the country has sustained in the war to date.

JACKSON ORDERS SUIT ON ALLEGED OIL PRICE FIXING

Action Gets Defense Group's Approval.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—A suit to halt alleged "price-fixing" and other "existing abuses" by the nation's major oil companies was ordered today by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson.

Robert H. Jackson.

Announcing that the anti-trust action would be filed here next week, the attorney general said that it would be restricted in accordance with recommendations of the national defense commission.

"The defense commission," he said in a letter to Senator Gillette [D., Ia.], "advised me that it would wholeheartedly approve 'any appropriate legal action brought to eliminate such restraints on competition where they are proven to exist.'" Gillette had urged that the suits be filed.

Stand on Transportation.

Jackson said the defense commission had questioned the advisability of seeking to force the companies to divest themselves of their transportation facilities.

"Accordingly," he said, "this action does not seek at this time to compel the oil companies to get rid of their pipe lines, barges, or other facilities for the transportation and distribution of petroleum. I believe there might be serious consequences from a disruption of these facilities at a time when we have no capital presently willing, so far as I am able to ascertain, to acquire and operate these facilities by themselves."

Will Be Ready to Act.

He added, however, that the suit would be framed so that procedure to remove control of transportation from the companies may be included "if at the time of trial it shall appear that the abuses in the oil industry can be corrected in no other way."

An opinion that congress should go ahead with legislation to solve the problems of the oil industry was expressed by Jackson.

"Litigation by itself will never completely accomplish the wise utilization of this great asset by this generation, or its conservation for the future," he said.

He did not disclose the names of the companies to be involved in the suit.

Shipments Rise but Orders of Manufacturers Pile Up

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 [Special].—Shipments of manufacturers rose sharply during August, but since incoming business more than kept pace with the shipments, there was a 10 per cent rise in manufacturers' unfilled orders, the department of commerce reported today. The rise in shipments, it was pointed out, reflects the transition into actual deliveries of the enlarged volume of new business placed in the last few months.

COTTON

Mill, commission house and professional buying came into the market in the late trading yesterday and advanced prices around .10 cent a pound at one time. While hedging pressure was fairly liberal, the strength in wool and grains had some influence on market sentiment. Closing trades were .05 to .11 cent a pound higher, with the distant futures leading the advance.

Spot cotton closed unchanged to .06 cent higher, with New York, 9.77 cents; New Orleans, 9.57 cents; Houston, 9.23 cents, and Galveston at 9.22 cents a pound. Prices follow:

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD ACCUSED OF BEING BIASED

Carriers Assail Methods of Reaching Decisions.

A brief accusing the national railroad adjustment board of failing to give railroads "a square deal" in labor disputes was filed with the United States attorney general's committee on administrative procedure yesterday by the class 1 carriers. The roads asked changes in the board's procedure.

Charging that the board in its decisions frequently makes use of technicalities to "promote the result which the labor members of the board and referee desire to reach," the brief asserted that in other cases "technicalities and even ordinary principles of reasoning are ignored when that is necessary to reach the desired result."

Cite Yard Work Ruling.

One charge made by the roads was that the board makes a decision based on a specific contract provision involving one road, and then applies the same decision to other cases in which no such contract provision exists between the carrier and labor.

The brief cited a case in which the board upheld specific contracts between a railroad and certain employés to mean that railroad yard work, except in cases of emergency, must be performed by yardmen.

"Following that decision," the brief said, "a practically unbroken line of awards has sustained the right of yardmen to a monopoly of work in cases where there were no such provisions in the contract involved, and even in cases in which labor had been unsuccessful in obtaining the inclusion of such provisions in the contracts during negotiation. The board thus has granted rights by decision which were definitely denied in negotiation."

Hit Court Review Restriction.

Among the methods of procedure attacked by the brief was that under which no judicial review of the board's orders can be brought except by the party in whose favor the award has been made, as in the case of an employé who chooses to go to court to enforce an award made by the board.

A special committee which prepared the brief consisted of John Dickinson, general solicitor of the Pennsylvania road; W. H. Swiggart, general counsel of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis; Bruce E. Dwinell, general attorney for the Rock Island, and E. M. Martin, general solicitor for the Burlington railroad.

INDIANA COAL MEN END PLEAS ON PRICE RULE

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—Indiana soft coal producers completed today their arguments before the bituminous coal division for suspension of minimum prices on coal shipped to Wisconsin and Minnesota, and nearby markets.

William O'Brien of Chicago, vice president of the Sterling-Midland Coal company of Indiana, was the last witness. He cited several instances in which the Indiana producers feared they would lose existing and prospective markets to dock operators on the Great Lakes.

The division has not ruled on the status of the dock operators, but the Indiana producers argued that they were not in the three categories subject to minimum price regulations—producers, sales agents, and registered distributors.

Hammond Company Starts Production of Iron Powder

With Swedish sources of iron powder cut off by war, a Chicago area company has started production of this material.

Using its own process, the Metals Refining company has been making powdered iron at its plant in Hammond for three months, David N. Burruss Jr., general manager, announced yesterday. He said the company had worked since early 1938 developing the new process.

Powdered iron has two main customers, Burruss said. The radio industry uses the material for manufacturing electrical resistors and magnetic cores and the automobile industry uses it for molding gears.

Expects to Meet Old Price.

Sweden produced powdered iron as a by-product, and was able to sell it for as low as 8 to 10 cents a pound. Burruss said he believed the Metals Refining company would be able to meet the former Swedish price in marketing the product.

The Metals Refining company has been turning out the powdered iron at a rate of 5 tons daily, he said, which would bring the annual capacity to 1,500 or 2,000 tons. At this rate the comuany will produce as much as formerly was imported from Sweden, Burruss said. He said the product is similar to the Swedish material, and runs as high as 97 to 98 per cent pure iron. Only the best raw materials obtained in this country are used, Burruss said.

War Stimulates Demand.

The company, a division of the Glidden company, began developing the new process because of customer demand for a home product. Burruss said that the elimination of Sweden as the chief source "has stimulated the interest in a domestic source to a remarkable extent, altho it was not the reason the company started into production."

An addition was made to the company's plant for the production of powdered iron. No details of the process were disclosed.

According to Burruss, the Metals Refining company is the only concern now manufacturing the product in this country on a large scale. Several other companies are believed to be preparing to start production in the near future.

FLEXIBLE SHAFT COMPANY'S NET EARNINGS RISE

Postal Telegraph's Land Lines Lose.

Chicago Flexible Shaft company, manufacturer of an extensive line of electric appliances and other products, yesterday mailed to stockholders an estimate of profits of the parent company for the first 36 weeks of 1940, showing an increase over earnings in the corresponding period a year earlier. Net income was placed at $868,210, before federal taxes, compared with $689,552 in the first 36 weeks of 1939.

Postal Telegraph, Inc., the organization that took over on Feb. 1, the companies comprising the Postal Telegraph Land Line system, reported for August a net loss of $346,919 after depreciation and interest charges, making the total deficit for the eight months ended Aug. 31, $2,126,517. The company said that the results since Jan. 31 included certain nonrecurrent expenses in connection with placing the reorganized system on an independent basis.

Vultee Aircraft Gains.

Vultee Aircraft, Inc., announced it had profit of $277,179 in the fiscal quarter ended Aug. 31 after charges and provision for federal taxes. In the corresponding 1939 period the company, an affiliate of Aviation corporation, was not operating as a separate corporation, and consequently no comparison of earnings is available. Vultee had a net loss of $154,334 in the quarter preceding that covered by yesterday's statement. For the nine months ended with August net loss was $58,139.

Sales for the August quarter climbed to $2,116,906, from $473,231 in the preceding or second quarter and $265,289 in the first quarter of the current fiscal year. Nine month sales totaled $2,855,426.

B. F. Avery & Sons, Louisville, Ky., farm implement maker, reported profit of $179,369, equal to 92 cents a common share, for the year ended June 30, compared with $4,747 in the preceding year.

URGES FEDERAL DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN TRADE

Washington, D. C., Sept. 28 (AP).—A United States Chamber of Commerce committee suggested today that all of the government's promotive and financing services in the foreign commerce field be integrated with the ultimate aim of establishing a federal foreign trade department.

In a report to the board of directors, the chamber's foreign commerce committee proposed such a program for stimulating and expanding America's business abroad and recommended that intensive commercial studies be made in preparation for the future.

The committee said that altho postwar situations could only be conjectured, it seemed apparent that there would be "highly competitive conditions" in which "unorthodox and even predatory economic devices will undoubtedly confront us in some quarters."

FLORIDA EAST COAST RAILWAY TO REORGANIZE

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 28 (AP).—A proposal to reorganize the financial structure of the Florida East Coast railway was filed in federal District court here today. Under the proposed plan, holders of first and refunding bonds would exchange five of them for one of a new issue plus a share of stock.

The plan was submitted by a committee holding on deposit approximately 50 per cent of the first and refunding bond issue. Hearings will begin before Federal Judge Louie Strum Oct. 24.

Outstanding against the road is a $45,000,000 five per cent first and refunding bond issue on which no interest has been paid since the system went into receivership in 1931.

BUILDER OF SUB CHASERS USING ASSEMBLY LINE

Bayonne, N. J., Sept. 28 [Special.]—Mass production methods of the automobile industry have been adopted to speed the production of naval vessels being turned out for United States defense forces at the new plant of the Electric Boat company here.

Seventy-foot submarine chasers and motor torpedo boats are rolling thru the 142,000 square foot plant on assembly lines similar to those used in automotive plants.

The craft are assembled on welded cradles of special design. Monorail conveyors contribute to more rapid construction. The boats move along toward completion four abreast while progressive assembly, finishing operations, painting, and the installation of tanks, motors, controls, and deck houses are carried out.

The Austin company, large industrial construction organization, said that its construction of the plant in 75 days illustrates private industry's ability to provide the plant expansion required by the government's preparedness program.

METALS ATTRACT MOST BUYERS IN STAPLE MARKETS

Prices Rise in Scramble to Get Supplies.

Metals attracted the predominate interest in commodity markets last week with record sales, prices advances and a scramble among consumers for supplies that resulted in warnings of government intervention in the interests of stabilization.

Wool tops set 1940 highs in both futures and cash markets, and rubber and hides were also among the leaders in the general upward swing of staples. Santos coffee, cottonseed oil and cocoa moved against the trend.

Copper Being Doled Out.

A rush to buy nonferrous metals—copper, zinc, tin and lead—resulted, brokers said, from fears by some consumers that supplies would be insufficient to meet the requirements of the national defense program. Producers were forced to dole out copper and curtail sales as demand for immediate delivery cut into available supplies. A ½ cent boost in price to 12 cents a pound, Connecticut valley base, slowed buying toward the end of the week.

Zinc was raised 0.4 cent a pound to 7¼ cents, the highest since August, 1937, and lead was increased 0.1 cent to 4.85 cents, the highest since last May. Tin climbed from 50.10 to 51.50 cents a pound.

Futures at New Peaks.

Copper futures ended the week at a new seasonal high of 10.64 cents a pound in the December deliveries a gain of 0.09 cent. Tin futures climbed from 50 to 51.12 cents and lead from 4.80 to 4.94 cents a pound.

Wool tops skyrocketed 11.3 cents a pound in October deliveries to $1.14 3-10 bid and the cash market gained 7 cents to $1.19.

Rubber futures advanced 0.51 cent a pound in December contracts, which closed at 19.49 cents. Cash rubber registered a gain of 0.37 cent at 19.62 cents. Hides rose from 9.9 cents a pound to 10.36 cents in December deliveries.

"Obviously, the reason for these new prices, which the department has been so reluctant to adopt, is the endorsement of this legislation in the platform of the Democratic party. It is, of course, impossible for the party to seek to return to power on the basis of the Guffey act if the administration continues to shadow box with its provisions."

Opposition Is Explained.

The committee, which is headed by Howe, recently explained in detail the reasons for its opposition to the price fixing effort in the Guffey act. The committee asserted that many members of congress had grave misgivings when they voted in favor of the Guffey act because they disproved price fixing in principle.

The committee said the public may expect disruption in the industry to follow the effectiveness of the price schedule. It declared that the new prices will nullify in many instances existing freight rate structures built up by the Interstate Commerce commission during a 53 year period. This will result in nullifying competitive positions held by various regions because of their proximity to coal fields.

The enormous task in attempting to fix prices, the committee said, may be understood when it is realized that as many as 40 screened sizes of coal may be shipped from a single mine. And there are about 13,500 mines to be considered.

Administration Difficult.

"The magnitude and complexity of the problem make it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for any centralized government agency in Washington—no matter how sincere and conscientious its staff may be—successfully to administer a price fixing act directly affecting mines, workers, and consumers in every community in the nation," the committee said.

Increased prices, it said, will result in coal losing business to other forms of power, including gas, oil, or hydroelectric power. Once consumers have spent money to adapt their facilities to other forms of power the coal industry will lose them forever, the committee declared.

The Howe group, which is said to represent between 30 and 40 per cent of the nation's bituminous production, urges that the Guffey act be amended to create coöperating marketing agencies for coal. Such agencies, the committee contends, would enable the industry to put itself in a sound financial position and at the same time give the government sufficient authority to protect the consumer from unduly high prices.

Boosts Chicago's Bill.

Chicago's coal bill will be increased by about $3,500,000 a year when the minimum prices become effective, according to estimates made by coal operators. This estimate is based on a consumption of about 13,000,000 tons of coal annually for which price increases will range from 25 to 50 cents a ton.

When an attempt was made on Dec. 17, 1937, to enforce a schedule of minimum prices revolt flared among coal consumers thruout the country which reached its height in January, 1938. Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland, and Rochester, N. Y., were among the cities which sought court action to have the price scheme upset. The railroads joined the fight and again are threatening to use other forms of fuel if coal prices get too high.

The American Retail Coal association, representing about 40,000 retail coal dealers in 14 middle western states, late last week sent a copy of a resolution to the department of the interior urging that other fuels be put under the same control as that set up for the bituminous coal industry. It explained that control over other fuels is necessary if bituminous coal is to have an equal opportunity with them.

Interior Department in Charge.

The bituminous coal commission, which then administered the Guffey act, as a result of the opposition withdrew the price schedule after it had been in operation only 72 days. Since then the commission has been abolished, and administration of the Guffey act transferred to the interior department.

The Guffey act provides that the coal industry operate under a so-called code, with about 20 district boards of code members functioning as an aid to the central governmental agency at Washington. Coal producers signing the coal code pay a tax of 1 cent a ton on the sale of coal. Those who do not sign the code must pay an additional 19½ cents a ton tax.

The plane order, for a total of $99,641,880, went to the Glenn L. Martin company, Baltimore, Md. Numbers, types, and delivery dates were not disclosed.

Approves Housing Projects.

Charles F. Palmer, coördinator of defense housing, announced that President Roosevelt approved on Sept. 26 requests by the war department, the navy department, and the maritime commission for allocations totaling $95,340,000 involving 110 defense housing projects for the families of 27,240 enlisted men and defense workers.

These funds will be used to meet defense housing needs which cannot be handled promptly by private enterprise because of their temporary and low rental character. Locations are being withheld while sites are secured and final plans developed.

The ammunition loading plant, described as similar "in some respects" to the 11 million dollar explosives plant announced recently for Wilmington, Ill., will be built at Union Center, Ind. Cost of construction was not announced.

Will Employ 6,000 Persons.

Union Center is southeast of La Porte in La Porte county. The plant, when completed, will provide employment for approximately 6,000 persons, the war department said.

The other contract awards totaling $5,007,557 for supplies, equipment, and construction for the quartermaster corps, signal corps, and ordnance department included:

Emergency construction for expansion of regular army facilities. Fort Sam Houston, Tex., S. O. Yarbrough and George T. Reinhardt, Austin, Tex., $592,867.

WHEN ARE STOCKS CHEAP?

[Copyright: 1940: By The Chicago Tribune.]

When a recent survey was made of new inventions which the public would like to have science develop to make life easier, there was one overlooked—a magic touchstone or doodlebug which would quickly and accurately indicate the true value of stocks.

The craving by investors for such a device or formula is expressed in such searching questions as: Is this stock a good buy? Is the price too high? Is this a good time to buy? Are stocks cheap right now? What stocks should I buy?

When and at what price to buy or sell securities constitute the two principal problems of sound investment. A common stock bought at 20 may be a good investment and the same stock bought at 200 may turn out to have been an extremely unwise purchase.

Timing of investments not only involves forecasting major swings in the market but also analysis of price levels. It is not enough to look for cues anticipating when the market will start upward or when it will begin to slide. The time to buy or sell must be related to the price of the stock.

Stocks should be bought when their market prices are well below their intrinsic value as carefully appraised by analyzing past earnings, dividends and asset values. The objective standards by which true value can be estimated are not rigid, accurate yardsticks.

Approximating the intrinsic value of a stock is a complicated task involving critical examination of numerous earnings statements, balance sheets and assembling pertinent information about the company which issued it. But the job is necessary for careful investment. There are no short-cuts and ready formulas.

The investor buying common stocks can well place himself in the position of a person buying an interest in a private business. He should try to buy a share of the business at a price well below what it is worth to the private owner.

Common stocks can be sound investments if they are well-diversified as to industries and companies and if they are purchased at prices below their theoretical intrinsic values. For persons of limited means who cannot achieve adequate diversification of their investments, common stocks are not always suitable for investment.

SMART SET FINDS WAY TO GET ITS DRINKS ON STATE

Qualify for Jobless Dole; Night Clubs Profit.

New York, Sept. 28 [Special].—Unemployment insurance checks are being used to buy drinks and a night's fun in swanky night clubs for financially independent members of the "smart set," the World-Telegram reported today.

The unemployment insurance fund, created to aid unfortunates as part of the social-economic program, has become the target of some of the Park avenue crowd who make nightly forays into Manhattan "boob traps."

Those receiving unemployment insurance money are doing it legally, the paper said. There is nothing the administrators of the fund can do about the situation. No law is violated; only a moral code.

There is a lot of banter among members of this "smart set" regarding their state aid. They have qualified as required by law by having earned at least $175 in the previous calendar year and were unemployed on April 1, this year.

Receive $7 to $15 Weekly.

Payments range from $7 to $15 per week for 13 weeks, according to the amount earned by the applicant. To receive the maximum he must have earned at least $375 in one quarter of the preceding year.

One of the aids to this abuse of these social economic funds was the failure to incorporate in the law a provision which would govern persons who deliberately set out to qualify and immediately leave their jobs when they have accomplished their purpose. The law makes no restriction on how a person shall become unemployed; whether the job ended and he was thrown out of work for no fault of his own, whether he merely got tired, or whether his only intention was to participate in the 13 weeks insurance. Financial need does not enter into the qualification.

There is only one restraining influence on the recipient—if he is offered a job and refuses to take it ,he is dropped from the unemployment insurance rolls. Until a job is offered these members of the "smart set," the drinks are on the state.

Screen Stars on Dole.

Famous stage and screen personalities also enjoy unemployment insurance between shows, the World-Telegram said. Some known widely as being independently wealthy have filed applications for unemployment insurance. One famous Hollywood actress flatly stated that she was vacationing between shows, was qualified for unemployment insurance and she wanted it. "That money will buy my cigarets," she said.

Fritz Kaufmann, assistant to the executive director, insisted that the administration is helpless.

The administrative officers drag out laws in defense of the "smart set." They have a law handy which prohibits them from divulging the names of recipients of checks. The official attitude is that a qualified person may or may not need the money and it is all right with the administration if the checks swell night club coffers.

JAPANESE BOND PRICES DIP 2 TO 5 MORE POINTS

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—A continuation of Friday's selling movement tumbled Japanese loans for new losses running from 2 to 5 points in today's bond market. Unsettlement in the foreign list extended to the Australian and some other groups, but domestic corporate issues improved near the close after a hesitant start.

Apparently uncertainty over conjecture and gossip on possible results of the alliance with Germany and Italy caused holders of the Japanese government, municipal and industrial obligations to liquidate at the best prevailing bids.

Japanese national 6½s closed at 67¼, down 3⅜; the 5½s at 53, down 2; Shinyetsu electric 6½s at 50, down 5; Tokio City 5½s at 50, down 3, and Orient development 6s at 50, down 3½.

The downward sweep carried obligations of Australia, Italy, and Norway 1 to about 3 points under Friday's finals, but German government loans again stood out with gains running from fractions to around a point.

Only a few United States government issues were traded and prices showed little change.

Charges Democrats Sell Government Pamphlets

growth of the Reporter Plan, it is necessary to know something of the methods of Miss Mary Dewson, who conceived it in 1928 when Franklin D. Roosevelt was running for the governorship of New York. She put the rudiments of the plan into practice when he ran for reëlection as governor in 1930.

In 1932, as vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, Miss Dewson gave her ideas their first national tryout. So encouraged was she by the outcome that she began building the vast machine that is dedicated to perpetuating Mr. Roosevelt in office.

She promoted the Reporter plan on two shrewd principles: [1] stirring women to party activity by naming them to party posts, and [2] recognizing woman's intuitive aptitude for minutiae and her native thoroness and determination in accomplishing a job she understands.

Miss Dewson went into the 1936 Presidential campaign with more than 60,000 key women workers. That was four years ago.

Each State Organized.

Here is today's set up:

Each state central committee of the party has a woman vice chairman. Under her are six state directors in charge of the following activities: the Reporter plan, radio parties for hearing party broadcasts, publicity, speakers' bureaus, sale of the Democratic Digest—national organ of the women's division—and supervision of penny banks, shaped like donkeys, which bring in money that is spent for gasoline, other traveling expenses, entertainment, postage, and telephone tolls.

The county organization is identical, with a woman vice chairman at its head. In the all important precinct, the publicity director is replaced by a motor corps leader.

She mobilizes car owners and helps bring out the vote. The speakers' bureau gives way in the precinct to a Democratic visitors' bureau whose members visit homes, assure registration of party voters, see to it that absentees cast their ballots, and help in getting the voters to the polls.

Each of these workers is known as a reporter. She informs herself in the matter of New Deal claims and reports them to those she hopes to convert.

Hall Organization Value.

Of this six point state, county, precinct program, the Democratic Digest said in March, 1939:

"Its organization value can be surmised from these figures showing mobilization in a state with 100 counties and 1,000 precincts. The state vice chairman, in addition to a staff of six directors and 100 county vice chairmen, would have 600 county directors and 6,000 precinct heads. Such a working force would place every precinct in the Democratic column."

In Illinois there are 102 counties, or 714 county workers, and 8,303 precincts, or 58,121 precinct workers, according to the above reckoning. In New York the Reporter plan would have 434 county and 63,385 district [precint] workers. Only the leaders of the Women's division, now headed by Dorothy McAllister, know how many hundreds of thousands of workers the machine has in the nation.

As has been stated, the ammunition for this political army is supplied by the Women's division headquarters. Among the twelve kits, there is one each for agriculture, commerce, conservation, justice, labor, public workers, international relations, social welfare, finance, national defense, and the postal system. The twelfth kit is for speakers' material.

Without exception the brochures, booklets, bulletins, and speeches paint a dismal picture of pre-New Deal days and contrast it with a rosy present. Some hint broadly that the only way to keep these good things is to keep Mr. Roosevelt.

Distribution Volume Gigantic.

The volume of matter being distributed is tremendous. The 706,104 kits and 17,652,600 individual pieces previously estimated for Illinois would be reached if only the accredited workers called for by the organization plan each bought a set.

On this basis, said Lyons, New York would get 765,912 kits or 19,147,800 individual pieces of campaign matter. And it is obvious, he asserted, that others than actual workers buy kits.

The 25 cent charge for the batches of New Deal blurbs and hosannahs is "to cover average cost of folder and postage," the women's division explains in a printed notation. Lyons denounced this as a subterfuge.

"Who would pay 25 cents for an empty folder?" he asked. "It's what they contain that brings in the quarters. On the basis of 706,104 kits, Illinois workers alone would pay $176,526. New Yorkers would part with $191,478 for their 765,912 kits. Collections from the donkey banks also should be interesting.

"These receptacles are distributed among the women Democrats in the various counties. Each one is asked to pledge that she will drop in one coin each week. Even if the coin should be just a penny the return would be 52 cents a year.

Pennies Really Mount Up.

"And if only the accredited workers contributed this ridiculous amount, Illinois would raise $30,000 in a year and New York $32,000. Incidentally, women's division headquarters has warned that factories making the donkey banks are two weeks behind in orders.

"Finally, it should be borne in mind that the reporter plan is separate from and in addition to the regular Democratic precinct, ward, county, state, and national organizations. This is a federally subsidized multitude of women whose purpose it is to get into the homes with New Deal propaganda, paid for in part by the federal government, sold to the workers and recited to prospective New Deal voters."

Returning to the resemblance between the pattern of the Reporter plan and that of the Russian soviets of two decades ago, Lyons continued:

"The startling picture revealed by this evidence indicates clearly that the voting on Nov. 5 will not be merely to determine who shall be President. It will be a referendum for the first time in our history to determine whether or not this shall become a totalitarian government, under Roosevelt, or remain a democratic republic, under Willkie."

Lyons then read excerpts from an article published by The Democratic Digest in March, 1939, in which Miss Dewson disclosed some of the steps in building the new democratic machine.

Train Window Philosophy.

"Anything as big as the United States must be worked systematically," she wrote. "Look out of the train windows and contemplate how to reach the voters in every house without a precinct organization. . . .

"After Roosevelt's election [in 1932] all the thought and energy of the men was turned toward the national emergency. I decided that the women's division . . . had better put its mind on his reëlection. . . .

"The President appreciates woman's native ability more than any man I know . . .

"Distribution of 'Rainbow Fliers' in the 1936 campaign was a delight. [These are sheaves of brightly colored sheets, listing the New Deal's claimed benefactions to labor, agriculture, the needy, the old, and to business.

"Eighty-three million fliers were distributed. Thus millions of contacts were made with forgotten voters at the grass roots."

Demands Republican Action.

In closing, Lyons referred to charges in Washington Thursday by Rep. Everett M. Dirksen [R., Ill.] that government made movies are playing a part in the Democratic campaign, by praising New Deal activities. He said he had additional material on this phase, which he would make public later.

"We are up against the most formidable political machine in the history of the nation," he declared. "It is firing out literature in salvos of 300 pieces to the batch. It envisioned the third term in 1934. For six years it has been quietly doing its work. The Republican party must act at once!"

Following is an inventory of literature found in the Social Security kit, sold for 25 cents to workers for the Reporter Plan, the political machine sponsored by the women's division of the Democratic national committee:

'Hurricane Timber' to Be Sold to Wholesale Trade

Harry Joseph, Chicago lumber company executive and national bank receiver, announced upon his return to the city yesterday that sales of "hurricane" timber thru a newly organized corporation which he heads will be made to wholesalers and consuming industries. The new company, Eastern Pine Sales corporation, acquired lumber said to have a retail value of 8 million dollars in a United States government transaction involving timber felled in the 1938 hurricane in New England.

LEWIS STRIVES TO SAVE UNION'S CASH HE LENT

Money Put in New Dealer's 'Model' Mines.

at least eight years. A United Mine Worker loan of about $75,000 was made some 18 months ago to pay off a loan of similar amount from the Reconstruction Finance corporation. The RFC loan was repaid promptly in order to establish credit.

Larger Loan Is Asked.

Then another application was filed with the RFC for a bigger and better loan—$475,000 this time. But despite Miss Roche's personal appeal last spring in Washington, where she has many friends within the administration, the RFC turned down the loan. The RFC was not satisfied with the financial condition of the company and demanded financial reorganization before it would consider such a big loan, according to outside sources.

Would Burden Government.

Lewis, the C. I. O. chieftain, who usually insists upon being begged for his favors, has discreetly remained behind the scenes in this case. Those "in the know" insist that the second attempt to borrow from the RFC was a deliberate attempt to recover Lewis' investment and put the burden on the government.

So secretive had the deal been kept that Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator, said that he was amazed to learn of Lewis' interest—and Jones usually knows the history of his loans from A to Z.

"We only know Miss Roche in connection with the company," he told THE TRIBUNE, "and the only purpose of any loan by the RFC was to prevent the mine from closing and throwing people out of work."

The company's books show that Miss Roche has made loans to the company, but the source of her funds is not revealed. Neither is the United Mine Workers required to furnish public statements on its finances.

Refuses to Divulge Debt.

When Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, was asked how much Rocky Mountain Fuel owed the union, he replied promptly:

"I couldn't tell you offhand."

When pressed further and asked whether the total was $361,000, Kennedy became cautious and replied with finality, "I'm sorry, I couldn't discuss the matter at all."

The company has avoided reorganization under the national bankruptcy act on the grounds that such proceedings would be "long and expensive." Informed sources add that it was also to prevent disclosure of the loan transactions. Lewis is in a vulnerable spot with the union because the collateral for the loans is worth only about one-tenth of the sum loaned.

In desperation Lewis has sent a management company from Cleveland, the Coal Mine Management company, headed by William Taylor, to take over the company and "stabilize it financially." This management firm temporarily exercises control of the company for the duration of its contract and gets a sizeable fee.

Interest Payments Cut.

A plan was put thru in April, 1939, reducing the interest payments on the $3,089,100 of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds to 1 to 2½ per cent annually, depending upon maturity of coupons. The maturity of the bonds was also extended from April 1, 1943, to April 1, 1953. The bonds have dropped from a nominal value of 50 cents on the dollar to a 1940 high bid of 36 and a low of 12 cents. Last year the high and low bids were 24 and 10½, respectively.

The company has not paid any dividends on the 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock since 1913. The majority of the common stock is owned by Miss Roche.

She inherited a large block of stock on the death of her father in 1927, but did not acquire a majority until the company ran into bloody labor strikes and she assumed control to forward her plans for unionization.

Named Costigan Counsel.

She selected Edward P. Costigan, later United States senator from Colorado, as general counsel. He had formerly been attorney for the United Mine Workers. For vice president of her company she picked John Lawson, former president of the Colorado state Federation of Labor who was once indicted for a labor slaying. Then she asked John L. Lewis to come in and unionize her five mines, making it the only union coal company in the state. It was hailed as a model, and Lewis began putting in money to keep it going. A tough battle with the Rockefeller owned Colorado Fuel and Iron company didn't help the company financially.

Then came the New Deal and Miss Roche naturally gravitated into it. She was a Vassar graduate and a classmate and close friend of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins at Columbia university, had done social welfare work, was the first policewoman in Denver, and constantly preached "social betterment."

Took Treasury Post.

In the New Deal she became the first woman to hold the office of assistant secretary of the treasury, where she supervised the public health service. In 1934 she ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination for governor of Colorado. She left the treasury in 1937 to return to coal mining, but retained some duties in connection with the National Youth administration and social security. She has also maintained a close friendship with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

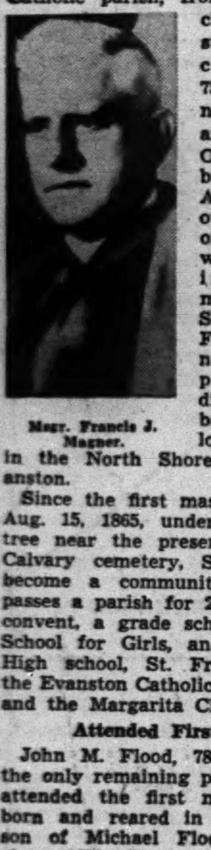
START DRIVE TO SAVE PEDESTRIANS

ST. MARY PARISH TO OBSERVE 75 YEARS' GROWTH

Embraces Wide Area in South Evanston.

BY JUANITA DALY.



Msgr. Francis J. Magner.

St. Mary's church, Evanston's first Catholic parish, from which three churches have stemmed, will celebrate its 75th anniversary next Sunday and Monday, Oct. 7. Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch and other dignitaries of the church will take part in the high mass at noon Sunday. Msgr. Francis J. Magner, pastor, is planning the diamond jubilee banquet the following evening in the North Shore hotel in Evanston.

Since the first mass was said on Aug. 15, 1865, under a white oak tree near the present entrance to Calvary cemetery, St. Mary's has become a community. It encompasses a parish for 2,600 persons, a convent, a grade school, Marywood School for Girls, and St. George's High school, St. Francis hospital, the Evanston Catholic Woman's club, and the Margarita Club for Girls.

Attended First Mass.

John M. Flood, 78 years old, is the only remaining parishioner who attended the first mass. He was born and reared in Evanston, the son of Michael Flood, who came about 1851. He is a charter member of St. Charles court, Catholic Order of Foresters, and has served as secretary since its founding 54 years ago.

The Rev. P. N. Flannigan came from Chicago to celebrate the mass, and from then until 1872 pastors came from Grosse Point and Rose-Hill, but there was no resident pastor. The church property was purchased in 1864 and a foundation was laid, but the funds ran out and a frame structure, later the school building, was erected and used for three years.

In 1869 the first building was finished according to the original plan, and the first pastor, the Rev. Michael Donohoe of Waukegan, was appointed in 1872. He came to this church and a new parochial residence. When Father Donohoe's health began to decline 10 years later, several assistants were sent to him.

Introduction of a Priest.

The last one, the Rev. P. C. Conway, whom the old pastor introduced to the congregation as "a young man just fresh from ordination, without any tricks or schemes, and the holy oils still dripping from his fingers," built the present church. The stone building, constructed by Michael Foley, an old parishioner, was dedicated in May, 1892.

Five years earlier, when the number of Catholics of German birth and blood was quite large, the Rev. Otto Greenebaum was sent to organize the new parish of St. Nicholas, 806 Ridge avenue. When Father Donohoe died in 1893, the Rev. Hugh P. Smyth was appointed rector and remained until his death in 1927.

The Rev. Thomas M. Burke, an indefatigable worker, was assigned to Evanston also in '93 and he helped to establish St. Jerome's in Rogers Park. At the turn of the century a third priest, the Rev. Thomas F. Egan, came from Ireland to help. Charles J. Connor, St. Mary's historian, says that this much loved priest dotted his speech with witty remarks spoken with a "delectable accent." He is now Msgr. Egan, pastor of St. Sabina.

Start Girls' Academy.

With the help of these priests, the Visitation nuns started an academy for girls, which was taken over by the Sisters of Providence in 1915 and renamed Marywood school; the Franciscan sisters took the old Kirk mansion at Ridge avenue and Austin street and established St. Francis hospital; St. Mary's ball park was purchased in 1909. A convent was remodeled, a new school built, and a new rectory completed for Father Smyth's silver jubilee as a priest in 1906.

During the golden jubilee year of 1915 the Rev. David P. O'Leary, who assisted at the first mass, and his sister, Mrs. Ellen Lynch, donated funds for a home for girls, named the Margarita club in memory of their mother and sister who bore the name Margaret. The late Mrs. Mary C. Magill took charge of the home without compensation until 1924. The present club at 1566 Oak street was finished just before Father Smyth's death.

The woman's club property was acquired in 1919-'20. About 1921, when parishioners were moving to the northwest part of the city, Father Smyth decided to establish St. Athanasius, now located at Lincoln street and Ashland avenue. Father Smyth and Msgr. Peter L. Biermann of St. Nicholas helped to found St. George's High school, which was dedicated in October, 1927.

A STORY OF AMERICA

The Metropolitan section plans a series of stories on incidents which have made those involved conscious of their love of country and the many blessings which America bestows upon its citizens. Readers are invited to submit suggestions concerning such incidents which have touched themselves or others. Address The Metropolitan Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

BY DAVID ANDERSON.

Harold E. Giroux.

It was late in the afternoon on the Fourth of July 30 years ago. The parade had swept past Oakley avenue and Madison street, leaving in its wake a litter of firecracker paper, peanut shells, and red, white, and blue bunting.

A 12 year old boy stood beside his newsstand shouting his papers. The parade with its blaring bugles and rolling drums was over and the watchers and stragglers were going home. One of the passersby was a civil war veteran, a man about 60 years old, wearing the G. A. R. uniform with the soft blue campaign hat trimmed in gold cord.

Veteran Recovers the Flag.

From across the street the boy saw the veteran stoop and pick out of the gutter a small penny American flag that some one in the parade had dropped. He hauled out a huge handkerchief from his pocket and carefully, tenderly wiped away the mudstains. Then he crossed the street and stood the little flag upright on the newsstand.

That happened 30 years ago. The boy, since grown to manhood, himself a veteran of the world war, has never forgotten that scene. He is Harold E. Giroux, 841 Barry avenue.

"I'll never forget that incident as long as I live," he says. "For me it is an emblem of the American ideal of freedom as symbolized by the flag.

Always Keep Flag Aloft.

"After placing the flag on the stand he explained to me why he had picked it up. He told me of the tradition of the American army of never letting the colors drop, how when the color bearer in battle falls the nearest soldier rushes to take his place, holding the Stars and Stripes aloft.

"You see, my grandparents used to talk to me about freedom, how America provided an opportunity to believe as you pleased, worship as you pleased. America, they told me, stood for those things, and that the American flag was its symbol of freedom. The G. A. R. veteran brought home to me the love for the flag.

"In those days we didn't have Americanism or civics classes in our schools, but this incident served as a complete course in Americanism for me. I can still see that G. A. R. veteran as he talked to me, tall, erect, proud, his Van Dyke beard neatly trimmed, his uniform spotless."

Influenced His Entire Life.

This incident, Mr. Giroux believes, influenced his whole adult life. Ever since he came home from the war he has engaged in civic and patriotic affairs. All his spare time he spends in aiding his community, serving on committees, and taking part in American Legion activities.

Mr. Giroux is a member of 44 committees and organizations. And he is an active member of most of them. The greater part of his committee work he transacts by mail and phone. A few of the organizations and the offices he holds in them include Harold A. Taylor post of the American Legion; 6th District American Legion; member of Voiture 220, The Forty and Eight; president of United States Army Base Hospital association; troop committeeman, Boy Scouts of America; executive committee member, Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A.; public relations committee member, Nonsectarian League for Americanism; secretary of the citizens' civic committee of Lake View; president, Lake View Community council; chairman, education committee for Lake View, and chairman of the new public library committee for Lake View.

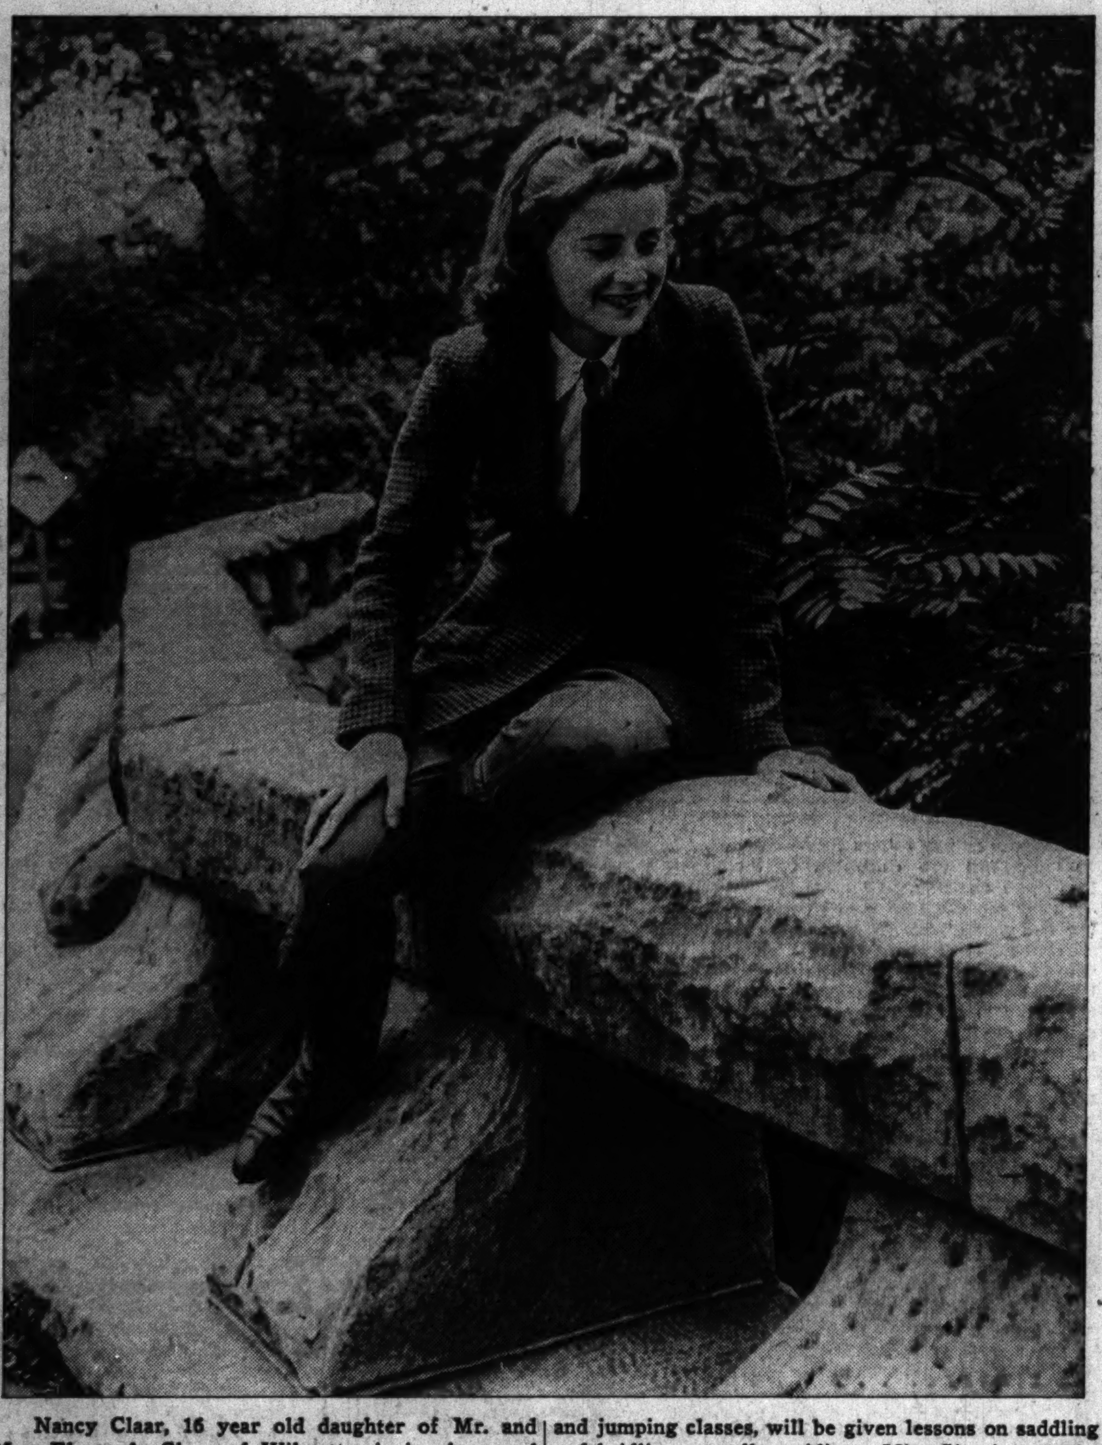
RELIGIOUS ACTION COUNCIL TO HOLD DINNER MEETING

Plans for holding a rally and dinner meeting of the Lake View Council on Religious Action next month were completed last week. The dinner meeting will be held Tuesday evening, Oct. 22, at the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A., 3333 North Marshfield avenue.

Guest speakers will be Bishop Sheil, the Rev. Albert Buckner Coe, pastor of the First Congregational church of Oak Park, and Dr. Louis L. Mann, rabbi of Sinai temple. Dr. A. James Riffkind, 310 South Michigan avenue, is chairman of the arrangements committee.

The council was formed several months ago to establish a closer relationship between members of all religious organizations in the community. It is composed of 30 institutions.

Heads Riding Classes at New Trier



Nancy Claar, 16 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer A. Claar of Wilmette, is in charge of riding classes for the Girls' Athletic association at New Trier High school. Students, grouped in beginning, intermediate, low advanced, regular advanced, and jumping classes, will be given lessons on saddling and bridling as well as riding. Miss Claar's committee is composed of Marjorie Youngberg, Marjorie Johnston, Charlotte Wilds, and Lois Hawley.

Bankers, Cooks Rub Elbows on Sunday Hikes

It is only necessary to belong to the human race to walk with the North Shore Hiking club, sponsored by the Izaak Walton league. This one restriction was set up by Lloyd Faxon of Winnetka and several of his friends who founded the club 10 months ago. Otherwise, the club welcomes men and women of all creeds and ages.

One-third of the group walks regularly, the others are newcomers. They come from everywhere, all over the United States, Europe, England and Africa. Dr. John Levis of Glencoe speaks of his experiences in the Transvaal, South Africa; a Lake Forest woman has lived in Calcutta, India, and Miss Daphne Drinkwater talks about the hunting expedition which she accompanied into New Zealand.

Charles Hetzel of Northwestern university, who is in charge of public nights twice a week at the campus observatory, talks about the stars in their courses. To make the hikes even more profitable along educational lines, the club plans to have nature study groups headed by instructors from Loyola and Northwestern universities and Lake Forest college.

No Officers, No Dues.

The club started informally and continues so. There are no officers, no dues and no regulations. A group simply gathers at 9 o'clock every Sunday morning, rain or shine, at the North Western railway station park in Winnetka and 15 minutes later starts out on a three hour jaunt.

Among the regular hikers are Mr. Faxon, a lawyer; Fairfield Porter, an artist; Arthur M. Barrett, who belongs to the Walton league, and two manufacturers, all of Winnetka, who have been hiking for ten years. Last December Mr. Barrett suggested that they expand and let others discover the benefits of getting away from town and into the country.

400 Have Hiked.

During the last six months more than 400 persons from the section, from Rogers Park to Lake Forest, have walked with the club. The large number of regular walkers proves the need, believes Mr. Faxon, and he expects the group eventually to attract 250 hikers 52 Sundays a year.

The club appeals to any one, from bankers to cooks in residence who are bored, lonely, or exasperated and melancholy over the current disorders in the world. The youngest hiker is 14 years old; the oldest, 70. And they claim to regain physical and mental health.

"The walks are not dull, because of the ever changing personnel," pointed out Mr. Faxon, "and every one has something different to offer. We invite every one to come and hike with us and watch their worries fade like snow in the sunshine."

Builds His Own Pulpit

The Rev. J. W. F. Davies, pastor of the First Congregational church of Waukegan, is a preacher who builds his own pulpit. When the old church burned down last year, the Rev. Mr. Davies went to work in his basement workshop and constructed most of the altar furniture for the new structure which was dedicated formally last Sunday. The church was founded in 1871.

PASTOR BUILDS ALTAR FURNITURE FOR NEW CHURCH

For fifteen years the Rev. J. W. F. Davies has been puttering around in his basement workshop. His hobby is woodworking; furniture his specialty.

But it wasn't until this year that his hobby became part of his regular duties as preacher. This is the story:

Last November the Rev. Mr. Davies' church, the first Congregational of Waukegan, was destroyed by fire. Police believe the blaze was incendiary. The church, the oldest in Waukegan, was founded in 1871.

The 200 parishioners immediately began making plans to erect another structure. They collected almost $40,000 and while the new church was being built they met in a hall. The church was dedicated last Sunday.

For more than six months Mr. Davies has spent most of his spare time in the basement workshop of his home at 334 Utica street. He has built practically all the pulpit furniture. He constructed the pulpit, the altar, the children's altar, the baptismal font and the hymn board. The furniture is mostly of walnut, with cream and ivory trimming.

The Rev. Mr. Davies, who is 61 years old, has been pastor of the Waukegan church for seven years. Previously he was associate pastor of the Winnetka Congregational church for 23 years.

DEWEY DEMANDS CITY GET MORE DEFENSE WORK

New Deal Niggardly, Says Candidate.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

An adequate share of armament contracts for Chicago, in the interest both of the nation's safety and of a fair deal for the city's labor, was demanded by Charles S. Dewey, Republican candidate for congressman from the 9th congressional district, at a rally at Sheridan road and Diversey boulevard yesterday.

Dewey is setting the campaign pace in his own district and for the five other districts that include parts of northern and northwestern Chicagoland. Republicans say he is certain this year to unseat Congressman James McAndrews, whom he came surprisingly close to beating two years ago.

Dewey, a former assistant secretary of the treasury under President Coolidge, declared that Chicago is getting only 1 per cent of the defense projects recently ordered, in spite of the fact that the city produces 8 per cent of the nation's goods.

Injustice to the City.

This neglect of Chicago is not only an injustice to the city's workers, both skilled and unskilled, but is also a hazard to the nation's entire defense program, the candidate declared.

He charged that the administration, after neglecting proper defense measures for seven years, now is fumbling in its efforts to make up for lost time. He branded as serious mistakes the creation of new factories and industries near the two ocean coasts and the Canadian border, where they are vulnerable to attack, and the draining of skilled labor from Chicago.

"The eastern seaboard, the Pacific coast, the northern border—these are not localities where calm, considered judgment would place those facilities so essential to defense," Dewey said. "To safeguard these vital industries they should not be placed on exposed frontiers but should be established at a safe distance inland.

Sees Duty Clearly.

"As congressman from the 9th district it will be my duty to consider the rearmament problem both from the national viewpoint and from that of the people of my own city and district. From either standpoint the people of this country and this city have not received what is their due.

"Despite claims of the Roosevelt administration that it is looking after the interests of labor, Chicago is being denied its share of armament contracts. Those contracts mean jobs for skilled workers, machinists, carpenters, in fact, for virtually every one."

Of Chicago's 10 congressmen, only one is making efforts to get Chicago a just share of this defense program business, Dewey said. That one is a Republican, Ralph E. Church of the 10th district. The other nine, all Democrats, "have failed lamentably in their duty to their constituents" in that respect, Dewey asserted.

New Dealers Don't Care.

"Those nine New Dealers," he continued, "are showing little interest in obtaining for the skilled and unskilled working men of this city the opportunity to do their share in rearming our country, or in obtaining for our people the opportunities for employment which they seek and which they need.

"They should not be forced to leave their homes and perhaps even their families to seek employment in industrial centers of the east, of Detroit, and of the Pacific coast."

Chicago, he pointed out, is not only safe from attack, but is also close to raw material sources and has a vast reservoir of the labor that is a vital part of any defense plan.

Sees Gain in Vote.

In the 10th district, George A. Paddock, Republican nominated for the post from which Church is retiring, announced last week that a precinct canvass in Evanston, his home city, forecasts a substantial increase in a normally heavy Republican vote.

The test indicates that many Democrats will vote for Willkie in protest against the third term. Numerous Democrats have volunteered for campaign service with the Willkie camp, Paddock said.

Heavy registration, he pointed out, has prompted City Clerk Edward W. Bell to employ additional help and to keep his office open evenings thru next Friday. The office will be open for registration also next Saturday afternoon and on the evening of Oct. 7, Paddock said.

Sure He'll Beat Schuetz.

James C. Moreland, the Republican nominee in the 7th district, declared there were numerous signs that he will retire Congressman Leonard W. Schuetz on Nov. 5. In addition to the general trend toward Republicanism in the district, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the present congressman's conduct in office, Moreland said.

He declared that Schuetz is curt and inattentive to his visiting constituents in Washington if their views do not coincide with his own, according to individuals who claim personal experience of such discourtesies.

Moreland said that Schuetz, who is of Polish ancestry, has alienated others of similar extraction by his attempts to create the impression that

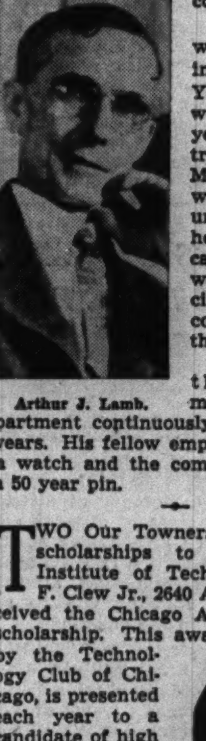
OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

MORE than 100 employés of Remington Rand Inc., gathered at the Bismark hotel recently to congratulate Arthur J. Lamb, 4240 Clarendon avenue, upon his completion of 50 years of work with the company.



Arthur J. Lamb.

Lamb started with the company in Ilion, New York, in 1889. He worked there one year and then transferred to Milwaukee. He was in Milwaukee until 1893 when he came to Chicago and has worked in the city office of the company since then.

He has been in the typewriter maintenance department continuously during his 50 years. His fellow employés gave him a watch and the company gave him a 50 year pin.

TWO Our Towners recently won scholarships to Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Harry F. Clew Jr., 2640 Argyle street, received the Chicago Alumni regional scholarship. This award, established by the Technology Club of Chicago, is presented each year to a candidate of high scholastic standing and personal qualifications selected by competition from a large group from Chicago and suburbs. Our Towner Clew, a graduate of Amundsen High school, was a member of the R. O. T. C. The second winner was awarded a freshman competitive scholarship. He is Norman H. Callner, 1339 Lunt avenue, a former student of Sullivan High school.

The Our Town reporter regrets a typographical error in last Sunday's column. The name of Bert Jannes, Lincoln park maintenance foreman, was misspelled. Mr. Jannes recently suggested that candy and ice cream bar companies print on their wrappers the words, "please throw wrapper in refuse containers." Four of the manufacturers have responded favorably. The suggestion was made to aid the park district's antilitter campaign.

MISS ELISABETH RICHARDSON, a new Our Towner, has been appointed director of religious education at St. Luke's Episcopal procathedral, Evanston. Miss Richardson was formerly supervisor of kindergarten work and religious education at the Church of the Ascencion in New York City. She received her education at St. Faith's House, New York City. She is a member of several national church organizations and is vice president of St. Faith's alumnae association.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garling, 5626 Wayne avenue, recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The Garlings have resided at their present address for 25 years. They have one daughter, Mrs. Austin M. Copp.

EIGHTEEN years old William Craven, 718 Clark street, Evanston, after hitch-hiking 6,000 miles this summer, recently put his thumb back into normal position and returned to school. He is a sophomore at Iowa State college. In his travels-by-thumb he passed thru fourteen states and visited ten national parks.

W. M. Peterson, chief of police of Winnetka, recently was reëlected sergeant-at-arms of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. It is Chief Peterson's ninth consecutive term in that office.

GERMAN METHODIST PASTOR NOTES 50TH PULPIT YEAR TODAY

The Rev. Henry C. Loeppert, pastor for 23 years of the First German Methodist church, Armitage avenue and Dayton street, will celebrate his golden anniversary as a Methodist clergyman today.

Parishioners of the church will hold an anniversary program morning and afternoon at the church. In the evening there will be a reception and banquet in the community rooms.

The Rev. Mr. Loeppert is 74 years old. Before coming to the First German church he served as pastor of Methodist churches in Danville and Champaign, Ill. For 30 years he was trustee and president of Berea [Ohio] Methodist Orphan home.

POSTERS TO AID IN CUTTING TOLL OF 502 DEATHS

8,735 Walkers Hurt by Automobiles.

Chicago's campaign to cut the annual death toll of 500 pedestrians recently begun in the loop by the placing of safety posters on each street corner will move to the north side this week.

The campaign was organized after a study of last year's figures of deaths and injuries in the city, when 502 pedestrians were killed and 8,735 injured.

The posters, each an attractive advertisement of common safety rules, will be put up first on four of the north side's most dangerous street corners. These intersections have been analyzed in detail in a series of articles in the Metropolitan section.

Most Dangerous Corners.

The posters will appear at the intersections of North-Ogden-Larrabee, Lincoln-Ashland-Belmont, Lawrence-Broadway, and Ashland-Foster-Clark, all four of which have been listed among the north side's 20 "public enemy" corners. Posters also will appear at the intersection of Irving Park road and Lincoln and Damen avenues.

The campaign is being sponsored by the Chicago Motor club, Mayor Kelly, city officials and community civic and business leaders. The action to place the poster warnings in the neighborhoods came as the result of a joint meeting of the motor club's Area councils which was attended by city officials. The meeting was held Tuesday at the Palmer house.

The action was approved by Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer, and Ald. George D. Kells [28th], chairman of the city council committee on traffic and public safety.

Says Deaths Unnecessary.

The poster campaign has been launched to check the slaughter of 500 pedestrians annually on the streets of the city. Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, declared that three-fourths of the city's annual traffic toll is pedestrians. These deaths are nearly 100 per cent unnecessary, he said, and can be prevented, largely by means of education.

Predicting that the posters would result in prevention of many deaths and injuries among adult pedestrians, he said that education and supervision among children of grade school age have resulted in a sharp reduction of casualties in that group. Records show, he added, that the typical pedestrian who is struck on the city streets by a car is a man more than 55 years old who drives a car only occasionally, if at all.

Mr. Sorenson asserted that if jaywalking alone could be curtailed the pedestrian safety drive would be a success. Last year 196 jay-walkers were killed, he said.

Three Safety Rules.

The posters from time to time are to be replaced with new designs. In addition to warning pedestrians of unsafe walking practices, the posters point out three rules for crossing streets safely. They are:

1. Never cross between intersections.
2. Cross only on green light.
3. Look both right and left when crossing intersections with no traffic signals.

North side organizations and representatives listed as co-sponsors of the campaign include Percy Baines, Lower North Community council; W. C. Calvert, North Central association; Leo Dolkhart, Howard District Business Men's association; A. L. T. Hoffmann, Central Uptown Chicago association; Paul Darrow Paddock, North Shore Property Owners association, and Ernest Goranson, Chicago Recreation commission.

NILES CENTER WILL BE SKOKIE AFTER TUESDAY

Niles Center is expected to end its name troubles once and for all Tuesday evening. Members of the village board will hold a public hearing for protests [if any], scratch a line thru the prsent name and write in the new one—Skokie.

Notice of the new name will be filed with the secretary of state and after 60 days it will be official. Locally, however, Skokie will be the name from Tuesday evening on.

For the last several years groups of villagers have tried to change the name. Once they almost succeeded in getting the town called Ridgeview. The village board rejected it, presumably on the grounds that, while Niles Center has a view, it hasn't much of a ridge.

Post Kollege Klub to Hear Lecture by Music Director

Emory L. Gallup, music director of the Evanston First Methodist church, will give a demonstration lecture on the organ before members of the Post Kollege Klub tonight. Frank McKinney will be in charge of arrangements for the first monthly party to be held Friday in the Great hall. Jimmy Evans, all-American football player from Northwestern university, will tell about his experiences next Sunday and on Oct. 13, the Rev. Arthur T. Clark, assistant minister, will address the club.

BOOSTER FOR BRIDGE.

Last Sunday Voice R. L. wrote to your paper that the park district planning commission should bridge the outer lagoon and drive opposite the center of Lincoln park zoo. The old bridge, he says, was torn down years ago. R. L. is perfectly right, it seems to me. A bridge is needed here to allow park visitors easy access to the lake front. I hope the planning commission will do something about it. PARK FAN.

ASKS EVENING SCHOOL NEWS.

I've been interested in reading your stories on the opening of evening schools and plan to take some courses myself. I'm sure they would interest many readers besides myself. BUSINESS WOMAN.

G. O. P. VICTORY COUNTED ON IN SIXTH DISTRICT

Leaders Expect to Win Assembly Seats.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

William G. Knox.

Republican candidates for the Illinois senate and house from the 6th district expect to lead a G. O. P. victory march at the polls Nov. 5, they said last week after a careful survey of the territory now held by Democrats. The 6th senatorial district is a long, narrow slice taking in most of Evanston and parts of north side wards 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 49, and 50.

Altho the district has a Democratic senator and two of the three house members belong to the New Deal, it is traditionally Republican.

Campaigning as a team are the three legislative candidates, William G. Knox, for senator, and James J. Barbour and Alan E. Ashcraft Jr., for state representatives.

Cheered by Primary.

Knox, who lives at 1449 Fargo avenue, is much cheered by the results of the April primary. Despite the control exercised by the Democratic machine, the Republican vote on this office lagged only 2,597 behind the Democratic.

"In the last election for senator, in 1936, the Democratic primary lead was 10,300, about four times greater than this year," Knox said. "And in that year the Democratic nominee won in November by only 2,800 votes. The same shrinkage will again occur between primary and election day and that will win the ball game for us."

Knox is a manufacturer and distributor of electrical supplies. He has worked hard as a precinct captain, the lowliest job in the political organization. For two years he has been Cook county chairman of the Illinois Republican Service Men's league.

Foe Criticized by L. V. L.

His Democratic opponent, Senator John J. Meyers, was not much in evidence on the senate floor. The nonpartisan Legislative Voters' league reported of him: "Voting record mighty poor. Has failed flatly to measure up to standards people of such an intelligent district have the right to expect."

Youth and long experience are represented by the pair of house nominees. Former Senator Barbour has the experience and a record of 20 years in the senate consistently praised by the L. V. L. His teammate, Ashcraft, is 34 years old, an attorney, and Evanston alderman since 1935.

Both Barbour and Ashcraft are urging the public to mark the ballot so as to give each 1½ votes. This method of keeping their total votes almost even would be most effective. Each voter has three votes for this office, which may be plumped for a single candidate or divided among two or three.

Urgent Need of Change.

A student of government and the passing scene for the 52 years he has lived in the district, former Senator Barbour is telling the people that the present state of affairs must be changed—and soon.

"The Democrats have not had a governor to run the state during the two years since Gov. Horner became ill," Barbour said.

If any spot in the United States will go Republican in November, it is the 6th senatorial district, Barbour said.

Ashcraft assails the Democratic nominees as pay rollers wrose votes on legislation are controled by the patronage machine.

"They are not free men representing the voters," he said. "Meyers is an asphalt foreman at $4,000 a year. One of the house members is on the board of local improvements while the other is a $2,900 forest preserve superintendent. They've got to vote as they're told."

The Democratic house nominees are Representatives George H. Smith and Charles H. Weber. Smith has been campaigning actively, altho it is early perhaps because of Weber's habit of leading his teammates by as much as 20,000 votes.

Smith, a brother of Clayton F. Smith, president of the Cook county board, lives at 2200 Carmen avenue. He is president of the 50th ward Democratic organization and superintendent of construction for the forest preserve district.

The L. V. L. reviewed Smith's second term with these words: "Earnest, steady attendant at sessions. Hard worker, has shown by his votes some independence."

Weber, Democratic committeeman of the 45th ward, has a real estate office at 2924 Southport avenue. He also has a yacht off the coast of Florida. Of his six terms in the house the L. V. L. said: "Record does not justify another term."

he is a German because he was born in Polish territory under German rule.

In his talks thru the district, Moreland is hammering against the third term.

"A third term," he said in one of the talks, "means the passing of the age of opportunity, of individualism, for all time. The President's continuance in office could mean only that the people want a dictatorship with all its stands for. I am confident that is not the case and that New Dealism will be voted down in November."

Hot Race in 1st.

Temperatures rose perceptibly in the already hot race in the 1st district last week. In this area, which includes downtown Chicago as well as the large colored population of the near south side, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell and former State Senator William E. King are the principals.

King, a Republican, charged that his rival, the Democratic incumbent, "finds his chief support in an unholy atmosphere." He attacked the political alliance between Mitchell and "his political boss," former Ald. William L. Dawson, who was a Republican until he became Democratic committeeman of the 2d ward last year.

"Dawson is supporting the present congressman with certain reservations and suspicions," King said. "Dawson's aid of Mitichell is a kind of forced support, because he realizes that the congressman is more of a liability than an asset.

"Mitchell in his speeches constantly boasts not of his allegiance to the 1st congressional district and the people of his own race [both candidates are colored], but of his political devotion to the philosophy of southern senators and representatives who dictate his vote in congress."

"The largest factor in this business"

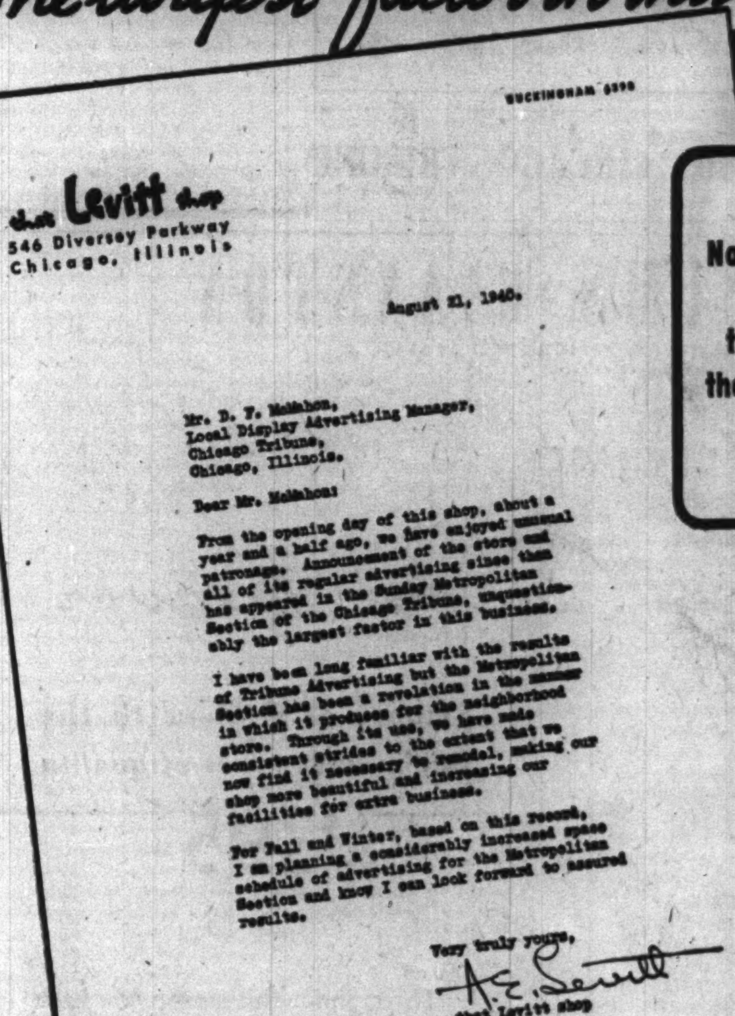
Success of North Side woman's shop attributed to advertising in the Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section



BUCKINGHAM [illegible]

that Levitt shop
546 Diversey Parkway
Chicago, Illinois

August 21, 1940.

Mr. D. F. McMahon,
Local Display Advertising Manager,
Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. McMahon:

From the opening day of this shop, about a year and a half ago, we have enjoyed unusual patronage. Announcement of the store and all of its regular advertising since then has appeared in the Sunday Metropolitan Section of the Chicago Tribune, unquestionably the largest factor in this business.

I have been long familiar with the results of Tribune Advertising but the Metropolitan Section has been a revelation in the manner in which it produces for the neighborhood store. Through its use, we have made consistent strides to the extent that we now find it necessary to remodel, making our shop more beautiful and increasing our facilities for extra business.

For Fall and Winter, based on this record, I am planning a considerably increased space schedule of advertising for the Metropolitan Section and know I can look forward to assured results.

Very truly yours,
A. E. Levitt

● In the letter above, another neighborhood merchant tells what advertising in the Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section has helped him to accomplish in the past year and a half.

Have you ever looked into the details of the Tribune's low-cost advertising plan?

Right now is a particularly good time to do so. Higher industrial activity is boosting the buying power of families in all parts of Chicago. You can launch a strong business-getting effort now in circumstances which are highly favorable for cashing in on it.

Decide now to get more information about the Tribune plan which 745 neighborhood enterprises used last year to solicit the patronage of the people best able to trade with them. Call SUPerior 0100—Metropolitan section advertising.

ZONING TROUBLE BESETS TOWNS ON NORTH SHORE

5 More No Man's Lands Threaten Area.

Not one but five No Man's Lands have popped up on the north shore to give residents a large dose of zoning trouble.

These five "orphan acres," as their incorporated neighbors call them, have arisen as five hangovers from the original No Man's Land headache on the northeast corner of Wilmette. This section, which made modest headlines for years, was swallowed up legally last year by the village. After the annexation north shore residents breathed a little more easily.

But after a glance at the map and a study of the zoning applications before the county board, real estate men and community leaders got that old frantic feeling again.

Railway Still in Doubt.

For example, there was the application for a permit to operate a miniature railway, whistle and all, at Illinois and Skokie roads just outside Wilmette. The village protested to the county zoning board and the matter is still in the hands of that body. That was the new No Man's Land No. 1.

Last week Marion T. Martin, president of the North Shore Property Owners association, rose up and warned his fellow home owners that four more No Man's Lands are lurking in their neighborhood. The association has dedicated itself to guard what it calls "the residential character of the north shore."

Like Cato of old, who warned his fellow Romans with the refrain, "Delenda est Carthago" [Carthage must be destroyed], Mr. Martin summoned his fellow north shore residents to stand guard against the "orphan acres."

Urges Careful Guarding.

"Citizens," he said, "should protest against any proposal for utilizing No Man's Land close to the north shore suburbs that would be injurious to homes. There is no reason why these areas should not be as carefully guarded as sections lying within the corporate limits of the municipalities."

The second No Man's Land which Mr. Martin has listed is Glencoe's own particular headache. It is bounded on the north by Dundee road, on the east by the village limits, on the south by Forks avenue, and on the west by Sunset Ridge road. The southern portion of this area is forest preserve.

"Orphan acres No. 3" is between Winnetka and Northfield, just east of the Skokie road and north of Willow road. This area also is forest preserve, which, Mr. Martin says, is technically a No Man's Land.

Next on his list is a triangular area extending about 100 feet. It is in Winnetka, just north of Winnetka avenue and northeast of the North Shore railroad.

Near Lake Forest.

No. 5 is farther north, between Lake Forest and Highland park. It is bounded on the north by the southern limits of Lake Forest, on the east by the western limits of Highland Park, on the south by the northern limits of Bannockburn, and on the west by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad.

Playhouse Ready for School

Barry Shafton, 5½ years old, left, and his little brother, Tony, 2½, are working with hammer and paint brush on the playhouse in the yard of the Nursery school at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, 350 Belden avenue. The playhouse will be ready for the opening of school tomorrow. The children are the sons of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Shafton, 341 Belden avenue.

Richard Hague, 4½ year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hague, 70 East Cedar street, is tackling his sawing job carefully. He knows that if it isn't just the right length, it won't fit on the new playhouse.

ST. MARY'S PARISH TO OBSERVE 75 YEARS' GROWTH

Embraces Large Area in South Evanston.

Magner, took charge in December, 1927. He celebrated his 25th anniversary as a priest two years ago. Before his present appointment, he served at St. Mary's in Joliet, St. Pius and St. Mel's in Chicago, St. Francis Xavier's in Wilmette, and St. James' church in Highwood.

When Father Magner came to St. Mary's, the parish owed $275,000. Ten years later this debt had been cut to $50,000, while improvements totaling $116,000 have been made. On the spiritual side, Mr. Connor says "the phrase, 'He is always the priest,' exactly typifies him."

Mr. Connor, who wrote the church history in 1932, has revised it and brought it up to date for a souvenir program which is being published with the help of the Ushers and Altar and Rosary societies. The Society of St. Vincent de Paul takes care of all the philanthropy work in the parish, and 19 other organizations are supported by the parishioners.

Assistants at Mass.

Assisting Archbishop Stritch on Sunday will be the Rev. T. Barry Horne, deacon; the Rev. John Hall, subdeacon, and the Rev. Hugh T. O'Reilly, master of ceremonies. The Rev. James A. Duffin and the Rev. L. A. Peschon will be seated on the throne, and the Rev. George A. Kearney, a grandson of one of the original parishioners, will be the celebrant of the mass. Music will be furnished by a choir of 50 voices, directed by Gregory Konold. Dinner for the visiting clergy will be served at 2 o'clock.

The Rev. J. J. McGuire, the Rev. Cornelius McGillicudy, and the Rev. Thomas V. Liske are assisting Father Magner with arrangements for the banquet. Judge James Corcoran will be toastmaster and the speakers will include Judge William V. Brothers, Father Conway, Msgr. Egan, the Rev. William Mockenhaupt of St. Nicholas, the Rev. Leo Hartke of St. Athanasius, the Rev. Peter Witmanski of Ascension of Our Lord, Dr. Dwight F. Clark, and Msgr. Magner.

Temple Alliance.

Members of the senior alliance of Temple Emanuel will open their fall season this evening with a social program in the vestry rooms, 701 Buckingham place.

BLAST OF SHOFAR TO OPEN JEWISH NEW YEAR RITES

Rosh Hashana Services Begin Wednesday.

Rosh Hashana, New Year No. 5701 on the Hebrew calendar, will come to the north side Wednesday for thousands of Jews. And in the synagogues and special halls rented to take up the overflow crowds the ancient Shofar will be blown again to rally the faithful.

At the sounding of the historic ram's horn, which is said to have felled the walls of Jericho, Rosh Hashana will begin. Worshippers in ceremonies to be held both Wednesday and Thursday, and in some instances on Friday, will take part in the traditional period of self-examination. This will be followed by family feasts at which honey and other sweets will be served, signifying age-old hope.

Literally translated, Rosh Hashana means "head of the year." The occasion is celebrated in the seventh month of the Jewish year.

Anshe Emet Rites.

At Anshe Emet synagogue, Pine Grove avenue and Grace street, the occasion will be observed on three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Four different services will be conducted at the same time on all three days. The services beginning at 5:20 o'clock in the afternoon will be held in the main auditorium, the community hall, chapel, and at a neighborhood movie theater, 717 Sheridan road.

Rabbi Solomon Goldman will preach the main sermon. Cantor Moses J. Silverman, assisted by a choir of 60 mixed voices, will chant. A children's service will be supervised by William A. Nudelman, Anshe Emet educational director.

At Temple Sholom, 3480 Lake Shore drive, Dr. Louis Binstock, rabbi of the congregation, will preach Wednesday evening on "What Still Abides." On Thursday morning at 10 o'clock he will deliver a sermon on "The Passive Barbarian."

North Shore Congregation Israel in Glencoe will hold services Wednesday evening and at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. Rabbi Charles E. Shulman will officiate. A special children's service Thursday morning will be conducted by Mrs. Avis Shulman.

B'nai Zion Services.

Rosh Hashana will be observed at Congregation B'nai Zion, 1447 Pratt boulevard, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock; Thursday morning at 8 o'clock and in the evening beginning at 5:30 o'clock, and Friday morning at 8 o'clock. Dr. Abraham L. Lassen, rabbi, will preach.

Ceremonies at Temple Mizpah, 1615 Morse avenue, will begin at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening. Dr. Jacob Singer, rabbi, will speak on "Israel's Torch in the Night." At 10 o'clock Thursday morning the sermon topic will be "We Shall Not Die but Live." A children's service will be held the same morning at 8:30 o'clock.

Sunset services will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at Agudas Achim North Shore congregation, 5029 Kenmore avenue. The theme of the Thursday service will be "Alone and Yet Not Alone," and the Friday topic will be "Courage, Loyalty, and the Future." Dr. Jacob B. Agus is rabbi.

20,000 TO SEE BOXING BOUTS, SCAN CANDIDATES

Twenty thousand boxing fans and politicians are expected to attend the annual charity boxing show sponsored by the 48th ward regular Democratic organization tomorrow evening at the Broadway armory, 5917 Broadway.

In addition to eight bouts by members of the championship C. Y. O. team and two professional wrestling matches, the crowd will get one of its first campaign glimpses of many Democratic candidates for state and county offices. Among those expected to attend are Harry B. Hershey, candidate for governor; Harold G. Ward, candidate for attorney general; John E. Conroy, clerk of the Circuit court, and others.

Proceeds will be used to clothe needy children in the 48th ward at Christmas time.

The first 49th ward Democratic massmeeting will be held tomorrow evening at the headquarters of the regular ward organization, 6433 Sheridan road. Ald. Frank Keenan, ward committeeman, will preside.

Plans have been completed to hold a sports show Tuesday evening, Oct. 8, at the Rainbow Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue. Proceeds will be turned over to Mayor Kelly's Christmas benefit fund to provide clothing for needy children.

Course in Textiles Added at Washburne Night School

A course in textiles was added to the curriculum of the Washburne Evening Trade school last week. The new course, which will take up factory, trade, and retail problems and furnish students with a technical knowledge of the textile industry, will be taught by Benjamin Fain, former textile lecturer at the University of the City of New York. The classes will meet Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7:15 to 9 o'clock. The school is located at 1225 North Sedgwick street.

Monday, Sept. 30.

This is the time when the entire garden area should be in tiptop condition. Store all bird houses, garden furniture, and tools. Before the tools are stored they should be greased and oiled. The lawn mower, if not to be used again, should have all clippings removed and the parts thoroly cleaned and oiled. Later the accessories can be repaired, if needed, and exposed parts given a coat of paint. Fences should always be kept in condition; remove annual vines that have died down, and trim back woody growths.

Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Do not overplant the yard with shrubs, especially if the area is small. Shrubs planted too close together are certain to require much pruning to preserve a semblance of their form and beauty. Replace all poor soil with good soil, no matter what kind of plant is used. Use dwarf plants under low windows.

Enclose or screen the garage, if possible, with good shrubs. A lombardy poplar will serve to screen the telephone post in the rear. A wire fence covered with morning glories or other suitable vines will hide the alley from view.

Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Now that the house plants are indoors give them daily attention. A bit of plant food scattered on the surface of the soil in which Christmas cacti are growing will aid in the formation of buds. Adopt a regular spraying program to keep house plants free from all pests. Syringe at least once a week with clear water from the hose under pressure of the fingers. This will aid in keeping down the pests.

Thursday, Oct. 3.

Tomatoes will ripen if gathered before a hard frost, or the entire plant, with fruits attached, can be hung up in a light shed and the fruit will ripen. Eggplant and peppers should be gathered before frost touches them. Lettuce can be protected from light frosts by covering with hay or other material.

Friday, Oct. 4.

Be sure to prepare the ground well for bulbs because they will do much better. Bulbs are higher in price this season, but the gardener will find that American grown stock will give fine effects as garden subjects. They require, however, a longer time to flower when forced.

Plant hardy lilies in the borders as soon as they are available. The twelve best lilies for the amateur, and which will give flowers from June to late September, include auratum, candidum, croceum, davuricum, hansoni, henryi, regale, pardalinum, speciosum, tigrinum, testaceum, and umbellatum. Most of these can be obtained from local supply houses.

Saturday, Oct. 5.

If one admires red flowers a few pots of the smaller scarlet sage may be dug and potted. They will last a long time. Do not neglect to lay in a supply of material for mulching newly planted trees, shrubs, perennials, and hardy vines.

Bulb beds also should be mulched to prevent the bulbs from heaving out of the ground during spring thaws. Clean up the iris, removing yellow leaves and all the débris from the bed or border.

NEW EDGEBROOK HOME ARRANGED ON SIMPLE PLAN

Large Bay Windows Give Maximum Light.

BY LOUIS BARGELT.

The desire of a man and a woman for a home of their own is almost fundamental. And lucky are those who can start married life in their own home.

It is as friendly and inviting a home outside as it is livable within. A five room house in the traditional rural French spirit, yet a house essentially modern, with evidence of thoughtful layout, planned for maximum economy, and carefully chosen equipment, and decorations.

The architects are Hooper and Nelson, 118 East 26th street They have achieved balance, simpilicty, and symmetry. There is no feeling here of over-formality, or severity, tho certainly the little home has a great deal of dignity and poise.

Deck Over Garage.

Texture interest is given the exterior by its walls of brick; gray buff with manganese speckles. The trim is white, and the roof a deep blue-black. The large bay windows with their curvatures are well scaled to the exterior of the house and the entrance is of gray limestone. The roof of the attached garage has been made into a deck terrace, and is reached from the master bedroom on the second floor.

Red Linoleum in Kitchen.

The powder room and kitchen at the back are carried out in linoleum. The modern kitchen has counter tops of bright red linoleum, and this same red is carried into the gray linoleum floor in a feature strip. Elsewhere on the first floor, there are burgundy colored carpets, pearl gray ceilings, and walls pastel hued.

On the second floor there are two bedrooms, generous closet space, and bath with ceramic tile walls and floor. In the basement there is a forced warm air heating system, gas fueled, with provision for winter air conditioning.

Bay Windows for Light.

Speaking of what's new for fall in building and remodeling, it may or may not be news that the window selection available has never before been equaled in building history.

And of all the fine array of designs to choose from—the casement, the picture window, the double hung, the dormer, and the horizontal sliding—there is none more beautiful than the large bay windows of the type seen in this Edgebrook home. The curvature is well designed and as useful as it is lovely, since it captures sunlight and makes the entire room face the window.

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN A PLAYROOM?

If there is no place for your children to play when the weather gets bad, why not remodel your attic or basement as a playroom?

Remodeling need not be expensive, especially if you take advantage of the offers of lumber, wallboard, glass, paints and other building materials described in the Building Materials column in the Tribune want ad section.

Why not estimate your material and millwork needs today, and follow the Tribune want ad section for values?

THE LADY IS HAPPY

Question: How did she get that way?

Answer: She just got a dandy rug without spending a cent.

Q.: For nothing—how come?

A.: Up in her attic she found Junior's old saxophone which he never plays any more. It was just what an advertiser in the Tribune Barter and Exchange column wanted. So they made a trade.

Q.: Do you suppose . . . ?

Because they get better results, want ad users place more want advertising in the Tribune than they place in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

100 MILE TRAIL RIDE IS TEST OF SKILL IN SADDLE

Annual 3 Day Trip Will Start Friday.

Riders from several states will participate in the three-day annual Chicagoland 100 mile trail ride that will start from the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest next Friday. The ride, a test of straightaway horsemanship, is sponsored by the Town and Country Equestrian association and the Horse and Mule Association of America.

Entrants include men and women from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa, according to Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule association. It is expected that even more states will be represented before the entries close early this week, Dinsmore said. The list will close when 100 entries have been received.

The ride will emphasize the system of private horse trails in Lake county that connect with Cook county's 150 miles of forest preserve trails.

Route of the Ride.

Most of the route will be over paths along the Skokie lagoons and in other northern forest preserves, but part of it will be over trails surrounding the Onwentsia club.

The first day's trip will be on trails south of the Onwentsia stables, including those along the upper Des Plaines river. The second day will take the riders over the private trails to the west and north of the club, maintained jointly by the Onwentsia and Knollwood country clubs. The third day's ride will swing south and eastward, past Fort Sheridan and down to the Skokie preserve.

Each day's ride will start and end at Onwentsia. Riders will cover about 40 miles in seven to eight hours the first day, a similar stretch in equal time the second day, and 20 miles in three hours on the final day.

Points to Be Judged.

Participants will be judged on their own condition and the condition of their mounts, both during the ride and at its close, Dinsmore said. The judges will observe the horses along the route and again in the Onwentsia club ring at noon next Sunday. Speed counts 40 points and condition 60 points.

There will be 10 prizes in each of five classes, the largest prize list since the ride was originated three years ago. There will be a lightweight and heavyweight class for livery horses, similar classes for privately owned horses, and an open owner's class. Horses in the lightweight class must carry 160 to 189 pounds of rider and equipment. Those in the heavy class will carry 190 pounds or more.

In Training for Weeks.

Both horses and riders have been in training for several weeks, Dinsmore said. This is because of the unusual strain placed on the participants by three days of forced pace.

"This isn't an endurance contest," Dinsmore said. "It's a competition in which the proper care of horses is emphasized, rather than speed and gameness. Yet it requires more than ordinary riding.

"In ordinary riding the rider can follow a leisurely routine. In the 100 mile ride he or she must ride fast most of the time, for an average speed of nearly six miles an hour is demanded.

Many well known Chicago area horsemen have entered the ride, but there is an unusually high proportion of new riders, officials said.

Enters Three Arabians.

A. W. Harris, chairman of the board of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, whose horse won first prize in the lightweight division last year, has entered three Arabian horses this year.

Women who will compete include Mrs. John Ekern Ott of Hinsdale and Miss Josephine Cunningham of Chicago. Miss Cunningham will ride Conquistador, Col. E. N. Wentworth's hunter on which she took second prize in the heavyweight division last year. Robert Burnham, 15 years old, 10201 St. Lawrence avenue, was the youngest among the early entrants.

Dinsmore is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Other members are William B. McIlvaine Jr., Elmer J. Holdorf, J. C. Thompson, Lucius Teter, J. M. FitzGerald, and Roberts Mann.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my riding lessons had been given in the socalled English type of park saddle. My riding instructor, Elmer J. Holdorf, assured me, however, that at most stables I could obtain virtually any type of saddle I desired.

There are three main types of saddle in use in Chicago area riding stables, I learned. Each has its advantages and its drawbacks.

The saddle most familiar to the average American, and much in demand in livery, particularly at the low cost riding stables, is the western, or cowboy saddle, with its deep seat, large knee roll and distinctive horn.

This is primarily a work saddle, designed to afford ample comfort and protection for all day riding, and strong and sturdy enough to stand up under the strain of cow roping and the constant assault of hot sun or drenching rain.

Popular for Novices.

It is popular among novice riders both because it is the saddle of the picturesque cowboy and because its depth and knee swell impart a feeling of security to the rider who has not learned proper balance without such artificial aids.

Some of the disadvantages of the western saddle for bridle path riding are that it is hot in summer, the built-out knee swell tend to spread the legs uncomfortably, and the convenient horn is a constant temptation to "pull leather" in an emergency, which is bad riding.

Somewhat similar to the western is the McClellan saddle, a skeletonized modification of the cowboy type, developed by Gen. George B. McClellan of civil war fame, and once used widely in the army. This type is still regulation for the Chicago mounted police.

It also has the high, enveloping cantle and pommel, but is without the flaring knee roll. Its most distinctive characteristic is the open ventilating slit running lengthwise of the seat, which, rightly or wrongly, is reputed to be easy on the horse but hard on the rider.

Lacks Leg Fender.

Like the western, the McClellan is often used with covered stirrups, but it lacks the heavy sudadero or leg fender that is characteristic of the cowboy saddle.

The English or park saddle is characterized by its relatively flat seat, and its light, cutaway construction generally.

Most bridle path riders prefer it, I was told, because it affords a comfortable foundation unobstructed by large projections that interfere with the legs or lower torso. This saddle gives full play to the rider who takes pride in maintaining good form on horseback thru sheer skill and sense of balance.

I find considerable controversy over whether the western or the park saddle is best for long periods on horseback.

One group holds that cowboys, who virtually live in the saddle, choose the western type because it distributes the body weight more evenly over the rider's seat and has other comfort features. If it weren't best, the cowboys would pick something else, they argue.

To this argument the English saddle crowd replies that the United States cavalry, which also spends much time in the saddle, has adopted a type that is an adaptation of the English saddle.

Plans 100 Mile Ride.

I shall soon have an opinion based on experience, for I have just been assigned to take the third annual Chicagoland 100-mile trail ride next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, which is described more fully in an accompanying story.

My saddle will be the English type, for which I have developed a lively preference during this lesson series. By the time I have ridden more than 100 miles in some 17 hours, I shall know better than any verbal argument can tell me whether the park saddle is practical for long rides.

I shall know, too, incidentally, just how much I have gained from my course of instruction by Holdorf, which is now coming to an end.

ANTI-RAT ARMY WIDENS ATTACK INTO 29 WARDS

The war on rats in Chicago spread from 3 to 29 wards last week. An army of several hundred men on relief began extermination work in wards which are 100 per cent equipped with garbage cans.

What results they will have won't be known for several weeks, Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt, who is doubling as generalissimo in the campaign, said last week. At that time he hopes to have a casualty list of dead rats. In the sample eradication war conducted recently in three northwest and west side wards he estimated that almost 50,000 rats were killed.

Use Poisoned Bait.

The exterminators, using thousands of pieces of poisoned bait, will operate only in wards where each house has been equipped with garbage cans.

"Experts tell us that it is futile to try to kill rats where there are no proper garbage receptacles," he declared.

Commissioner Hewitt is conducting the rat war on two fronts. The first series of operations—now partly completed—is the installation of covered garbage cans at every building in the ward. When the ward has been rated as 100 per cent—a garbage can for every house—the second operation is to begin, that of actual extermination by the use of red squill and bait.

List 100 Per Cent Wards.

Following is a list of 100 per cent wards in which extermination work has been started: 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, and 50.

Seven north side wards are 100 per cent equipped with garbage cans. Three wards, not completely supplied are:

1st ward—Thomas F. McGrath, superintendent; 53 buildings still without receptacles; rated as 97.4 per cent.

42d ward—Frank Monahan, superintendent; 140 buildings still without receptacles; rated as 98 per cent.

43d ward—H. P. Bauler, superintendent; 11 buildings still without receptacles; rated as 99.8 per cent.

'VAGABOND KING' TO OPEN W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Marion Claire, Thibault to Sing Leads Saturday.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The first of the three outstanding musical series which W-G-N will launch this fall will have its première next Saturday evening when Rudolph Friml's "The Vagabond King" is aired on the premier of the Chicago Theater of the Air. The Theater of the Air, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will present outstanding operettas streamlined into one hour productions. They will be aired from 9 to 10 o'clock every Saturday evening.

The second series—concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, directed by Dr. Frederick Stock and with world famous guest soloists—will be launched on Thursday, Oct. 10. And starting Monday, Nov. 4, W-G-N and Mutual will present the productions of the Chicago Opera company.

These new musical features are all in addition to W-G-N's established programs including the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour [Sunday nights]; the Pageant of Melody with Henry Weber and the Concert orchestra [Wednesdays] and In Chicago Tonight [Thursdays] which often features new music as was the case when David Broekman's score to "Ode to Chicago" was presented on Sept. 19.

Marion Claire Is the Star.

Marion Claire, the famous soprano, is to be the star of the Theater of the Air. In "The Vagabond King," she will sing the rôle of Katherine de Vaucelles, a beautiful and high spirited lady of the court.

For the rôle of François Villon, poet and patriot, genius and thief of medieval France, W-G-N will present Conrad Thibault, the American baritone, who made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Grand Opera company. Thibault is widely known to radio listeners for his many network series.

Miss Claire is featured every Sunday evening as soloist of the Symphonic hour. The Theater of the Air will be under the personal direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N and artistic director of the opera, will direct the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus in providing the musical background for the operettas.

Splendor and Squalor.

The romantic operetta, marked by its rousing music including the "Song of the Vagabond," is set in the splendor and squalor of medieval Paris. In the thieves' tavern Louis XI. comes to meet Lady Katherine, who has spurned him, encounters Villon, her admirer.

The story progresses into a web of many involvements. Villon kills the traitorous grand marshal of France. The king makes Villon the grand marshal and, in a moment of wry humor, also makes him king—but only for a day and with the stipulation that Villon shall order himself hanged after his day of glory.

As the grand marshal, Villon and Katherine pledge their love. Later, humiliated to discover that she has given her love to the Vagabond King she renounces her pledge. The final scene takes place at the gallows. At the foot of the gallows Katherine conquers her pride and testifies to her willingness to marry Villon. The king spares Villon and the operetta comes to a close with the singing of the beautiful "Only a Rose" and the stirring "Song of the Vagabonds."

In "Shadow"

Marjorie Anderson, who plays Margot, the Shadow's girl friend in the dramatic show by that name returning to W-G-N-Mutual at 4:30 p. m. today. Bill Johnstone plays the Shadow.

In Rockne Show

Pat O'Brien, who plays Knute Rockne in the movie of the famous coach's life, will be heard on "In Chicago Tonight" when the program is broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual from South Bend during the world premiere of the Rockne picture next Thursday.

Jane Wyman, another screen notable, also will be heard on the "In Chicago Tonight" broadcast Thursday from the Notre Dame campus.

ROCKNE PICTURE PREMIERE ON IN CHICAGO TONIGHT

Host of Stars on W-G-N from Notre Dame.

Next Thursday will bring a host of stars with an entertainment rating of 100 per cent to "In Chicago Tonight," W-G-N-Mutual's variety show. For the program W-G-N's staff will move out into Chicagoland, to South Bend, Ind., to present highlights of the world première of the Warner Brothers' picture, "Knute Rockne, All-American."

Bob Hope.

The broadcast will run from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Before the microphone as master of ceremonies will be Bob Hope, screen and radio comedian; Pat O'Brien, who plays the Rockne rôle in the film; Gale Page, cast as Mrs. Rockne; Donald Crisp and Ronald Regan also in the picture. Kate Smith, radio favorite, who will broadcast her own show from Notre Dame Friday, will be heard on the W-G-N show.

Switch to Notre Dame.

The program will begin with the "Chicago" theme by the W-G-N chorus from the Chicago studios. Then listeners will be taken to the dining hall on the Notre Dame campus, where more than 1,000 persons will be gathered for the National Rockne Week banquet.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, will direct the "In Chicago Tonight" presentation. The program will be one of the monthly "movie night" shows, the most elaborate yet presented.

South Bend, a city around 100,000, is preparing to handle 200,000 visitors for the première and attendant ceremonies. The first showing of the picture will be Friday, Oct. 4, when it will open at four South Bend theaters. Notre Dame will begin the football season Saturday against Stagg's College of the Pacific team.

Pause in Chicago Thursday.

The movie stars will pass thru Chicago, cross roads for the nation's entertainers, on Thursday aboard a special train and will get into South Bend late Thursday afternoon. Bacher will immediately begin acquainting them with their parts in the W-G-N-Mutual broadcast. A special writer commissioned by the Warner studios will assist the W-G-N writers in rounding out the show.

TRIBUNE FASHION SHOW ON W-G-N NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Chicago Tribune's American Fashion Show will broadcast from a brilliant and lavish setting in the main studio audience of W-G-N from 9:15 to 10 p. m. Wednesday, Oct. 2.

The American Fashion Show will mark a new era in the designing of women's wearing apparel—American designs by American women for American women. Travis Banton, noted Hollywood designer, will be the commentator, describing each dress and interpreting the trends of American fashions.

The 48 original creations to be shown, include the 25 prize winning designs selected from over 12,000 entries. Not until after the show will the 25 winners of $7,500 be known. The best design will receive an award of $3,000, the second best, $2,000. There will be three $500 awards and 20 of $50 each. The 300 sketches winning honorable mention will be displayed at the show.

It was a big task for the committee, headed by Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, to pick the winning sketches. But after three weeks, they winnowed it down to 48 superlative designs. Expert dressmakers in Chicago and New York are finishing the gowns.

The studio audience will consist of fashion experts, manufacturers, retail and wholesale dealers, and many women who are interested in a glimpse of what they will wear during the coming season.

CAPT. MIDNIGHT WILL RETURN TO W-G-N, MUTUAL

Bold, daring adventurer of the air, "Captain Midnight" will return to W-G-N and 84 stations of the Mutual network tomorrow. Opening its third year on the air, the popular aviation serial will be broadcast from 5:45 to 6 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

The action of this serial is built around the exploits of Captain Midnight, mysterious world war pilot, and his youthful protégé, Chuck Ramsey, in combatting the sinister Ivan Shark, ambitious criminal, master of intrigue. The drama is written by Robert Burtt and produced by Allen Wallace.

Ed Prentitss will play the title rôle of Captain Midnight for the third consecutive year. Billy Rose, young Chicagoan, will play the part of Chuck Ramsey.

STEELMAKERS WILL RETURN TO W-G-N ON OCT. 6

With a shrill and familiar blast, a mill whistle will blow at 4 p. m. next Sunday to herald the return to the air of the Musical Steelmakers, original employé-family radio show. In their fourth year on the air, the Musical Steelmakers will broadcast over W-G-N and an expanded network of 46 Mutual stations.

Headlining the gala opening program will be Tommy Whitley, new conductor of the Steelmakers orchestra. Dorothy Ann Crowe, Ardenne White, the Steele Sisters trio, Regina Colbert, the Singing Millmen quartet, and friendly, affable Old Timer—familiar names to Musical Steelmakers fans—complete the list of performers.

Feller's Story on W-G-N.

Highspots in the careers of Bob Feller, sensational young Cleveland Indian pitcher, and Red Grange, galloping ghost of the Illini, will be sketched on "The Inside of Sports" from 6:40 to 7 p. m. next Tuesday and Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

IGOR GORIN TO BE GUEST ON W-G-N SYMPHONIC HOUR

Songs by Igor Gorin, noted Viennese concert baritone, and the world radio première of one of the most unusual compositions in American music will feature the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour, to be heard from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the network of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

The première will be that of the musical expression of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, composed especially for Gorin by Albert Hay Melotte. Melotte is the former Chicago organist who became famous as a composer of sacred music, including that for the Lord's Prayer and the Twenty-Third Psalm.

Col. McCormick to Speak.

Marion Claire, lovely operatic soprano, will sing three times on the Symphonic hour. Among the songs Miss Claire has selected are the ever popular "Ave Maria" and the finale from "Thais" by Massenet.

The speaker of the evening will be Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE. Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra.

The complete program:

Scene and Farandole from Capricio Espagnole ....Rimsky-Korsakov
Orchestra.
[a] Organ Grinder..............Schubert
[b] Ave Maria..............Bach-Gounod
Miss Claire, W-G-N chorus, orchestra.
Scherzo from Radia Symphony...A. Hoffman
Orchestra.
Tannhauser March....................Wagner
Chorus and orchestra.
Address ....
Col. Robert R. McCormick.
Finale from Thais................Massenet
Miss Claire and orchestra.
Concerto Grosso...................Locatelli
Orchestra.
Largo al Factotum from Barber of Seville ....Rossini
Igor Gorin and orchestra.
Allegiance to Flag..................Melotte
Igor Gorin, chorus, and orchestra.

Gorin will be remembered by W-G-N listeners as one of the stars of the "Student Prince" and "Blossom Time" in the spring operetta series featuring Miss Claire as the regular soloist.

Becomes American Citizen.

After his Chicago engagements Gorin went to California and became a citizen of the United States. The oath of citizenship and the patriotic pledge of allegiance to the flag impressed him deeply. Last Thursday night, after attending the In Chicago Tonight program and hearing its patriotic finale, Gorin recalled these impressions to William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. The baritone told of the special music Melotte had written, and Gorin's appearance on the Symphonic Hour was quickly arranged.

The singer is interrupting his concert tour to make this W-G-N appearance.

DEWEY DEMANDS CITY GET MORE DEFENSE WORK

New Deal Niggardly, Says Candidate.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

An adequate share of armament contracts for Chicago, in the interest both of the nation's safety and of a fair deal for the city's labor, was demanded by Charles S. Dewey, Republican candidate for congressman from the 9th congressional district, at a rally at Sheridan road and Diversey boulevard yesterday.

Dewey is setting the campaign pace in his own district and for the five other districts that include parts of northern and northwestern Chicagoland. Republicans say he is certain this year to unseat Congressman James McAndrews, whom he came surprisingly close to beating two years ago.

Dewey, a former assistant secretary of the treasury under President Coolidge, declared that Chicago is getting only 1 per cent of the defense projects recently ordered, in spite of the fact that the city produces 8 per cent of the nation's goods.

Injustice to the City.

This neglect of Chicago is not only an injustice to the city's workers, both skilled and unskilled, but is also a hazard to the nation's entire defense program, the candidate declared.

He charged that the administration, after neglecting proper defense measures for seven years, now is fumbling in its efforts to make up for lost time. He branded as serious mistakes the creation of new factories and industries near the two ocean coasts and the Canadian border, where they are vulnerable to attack, and the draining of skilled labor from Chicago.

"The eastern seaboard, the Pacific coast, the northern border—these are not localities where calm, considered judgment would place those facilities so essential to defense," Dewey said. "To safeguard these vital industries they should not be placed on exposed frontiers but should be established at a safe distance inland.

Sees Duty Clearly.

"As congressman from the 9th district it will be my duty to consider the rearmament problem both from the national viewpoint and from that of the people of my own city and district. From either standpoint the people of this country and this city have not received what is their due.

"Despite claims of the Roosevelt administration that it is looking after the interests of labor, Chicago is being denied its share of armament contracts. Those contracts mean jobs for skilled workers, machinists, carpenters, in fact, for virtually every one."

Of Chicago's 10 congressmen, only one is making efforts to get Chicago a just share of this defense program business, Dewey said. That one is a Republican, Ralph E. Church of the 10th district. The other nine, all Democrats, "have failed lamentably in their duty to their constituents" in that respect, Dewey asserted.

New Dealers Don't Care.

"Those nine New Dealers," he continued, "are showing little interest in obtaining for the skilled and unskilled working men of this city the opportunity to do their share in rearming our country, or in obtaining for our people the opportunities for employment which they seek and which they need.

"They should not be forced to leave their homes and perhaps even their families to seek employment in industrial centers of the east, of Detroit, and of the Pacific coast."

Chicago, he pointed out, is not only safe from attack, but is also close to raw material sources and has a vast reservoir of the labor that is a vital part of any defense plan.

Sees Gain in Vote.

In the 10th district, George A. Paddock, Republican nominated for the post from which Church is retiring, announced last week that a precinct canvass in Evanston, his home city, forecasts a substantial increase in a normally heavy Republican vote.

The test indicates that many Democrats will vote for Willkie in protest against the third term. Numerous Democrats have volunteered for campaign service with the Willkie camp, Paddock said.

Heavy registration, he pointed out, has prompted City Clerk Edward W. Bell to employ additional help and to keep his office open evenings thru next Friday. The office will be open for registration also next Saturday afternoon and on the evening of Oct. 7, Paddock said.

Sure He'll Beat Schuetz.

James C. Moreland, the Republican nominee in the 7th district, declared there were numerous signs that he will retire Congressman Leonard W. Schuetz on Nov. 5. In addition to the general trend toward Republicanism in the district, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the present congressman's conduct in office, Moreland said.

He declared that Schuetz is curt and inattentive to his visiting constituents in Washington if their views do not coincide with his own, according to individuals who claim personal experience of such discourtesies.

Moreland said that Schuetz, who is of Polish ancestry, has alienated others of similar extraction by his attempts to create the impression that

DOLORES DALEINDEN.

VIRGINIA AMUNDSEN.

These young puppeteers are preparing for the big show which is to be held at Edison Park, 6755 Northwest highway at 2:30 o'clock next Saturday afternoon. The children have written a script from the popular juvenile book "Sing a Song of Safety," and are making all the puppets which they will use in their show. Lois Doucette, 6528 Olympia avenue, paint brush in hand shows her puppet's face while Dolores Daleinden, 6538 Olympia avenue, braids her doll's hair. Virginia Amundsen, 6750 Octavia avenue, is way ahead of the rest of her class and has her Charlie McCarthy puppet all ready and waiting for the event.

1 CYLINDER AUTO OF '90S TRAVELS STREETS AGAIN

Tires, Chain Renew Ancient Vehicle.

There are no longer teams of horses that rear up and run away at the sight of an automobile as they did in 1897 when Henry J. Wildhagen proudly chugged into Palatine in his new automobile. Today modern motorists apply their brakes and roar with laughter at the sight of the strange little car as it tours the streets of the town where it once had the honor of being the only automobile.

"It was kind of a scarecrow the way it frightened the horses in those days," Mrs. Wildhagen chuckled as she and her husband reminisced a bit. Mr. Wildhagen said that when he met a team he always had to stop and help the owner lead his horses by the car.

Stored for Many Years.

After driving the car for four or five years, Mr. Wildhagen stored it away. In 1915 he had decided to sell it as junk. He happened to mention it to the chairman of an automobile show in Chicago and the man told him to save it for he knew of only two or three such cars still in existence. Since that time it has stood in the Wildhagen garage until about 10 days ago.

A new neighbor of the Wildhagens saw the old model one day and asked the owner if it would still run. Mr. Wildhagen remarked that it had been in perfect running order when he put it away and so the two of them decided to repair it. Now it runs as well as it did in the old days and all it needed was new tires and a drive chain. It has its original coat of paint and the same leather seats that it sported when the ladies wore big hats, veils, and dusters for motoring.

Top speed is 25 miles an hour, but as Mr. Wildhagen points out that 40 years ago people considered automobiles as a means of pleasure and not for business. "I never thought of using the car for business—in those days I was a rural mail carrier," he said.

One Cylinder Motor.

The motor is partly under the one and only seat, and extends to the rear of it, and there is a steering handle instead of a wheel. There is no modern dashboard full of instruments, only a curved splashboard, and the motor has only one clyinder. A feature that identifies the model as one of the earliest is the staggered spokes in the wheels and the wooden hubs. The artillery wheel which some people consider very old came much later Mr. Wildhagen has been informed. Instead of being a streamlined model, this product of the "gay 90s" had a gooseneck type body.

Mr. Wildhagen recalls that at the time he purchased the car there were very few, and the roads were terrible. His was the first automobile to be owned by a resident of Palatine. "I never had a license at that time and I don't know of any one who did. As I haven't a license for it now, I should probably be arrested if I took it out on the highway," the motorist of almost a half century chuckled as he pictured himself being ordered to pull over to the curb by a policeman on a motorcycle almost as long as the tiny vehicle of a past era.

Radio Writing and Acting Again Taught at Schurz

A class in radio writing and acting, the only one of its kind offered in the city evening schools, is being given again this year at the Carl Schurz evening school, 3601 Milwaukee avenue. The course is taught by Paul Larmer, co-author of two popular radio programs, Show Boat and Uncle Walter's Doghouse.

GEORGE A. MOZEALOUS IS NAMED HEAD OF ORDER OF THE ARROW

George A. Mozealous.

George A. Mozealous, 2822 Palmer square, assistant camp director for the Chicago Council of the Boy Scouts of America, was elected national chief of the Order of the Arrow, honor scout fraternity, at its annual convention in Ligonier, Pa., recently. He was treasurer of the organization last year.

Mr. Mozealous has been in scouting since 1922, and has advanced to the rank of Eagle. In 1929 he was chief of the Owasippe lodge of the Chicago council, as well as head of the Checaugau chapter of that lodge, which is composed of northwest side scouts. He was assistant director of the scout camp which operated at the World's Fair in 1933, and has been assistant camping director of the Owasippe camps since 1937. Last summer he acted as director.

Mr. Mozealous, who is 31 years old, graduated from St. Patrick's Christian Brothers High school at Desplaines and Adams streets, and attended De Paul university.

CAMERA CLUBS ARE UNITED IN PARK CONTEST

By combining its own photographic contest with that of the Associated Camera Clubs of Chicago, the park district expects some 800 entries to have been made by Oct. 15, the deadline for entering the competition.

In the last four years the contest has been limited to photographs taken on park district property, which meant that nearly all the entries were from members of the 25 camera clubs organized in the parks themselves. Last year there were 300 entries.

The contest will be under the joint chairmanship of R. V. Pierce, general superintendent of special activities at the recreation division of the park district, and Charles Lindsay, representing the Associated Camera clubs. Judges will be selected from the Photographic Society of America.

The contest is divided into two classes. Unmounted prints not to exceed four by five inches in size may be entered in class "A." Larger prints must be mounted on light colored cardboard 16 inches across and 20 inches high, and will be entered in class "B."

Photographs must have been taken between Jan. 1 and Oct. 15 of this year, and no person is allowed more than four entries.

Of the 25 park camera clubs, 10 are on the northwest side, and have a total membership of about 400. They are at the following parks: Blackhawk, Field, Holstein, Independence, Kelvyn, Norwood, Portage, Riis, River, and Rutherford-Sayre.

Two of these are also members of the Associated Camera clubs. They are the one at Independence park, of which Carl Krempels is president, and the Cosmopolitan Camera club at River park, of which Jule Bodenschatz is president.

Other northwest side clubs belonging to the associated clubs, of which H. J. Johnson is president, are the Barrington Camera club, headed by L. T. Smiley; the W. F. Hall Printing Company club, headed by Baro Gregson; the Irving Park Camera club, whose president is Miss Lucille Bertram, and the Sunset Camera club in Elmwood Park, of which V. S. Smith is president.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

PALATINE residents became curious recently when two boxes of cigars were placed on the counter of the four Schoppe brothers' cigar store there. One box was conspicuously labeled "Willkie Cigars" and the other "Roosevelt Cigars." Two days later there were only two cigars left in the bottom of the Willkie box and you would have neded good eyes to realize that the other wasn't still full.

"What's the idea?" asked Palatiners in the Schoppe shop. "Willkie's going to carry Palatine," answered the Schoppes.

LITTLE white cards are being distributed about the region of Lawndale and Diversey avenues reading like this:

"Benefit birthday dance given in honor of Stella, a shut-in invalid for 17 years, by a group of her loyal friends. Saturday, Oct. 5, 1940, at Kosciuszko park hall, Diversey and North Avers avenue, at 8 o'clock."

Looking deeper, sympathetic Our Towners have learned that Stella is Miss Stella Sahaj, 2731 North Lawndale avenue, who has been bedridden with arthritis for 11 years and is only able to use her right arm, and that but slightly, and will reach her 34th birthday next Monday.

Among the "loyal friends" who have gone out of their way to make Miss Sahaj's birthday pleasant and to raise money for her benefit are Mrs. Walter Pacanowski, 3757 Eddy street; Mrs. Helen Massula, 3416 Irving Park road; Mrs. Helen Kuester, 1936 North Central Park avenue; Mrs. George Wytrykus, 2440 North Harding avenue; Mrs. Nick Bennett, of the same address; the Misses Anita and Helen Block, 5312 Ferdinand street; Helen Ciupoak, 2652 North Avers avenue, and Jean Manieri, 2844 North Harding avenue.

Will 'Cut the Rug' to Raise Cash for Leyden Campaign

By "hitting it in the groove" and "cutting the rug" Saturday night at the Leyden clubhouse, 8741 Herrick street, young Republicans of Leyden township hope to raise money for the election campaign there. Chairman Richard P. Thunder, Alfred M. Baker, and Gustave Oman, composing the dance committee, chose a "Jitterbug Jamboree" as the type of evening they felt would appeal to most young people.

WALKERS' LIVES TO BE GUARDED THRU POSTERS

A drive to reduce traffic dangers to pedestrians during the next three months, the ones in which most pedestrian accidents occur, was launched last week by the Chicago Motor club. Safety posters now on display at corners in the loop will be placed at busy intersections which have high casualty records, among them nine on the northwest side.

This plan was approved at a meeting of all area councils of the motor club atended by city officials and community leaders. The move was supported by Ald. George D. Kells [28th], chairman of the city council committee on traffic and public safety, and Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer.

The northwest side corners where posters will be placed by the motor club attended by city officials and com-Irving Park, Kimball-Milwaukee-Diversey, North-Western, Damen-North, Ashland-North, Lawrence-Kimball, Ashland-Chicago, Ashland-Irving Park, and Central-Diversey.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, who was chairman of the meeting, pointed out that three-fourths of Chicago's accident victims are pedestrians. Because these accidents are mainly the result of carelessness on the part of the pedestrian, he said, the posters will serve to make them more careful. Most pedestrian victims, he said, are adult men.

Aldermen Kells, Arthur G. Lindell [9th], William A. Rowan [10th], and Joseph S. Gillespie [29th], also spoke in behalf of the movement.

ALLOW $770,000 FOR WESTERN, LOGAN VIADUCT

Will Widen Bottleneck Beneath Tracks.

Construction of a new viaduct carrying the Chicago and North Western railroad tracks over the intersection of Western avenue and Logan boulevard was provided for in a $770,000 allotment of gas tax funds by the state legislature last week. Together with the $950,000 allotment for repaving of Pulaski road from Cermak road to Belmont avenue, a total of $1,720,000 will be spent on projects affecting the northwest side.

Wetstern avenue, a six lane road, now narrows to a four lane tunnel choked with steel pillars beneath the railroad, where it intersects with cross-traffic on Logan boulevard. Plans contemplate building a 76 foot roadway for Western avenue and a 50 foot roadway for Logan boulevard under the tracks.

May Have to Raise Tracks.

Discussions are nearing completion with railroad officials as to means of interfering least with railroad traffic and the possible necessity of raising the level of the tracks. Construction probably will not begin until spring, according to E. A. Reed, bridge engineer for the department.

The Kiwanis club of Logan Square, the Logan Square Business Men's association, the Logan Community council, and the Milwaukee-Armitage-Western Business Men's association have sought the reconstruction of this viaduct for many years. Among the men who have been most active in the movement are Charles V. Falkenberg, former president of both the first two organizations; Harry G. Weimer, chairman of the public affairs committee of the Kiwanis club and the Milwaukee-Armitage-Western group; John J. Kaleth, former president of the Logan Community council and acting Republican ward committeeman; Charles Stevens of the Milwaukee-Armitage-Western group, and Edward H. Forke, former Kiwanis president.

Wider Pulaski Road.

According to James F. Kelly, road engineer for the highway department, the Pulaski road project provides for asphalt paving on a standard concrete base and a width of 52 feet for the entire six mile stretch. The street car tracks will remain. If bids are taken tomorrow and awarded within a week, as is likely, work should begin about the middle of October. It is hoped that the underground work will be finished by cold weather, in which case surfacing can be finished by spring. Kelly pointed out, however, that traffic will be maintained on half of the road during construction.

Ten other Chicago projects, totaling $266,310, were also approved, including electric gates and flashing signals at the Touhy avenue and Oakton street crossings of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad. Lehigh avenue will be extended northwest from Willow to Palatine roads, a distance of about a half mile, west of Northfield.

CONCERT BALLET IS ORGANIZED IN KELVYN PARK

Miss Bernard will cast the first play of the Kelvyn Park Children's theater on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The production will be "Hansel and Gretel."

Rescued Flag Called Lesson in Patriotism

A STORY OF AMERICA

The Metropolitan section plans a series of stories on incidents which have made those involved conscious of their love of country and the many blessings which America bestows upon its citizens. Readers are invited to submit suggestions concerning such incidents which have touched themselves or others. Address The Metropolitan Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

It was late in the afternoon on the Fourth of July 30 years ago. The parade had swept past Oakley avenue and Madison street, leaving in its wake a litter of firecracker paper, peanut shells, and red, white, and blue bunting.

Harold E. Giroux.

A 12 year old boy stood beside his newsstand shouting his papers. The parade with its blaring bugles and rolling drums was over and the watchers and stragglers were going home. One of the passersby was a civil war veteran, a man about 60 years old, wearing the G. A. R. uniform with the soft blue campaign hat trimmed in gold cord.

Veteran Recovers the Flag.

From across the street the boy saw the veteran stoop and pick out of the gutter a small penny American flag that some one in the parade had dropped. He hauled out a huge handkerchief from his pocket and carefully, tenderly wiped away the mudstains. Then he crossed the street and stood the little flag upright on the newsstand.

That happened 30 years ago. The boy, since grown to manhood, himself a veteran of the world war, has never forgotten that scene. He is Harold E. Giroux, 841 Barry avenue.

"I'll never forget that incident as long as I live," he says. "For me it is an emblem of the American ideal of freedom as symbolized by the flag.

Always Keep Flag Aloft.

"After placing the flag on the stand he explained to me why he had picked it up. He told me of the tradition of the American army of never letting the colors drop, how when the color bearer in battle falls the nearest soldier rushes to take his place, holding the Stars and Stripes aloft.

"You see, my grandparents used to talk to me about freedom, how America provided an opportunity to believe as you pleased, worship as you pleased. America, they told me, stood for those things, and that the American flag was its symbol of freedom. The G. A. R. veteran brought home to me the love for the flag.

"In those days we didn't have Americanism or civics classes in our schools, but this incident served as a complete course in Americanism for me. I can still see that G. A. R. veteran as he talked to me, tall, erect, proud, his Van Dyke beard neatly trimmed, his uniform spotless."

Influenced His Entire Life.

This incident, Mr. Giroux believes, influenced his whole adult life. Ever since he came home from the war he has engaged in civic and patriotic affairs. All his spare time he spends in aiding his community, serving on committees, and taking part in American Legion activities.

Mr. Giroux is a member of 44 committees and organizations. And he is an active member of most of them. The greater part of his committee work he transacts by mail and phone. A few of the organizations and the offices he holds in them include Harold A. Taylor post of the American Legion; 6th District American Legion; member of Voiture 220, The Forty and Eight; president of United States Army Base Hospital association; troop committeeman, Boy Scouts of America; executive committee member, Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A.; public relations committee member, Nonsectarian League for Americanism; secretary of the citizens' civic committee of Lake View; president, Lake View Community council; chairman, education committee for Lake View, and chairman of the new public library committee for Lake View.

W. E. Hall, 925 Montrose avenue is chief registrar, and Bert Colbert, 2740 North Ashland avenue, chief scorer. Other officials will be Moritz Bendheim, 1621 West Division street, chairman of the inspection committee; George W. Hill, 2131 West Walton street, traffic manager; George Patterson, 2938 North Fairfield avenue, quartermaster.

NEED REAL LUNCHROOM.

"A Former Democrat's" letter published on Sept. 15 concerning the Young Elementary school lunchroom at 1434 North Parkside avenue was much appreciated by those of us who have been waiting for a real lunchroom. We haven't a lunchroom. It is, instead, a classroom where children may eat sandwiches prepared early in the morning by their mothers.

And we have been asked to refrain from trying politics to gain a real lunchroom because the principal would not like it. I understand she has been against any sort of lunchroom in the school all along.

But Young school has one of the largest districts in the city. Now that North avenue has been widened and the Central avenue bridge is nearing completion, many of our children will have to cross these streets in order to return home for lunch. I shudder to think of my small children having both these streets to cross. The board of education should certainly see that an adequate lunchroom is provided. JUST A MOTHER.

SAYS BUILDING DANGEROUS.

Having a problem on our hands and not knowing exactly to which governmental agency I should turn, I am writing to the Voice of the Northwest Side.

I reside at 1630 Julian street and directly across the street from me is an abandoned two story brick building with basement which has been vacant for 3½ years. For the last two years all that has remained is a skeleton which is being weakened each day, and some day soon this whole skeleton is going to come tumbling down.

The neighbors join me in requesting that this eyesore and danger be removed.

2 SEATS IN 23D IS G. O. P. GOAL IN ASSEMBLY RACE

Thon, Roberts Point to Gains in Primary.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Daniel A. Roberts.

Food for hope was given last week to the two Republican candidates for the Illinois house of representatives whose task is to displace one of the pair of Democrat incumbents from the 23d senatorial district. The district includes Oak Park, the 31st ward, and parts of wards 26, 30, 32, 36, and 37.

Full coöperation was pledged by John T. Dempsey, young new chairman of the Cook county central committee of the Republican party. Dempsey gave a pep talk to legislative candidates stressing the importance of their contests and promising the aid of his staff in solving their campaign problems. Veteran legislators said it was the first time within their memory that this had been done.

"We must elect a real working majority in the house at Springfield so that Dwight H. Green, the next governor of Illinois, will be able to carry out his policies despite petty obstructionists," Dempsey said.

Importance Is Cited.

"Your candidacies are as important as any other and they will be recognized as such from now on. Your names will be printed on literature distributed from my office and we will give you any help you need."

The 23d district nominees, Representative William G. Thon and Daniel A. Roberts, joined with other house candidates in giving Dempsey a vote of thanks for his adoption of this policy.

They were also heartened by an analysis of the April primary vote on their office which showed that Democrats have slipped substantially since 1938. The district has had only one G. O. P. representative since 1933, but had two during the previous several decades.

Thon and Roberts placed much significance on the fact that the Democratic lead was reduced by 34,000 votes between the two primaries [for this office each voter casts three votes]. In April, 1938, the Democrats piled up 150,000, compared with the G. O. P. total of 47,000—a lead of 103,000. But last April the Democratic figure was down to 136,000 while the Republican total rose to 67,000—a lead of 69,000.

Secret Ballot Leads.

"What really counts in this picture is that the Democrats' primary lead shrinks when the voters get secret ballots in November," Representative Thon said. "In 1938 the primary lead of 103,000 shrank to 27,000 in the November election.

"This is true to form according to what I have observed in other districts, where the pay roll machine is unable to hold its lines in secret elections. I look for the same thing to happen this fall."

Representative Thon said that the Republican sentiment recorded at the primary will be even stronger in November. Wendell L. Willkie, the G. O. P. nominee for President, will draw many Democratic votes and he wasn't a factor in April, Thon pointed out.

Roberts agreed that the change in primary totals bodes well for the G. O. P. cause. However, he warned that the change may have been due in part to the fact that there was a warm Republican primary contest this year, while there was less public interest in the Democratic battle in April than in 1938.

Urge Registry for All.

"As long as the Republicans can keep it up, and distribute their votes evenly between the two candidates for the house, our chances of winning are excellent," Roberts said.

With the final day for registration set for Oct. 7, increasing attention is being given to the need for listing all eligible voters under the permanent registration system. Precinct committeemen are canvassing the homes in their territory to find persons who have never registered or who have moved or changed their names without notifying the election board.

As part of this effort, the Oak Park First Voters Willkie club was organized last week. Two persons who have recently attained voting age were invited from each of 80 precincts to a dinner at the Oak Park Arms hotel sponsored by L. A. Wescott, Oak Park township Republican leader.

Both of the Republican house candidates said that they will support parole reform legislation.

22 Year Record.

Representative Thon, who has served 22 years in the lawmaking body, won the following praise from the nonpartisan Legislative Voters' league last April: "Able, sponsor of much legislation, earnest. His long experience and generally good record entitle him to renomination." He is a lawyer, 53 years old, and lives at 432 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park.

Roberts served one term in the house from 1934 to 1936. He was approved by the L. V. L. as follows: "He won recognition not usually accorded to a first term member, by his level headedness and his effective woork on the floor of the house and in committee." Also a lawyer, he is 55 years old and resides at 1451 North Avers avenue.

Report on Democrats.

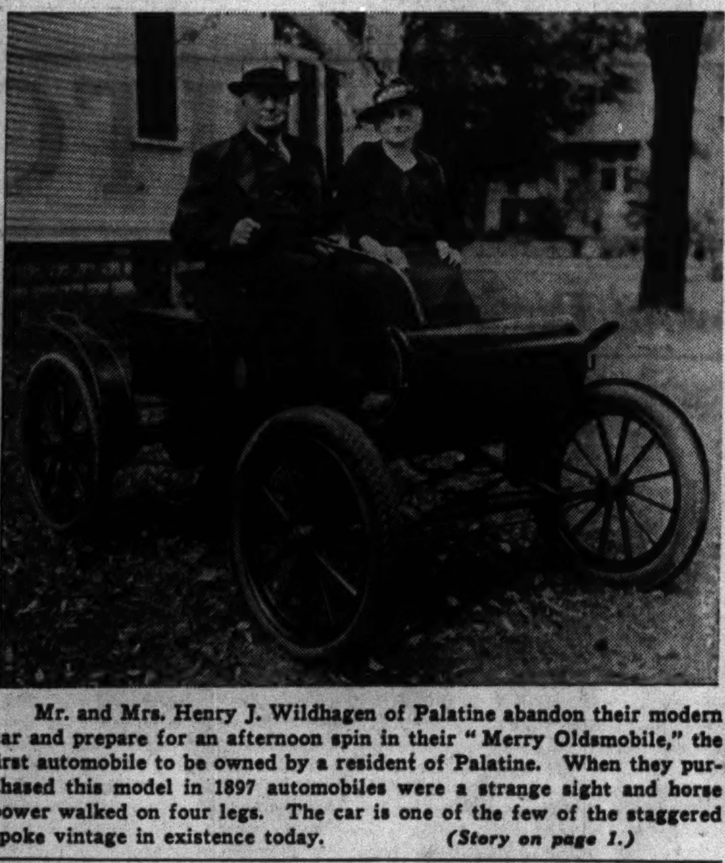
Democrats running for reëlection are Representatives Arthur M. Kaindl, 2600 West Chicago avenue, and Stanley A. Halick, 1216 North Maplewood avenue, president of the Polish-American Civic club.

The L. V. L. reported that Kaindl, now ending his fourth term is "earnest, zealous, seldom misses roll call on important measures, and exhibits some independence." But the league turned thumbs down on Halick, saying of him: "Ending third term with record exceedingly poor and unsatisfactory."

Will Hold Conference.

The Young People's Society of Maplewood Covenant church, 2618 North Talman avenue, will hold a conference at the church on Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

Return to Their First Car



Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Wildhagen of Palatine abandon their modern car and prepare for an afternoon spin in their "Merry Oldsmobile," the first automobile to be owned by a resident of Palatine. When they purchased this model in 1897 automobiles were a strange sight and horse power walked on four legs. The car is one of the few of the staggered spoke vintage in existence today. (Story on page 1.)

DEWEY DEMANDS CITY GET MORE ARMS CONTRACTS

New Deal Niggardly, Says Candidate.

he is a German because he was born in Polish territory under German rule.

In his talks thru the district, Moreland is hammering against the third term, and is advocating economy in government and recovery thru restoration of business and private employment.

"A third term," he said in one of the talks, "means the passing of the age of opportunity, of individualism, for all time. The President's continuance in office could mean only that the people want a dictatorship with all its stands for. I am confident that is not the case and that New Dealism will be voted down in November."

Hot Race in 1st.

Temperatures rose perceptibly in the already hot race in the 1st district last week. In this area, which includes downtown Chicago as well as the large colored population of the near south side, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell and former State Senator William E. King are the principals.

King, a Republican, charged that his rival, the Democratic incumbent, "finds his chief support in an unholy atmosphere." He attacked the political alliance between Mitchell and "his political boss," former Ald. William L. Dawson, who was a Republican until he became Democratic committeeman of the 2d ward last year.

"Dawson is supporting the present congressman with certain reservations and suspicions," King said. "Dawson's aid of Mitchell is a kind of forced support, because he realizes that the congressman is more of a liability than an asset.

"Mitchell in his speeches constantly boasts not of his allegiance to the 1st congressional district and the people of his own race [both candidates are colored], but of his political devotion to the philosophy of southern senators and representatives who dictate his vote in congress."

SAFETY TALKS SCHEDULED FOR THREE SCHOOLS

Three talks on traffic safety will be given at northwest side public schools this week by George W. Fleming, general secretary of Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee. Since Courtesy week begins today, the talks will emphasize courtesy. Tomorrow afternoon Mr. Fleming will address students at the Lowell Elementary school, 3320 Hirsch street; Thursday afternoon at the Jamieson Elementary school, 5650 North Mozart street, and Friday afternoon at Kelvyn Park High school, 4343 Wrightwood avenue. Traffic safety films will be shown.

ROSH HASHANA WILL USHER IN JEWISH HOLIDAY

Throngs Are to Attend Synagogue Rites.

Assurance that the present critical times for the Jewry of the world will soon pass will be voiced in the northwest side synagogues Thursday and Friday as some 75,000 Jews in this section of the city usher in the 58th century of the Jewish calendar. The Rosh Hashana holidays, Jewish new year's day, will be observed from Wednesday at sunset thru Friday.

Evening services will be held in the synagogues Wednesday and Thursday evenings at sunset. On Thursday and Friday mornings there will be services often beginning at sunrise.

The largest northwest side synagogue is the Albany Park Hebrew congregation, at 4601 North Lawndale avenue, where 2,000 persons are expected to attend the services. NEW EDGEBROOK HOME ARRANGED ON SIMPLE PLAN

Large Bay Windows Give Maximum Light.

BY LOUIS BARGELT.

The desire of a man and a woman for a home of their own is almost fundamental. And lucky are those who can start married life in their own home.

It is as friendly and inviting a home outside as it is livable within. A five room house in the traditional rural French spirit, yet a house essentially modern, with evidence of thoughtful layout, planned for maximum economy, and carefully chosen equipment, and decorations.

The architects are Hooper and Nelson, 118 East 26th street They have achieved balance, simpilicty, and symmetry. There is no feeling here of over-formality, or severity, tho certainly the little home has a great deal of dignity and poise.

Deck Over Garage.

Texture interest is given the exterior by its walls of brick; gray buff with manganese speckles. The trim is white, and the roof a deep blue-black. The large bay windows with their curvatures are well scaled to the exterior of the house and the entrance is of gray limestone. The roof of the attached garage has been made into a deck terrace, and is reached from the master bedroom on the second floor.

Inside you find a generous sized living room at the left of the entrance hall, with adjoining terrace. There is a traditional mantelpiece with stone facing and hearth. The placement of the dining room, at the right of entrance hall, separates it from the living portion, and the central location of stairs to second floor not only makes for economy but also conserves outside light for habitable rooms.

Red Linoleum in Kitchen.

The powder room and kitchen at the back are carried out in linoleum. The modern kitchen has counter tops of bright red linoleum, and this same red is carried into the gray linoleum floor in a feature strip. Elsewhere on the first floor, there are burgundy colored carpets, pearl gray ceilings, and walls pastel hued.

On the second floor there are two bedrooms, generous closet space, and bath with ceramic tile walls and floor. In the basement there is a forced warm air heating system, gas fueled, with provision for winter air conditioning.

Bay Windows for Light.

Speaking of what's new for fall in building and remodeling, it may or may not be news that the window selection available has never before been equaled in building history.

And of all the fine array of designs to choose from—the casement, the picture window, the double hung, the dormer, and the horizontal sliding—there is none more beautiful than the large bay windows of the type seen in this Edgebrook home. The curvature is well designed and as useful as it is lovely, since it captures sunlight and makes the entire room face the window.

100 MILE TRAIL RIDE IS TEST OF SKILL IN SADDLE

Riders from several states will participate in the three-day annual Chicagoland 100 mile trail ride that will start from the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest next Friday. The ride, a test of straightaway horsemanship, is sponsored by the Town and Country Equestrian association and the Horse and Mule Association of America.

Entrants include men and women from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa, according to Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule association. It is expected that even more states will be represented before the entries close early this week, Dinsmore said. The list will close when 100 entries have been received.

Each day's ride will start and end at Onwentsia. Riders will cover about 40 miles in seven to eight hours the first day, a similar stretch in equal time the second day, and 20 miles in three hours on the final day.

Women's Service League Meets Tuesday Afternoon

The Young Women's Service league will meet at the Belmont hotel at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Evelyn Hattis Fox, a graduate of the University of Chicago, will present a program of folklore interpretations. Oct. 19 will be the day of the membership tea to which all new members and their sponsors are invited. The major fall event will be a dance at the Skyline Athletic club on Nov. 17.

Five Rooms in Edgebrook

Friendly new home of a young bride and bridegroom in Edgebrook. The style is rural French, and details show the French influence. Exterior brickwork is gray buff with manganese speckles, the roof of blue black, and the entrance is of gray limestone. Hooper & Nelson, architects, 118 East 26th street.

Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my riding lessons had been given in the socalled English type of park saddle. My riding instructor, Elmer J. Holdorf, assured me, however, that at most stables I could obtain virtually any type of saddle I desired.

There are three main types of saddle in use in Chicago area riding stables, I learned. Each has its advantages and its drawbacks.

The saddle most familiar to the average American, and much in demand in livery, particularly at the low cost riding stables, is the western, or cowboy saddle, with its deep seat, large knee roll and distinctive horn.

This is primarily a work saddle, designed to afford ample comfort and protection for all day riding, and strong and sturdy enough to stand up under the strain of cow roping and the constant assault of hot sun or drenching rain.

Popular for Novices.

It is popular among novice riders both because it is the saddle of the picturesque cowboy and because its depth and knee swell impart a feeling of security to the rider who has not learned proper balance without such artificial aids.

Some of the disadvantages of the western saddle for bridle path riding are that it is hot in summer, the built-out knee swell tend to spread the legs uncomfortably, and the convenient horn is a constant temptation to "pull leather" in an emergency, which is bad riding.

Somewhat similar to the western is the McClellan saddle, a skeletonized modification of the cowboy type, developed by Gen. George B. McClellan of civil war fame, and once used widely in the army. This type is still regulation for the Chicago mounted police.

It also has the high, enveloping cantle and pommel, but is without the flaring knee roll. Its most distinctive characteristic is the open ventilating slit running lengthwise of the seat, which, rightly or wrongly, is reputed to be easy on the horse but hard on the rider.

Lacks Leg Fender.

Like the western, the McClellan is often used with covered stirrups, but it lacks the heavy sudadero or leg fender that is characteristic of the cowboy saddle.

The English or park saddle is characterized by its relatively flat seat, and its light, cutaway construction generally.

Most bridle path riders prefer it, I was told, because it affords a comfortable foundation unobstructed by large projections that interfere with the legs or lower torso. This saddle gives full play to the rider who takes pride in maintaining good form on horseback thru sheer skill and sense of balance.

I find considerable controversy over whether the western or the park saddle is best for long periods on horseback.

One group holds that cowboys, who virtually live in the saddle, choose the western type because it distributes the body weight more evenly over the rider's seat and has other comfort features. If it weren't best, the cowboys would pick something else, they argue.

To this argument the English saddle crowd replies that the United States cavalry, which also spends much time in the saddle, has adopted a type that is an adaptation of the English saddle.

Plans 100 Mile Ride.

I shall soon have an opinion based on experience, for I have just been assigned to take the third annual Chicagoland 100-mile trail ride next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, which is described more fully in an accompanying story.

My saddle will be the English type, for which I have developed a lively preference during this lesson series. By the time I have ridden more than 100 miles in some 17 hours, I shall know better than any verbal argument can tell me whether the park saddle is practical for long rides.

I shall know, too, incidentally, just how much I have gained from my course of instruction by Holdorf, which is now coming to an end.

RIDING SCHOOL TO GIVE SHOW THIS AFTERNOON

Horseback riders of all ages and skills will perform in the polo field at Harms and Golf roads starting at 2 o'clock today. The occasion is the fourth annual equestrian show of the School of Horsemanship. The show will be held in the same ring as was used for the Town and Country horse show that ended last Sunday.

Judging will be on the basis of horsemanship only, it was announced by W. J. Schmidt, director of the school. There will be classes for both novice and experienced riders. There will also be a polo pony training class, in which riders will school their mounts in situations peculiar to the game.

Games and special features also will be offered.

100,000 TO GET QUESTIONNAIRE ON CIVIC VIEWS

375 Students' Answers to Furnish Norms.

Don C. Rogers.

Answers of 375 Wright Junior college students to a "civic attitudes" questionnaire last week will be used to determine the norms for questionnaires to be sent to 100,000 high school and junior college students thruout the country, it was announced by Don C. Rogers, director of research of the school board, and president of Civitan International club, which is sponsoring the survey.

Divided Into Topics.

The questionnaire was divided into topics and under each was a series of statements, varying from one extreme of opinion to the other.

Thus statements regarding the duty of a citizen to obey laws ran from, "I believe a citizen should obey every law regardless of his feelings toward it," to "I believe one should obey only those laws which he wants to." Other topics were drawn from international affairs, domestic policy of the country, and social ethics.

Follows Essay Contest.

The plan for a nation-wide survey is an outgrowth of an essay contest held in Chicago schools last spring under the direction of the Central Civitan Club of Chicago, headed by Rousseau van Vorhies. Some 3,000 essays on the subject "Rediscovering America," based on the advantages to be found in this country at the present time by an alien newcomer.

Part of the work of preparing the national survey is being done as a WPA project under the direction of Robert O. Spengler, an attorney and a student of this type of research.

FALL FESTIVAL IS PLANNED FOR LUTHERAN HOME

The 44th annual fall festival of the Norwegian Luthern children's home, 6000 North Canfield avenue, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home. The guest speaker will be the Rev. Jennings Feroe, recently installed pastor at Long Lake.

The Rev. Mr. Feroe last year took graduate work at the University of Norway in Oslo and was there when the Germans took over the city. He remained five weeks before returning to America by way of Germany and Italy.

A young women's trio from Medill Lutheran church will sing and their pastor, the Rev. B. R. Biorn, will give the invocation. Dr. Martin O. Juel will preside and Superintendent L. S. Kildahl and Adolph H. Nordahl will give brief addresses.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Sept. 30.

This is the time when the entire garden area should be in tiptop condition. Store all bird houses, garden furniture, and tools. Before the tools are stored they should be greased and oiled. The lawn mower, if not to be used again, should have all clippings removed and the parts thoroly cleaned and oiled. Later the accessories can be repaired, if needed, and exposed parts given a coat of paint. Fences should always be kept in condition; remove annual vines that have died down, and trim back woody growths.

Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Do not overplant the yard with shrubs, especially if the area is small. Shrubs planted too close together are certain to require much pruning to preserve a semblance of their form and beauty. Replace all poor soil with good soil, no matter what kind of plant is used. Use dwarf plants under low windows.

Enclose or screen the garage, if possible, with good shrubs. A lombardy poplar will serve to screen the telephone post in the rear. A wire fence covered with morning glories or other suitable vines will hide the alley from view.

Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Now that the house plants are indoors give them daily attention. A bit of plant food scattered on the surface of the soil in which Christmas cacti are growing will aid in the formation of buds. Adopt a regular spraying program to keep house plants free from all pests. Syringe at least once a week with clear water from the hose under pressure of the fingers. This will aid in keeping down the pests.

Thursday, Oct. 3.

Tomatoes will ripen if gathered before a hard frost, or the entire plant, with fruits attached, can be hung up in a light shed and the fruit will ripen. Eggplant and peppers should be gathered before frost touches them. Lettuce can be protected from light frosts by covering with hay or other material.

Friday, Oct. 4.

Be sure to prepare the ground well for bulbs because they will do much better. Bulbs are higher in price this season, but the gardener will find that American grown stock will give fine effects as garden subjects. They require, however, a longer time to flower when forced.

Saturday, Oct. 5.

If one admires red flowers a few pots of the smaller scarlet sage may be dug and potted. They will last a long time. Do not neglect to lay in a supply of material for mulching newly planted trees, shrubs, perennials, and hardy vines.

Bulb beds also should be mulched to prevent the bulbs from heaving out of the ground during spring thaws. Clean up the iris, removing yellow leaves and all the débris from the bed or border.

ANTI-RAT ARMY WIDENS ATTACK INTO 29 WARDS

The war on rats in Chicago spread from 3 to 29 wards last week. An army of several hundred men on relief began extermination work in wards which are 100 per cent equipped with garbage cans. Operations in these wards are to be increased as more men are enlisted in the rat killing drive.

What results they will have won't be known for several weeks, Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt, who is doubling as generalissimo in the campaign, said last week. At that time he hopes to have a casualty list of dead rats. In the sample eradication war conducted recently in three northwest and west side wards he estimated that almost 50,000 rats were killed.

Use Poisoned Bait.

The exterminators, using thousands of pieces of poisoned bait, will operate only in wards where each house has been equipped with garbage cans.

"Experts tell us that it is futile to try to kill rats where there are no proper garbage receptacles," he declared.

List 100 Per Cent Wards.

Following is a list of 100 per cent wards in which extermination work has been started: 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, and 50.

The only remaining wards on the northwest side in which all buildings are not provided with garbage cans, and the names of the ward supervisors, are as follows:

38th ward, John M. Hoey, 95.2 per cent coverage, 687 buildings still without cans.

DEDICATE 'GOOD WILL' SHIP TO SCOUTS TODAY

At 3 o'clock this afternoon at the dock of the Naval armory, Randolph street and the lake, the ketch Poleszuk will be dedicated as a training vessel for the Sea Scouts of the Polish Roman Catholic union.

The boat came to this country last September carrying a crew of five Polish Sea Scout leaders on a world good will tour which was interrupted by the war. The crew turned the ship over to the Polish Roman Catholic Sea Scouts. The vessel sailed from Gdynia, Poland, in June, 1938.

Preceding the ceremony there will be a parade of many Polish organizations. Belgian, British, Czecho-Slovak, French, Norwegian, and Polish consul generals in Chicago will take part in the celebration, as will Mayor Kelly and others. Rear Admiral John Downes of the Great Lakes Naval Training station is expected to deliver one of the two program speeches.

Only Captain Present.

At the ceremonies only one of the original crew will be present. He is Capt. Frederyk Tomczyk, who stayed to supervise the work of reconditioning the vessel. The other shipmates have been scattered over the world. Two are in Scotland with Polish army units; one is in Lisbon, Portugal, and the other one is missing.

They all went to France last fall to enlist with the Polish army, which was formed after the fall of Warsaw. Two of three in the Dunkirk area were evacuated. Another fled to Switzerland and later escaped from an internment camp and made his way to Portugal.

American Sea Scouts of Polish descent will pay homage to the Polish sailors who lost their lives when their boats were sunk during the war. From the deck of the Poleszuk, members of Sea Scout ships Brandt, Orzel, Texan, Polonia, Union, Rainbow, and Marquette will cast wreaths onto the lake as a last tribute to those men. The vessel's new colors will be presented to the crew by members of the Boy Scouts and of the Polish Roman Catholic Union Daughters.

Send $500 to Refugees.

In appreciation of the gift of the boat, which was made in the name of the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides Association of Poland, the Sea Scouts and Boy Scouts of the Polish order here, conducted a Christmas candy sale and sent the proceeds, which amounted to $500, to refugee Polish Scouts in Hungary, Rumania, France, and Greece.

Reconditioning work on the 56 foot ketch was started last April with funds furnished by the youth department of the Polish Roman Catholic union. The ship has been refitted and painted by the Scouts, who did all the other work with the exception of installing the new American marine engine.

Today the Poleszuk has the appearance of a new boat. The navigation cabin has been rebuilt and enlarged, a new gallery has been constructed, a new motor room and increased sleeping quarters have been added.

The ship was an Estonia rum runner early in its history, but was later confiscated by the Polish government and became a training ship for Sea Scouts. On its good will tour the vessel had covered 12,000 miles before its crew was forced to give it up. About a week ago the reconditioned ship made a 250 mile trial journey to prove its sea worthiness.

'VAGABOND KING' TO OPEN W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Marion Claire, Thibault to Sing Leads Saturday.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The first of the three outstanding musical series which W-G-N will launch this fall will have its première next Saturday evening when Rudolph Friml's "The Vagabond King" is aired on the premier of the Chicago Theater of the Air. The Theater of the Air, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will present outstanding operettas streamlined into one hour productions. They will be aired from 9 to 10 o'clock every Saturday evening.

The second series—concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, directed by Dr. Frederick Stock and with world famous guest soloists—will be launched on Thursday, Oct. 10. And starting Monday, Nov. 4, W-G-N and Mutual will present the productions of the Chicago Opera company.

These new musical features are all in addition to W-G-N's established programs including the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour [Sunday nights]; the Pageant of Melody with Henry Weber and the Concert orchestra [Wednesdays] and In Chicago Tonight [Thursdays] which often features new music as was the case when David Broekman's score to "Ode to Chicago" was presented on Sept. 19.

Marion Claire Is the Star.

Marion Claire, the famous soprano, is to be the star of the Theater of the Air. In "The Vagabond King," she will sing the rôle of Katherine de Vaucelles, a beautiful and high spirited lady of the court.

For the rôle of François Villon, poet and patriot, genius and thief of medieval France, W-G-N will present Conrad Thibault, the American baritone, who made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Grand Opera company. Thibault is widely known to radio listeners for his many network series.

Miss Claire is featured every Sunday evening as soloist of the Symphonic hour. The Theater of the Air will be under the personal direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N and artistic director of the opera, will direct the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus in providing the musical background for the operettas. Double casts will be used with outstanding radio actors taking the dramatic parts.

Splendor and Squalor.

The romantic operetta, marked by its rousing music including the "Song of the Vagabond," is set in the splendor and squalor of medieval Paris. In the thieves' tavern Louis XI. comes to meet Lady Katherine, who has spurned him, encounters Villon, her admirer.

The story progresses into a web of many involvements. Villon kills the traitorous grand marshal of France. The king makes Villon the grand marshal and, in a moment of wry humor, also makes him king—but only for a day and with the stipulation that Villon shall order himself hanged after his day of glory.

As the grand marshal, Villon and Katherine pledge their love. Later, humiliated to discover that she has given her love to the Vagabond King she renounces her pledge. The final scene takes place at the gallows. At the foot of the gallows Katherine conquers her pride and testifies to her willingness to marry Villon. The king spares Villon and the operetta comes to a close with the singing of the beautiful "Only a Rose" and the stirring "Song of the Vagabonds."

In "Shadow"

Marjorie Anderson, who plays Margot, the Shadow's girl friend in the dramatic show by that name returning to W-G-N-Mutual at 4:30 p. m. today. Bill Johnstone plays the Shadow.

In Rockne Show

Pat O'Brien, who plays Knute Rockne in the movie of the famous coach's life, will be heard on "In Chicago Tonight" when the program is broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual from South Bend during the world premiere of the Rockne picture next Thursday.

Jane Wyman, another screen notable, also will be heard on the "In Chicago Tonight" broadcast Thursday from the Notre Dame campus.

BECKER TO START HIS TENTH YEAR AS BROADCASTER TODAY

Capt. William Campbell, formerly of the United States army and the British navy, and for 12 years a member of the Canadian Northwest Royal Mounted police, will be guest speaker when Bob Becker resumes his Chats About Dogs from 1:45 to 2 p. m. today over W-G-N. The program will mark the beginning of Becker's 10th year in broadcasting.

Capt. Campbell.

Becker will interview Capt. Campbell on his dangerous work in the Canadian wilds as an officer of the Royal Mounted. Capt. Campbell also will tell of his experiences in raising huskies, the dogs used for sled dogs thruout the frozen north.

Capt. Campbell was once bodyguard of the then prince of Wales, now duke of Windsor, and an escort to the British king and queen during their visit to the United States and Canada last year.

ROCKNE PICTURE PREMIERE ON IN CHICAGO TONIGHT

Host of Stars on W-G-N from Notre Dame.

Next Thursday will bring a host of stars with an entertainment rating of 100 per cent to "In Chicago Tonight," W-G-N-Mutual's variety show. For the program W-G-N's staff will move out into Chicagoland, to South Bend, Ind., to present highlights of the world première of the Warner Brothers' picture, "Knute Rockne, All-American."

Bob Hope.

The broadcast will run from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Before the microphone as master of ceremonies will be Bob Hope, screen and radio comedian; Pat O'Brien, who plays the Rockne rôle in the film; Gale Page, cast as Mrs. Rockne; Donald Crisp and Ronald Regan also in the picture. Kate Smith, radio favorite, who will broadcast her own show from Notre Dame Friday, will be heard on the W-G-N show.

Switch to Notre Dame.

The program will begin with the "Chicago" theme by the W-G-N chorus from the Chicago studios. Then listeners will be taken to the dining hall on the Notre Dame campus, where more than 1,000 persons will be gathered for the National Rockne Week banquet.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, will direct the "In Chicago Tonight" presentation. The program will be one of the monthly "movie night" shows, the most elaborate yet presented.

South Bend, a city around 100,000, is preparing to handle 200,000 visitors for the première and attendant ceremonies. The first showing of the picture will be Friday, Oct. 4, when it will open at four South Bend theaters. Notre Dame will begin the football season Saturday against Stagg's College of the Pacific team.

Pause in Chicago Thursday.

The movie stars will pass thru Chicago, cross roads for the nation's entertainers, on Thursday aboard a special train and will get into South Bend late Thursday afternoon. Bacher will immediately begin acquainting them with their parts in the W-G-N-Mutual broadcast. A special writer commissioned by the Warner studios will assist the W-G-N writers in rounding out the show.

CAPT. MIDNIGHT WILL RETURN TO W-G-N, MUTUAL

Bold, daring adventurer of the air, "Captain Midnight" will return to W-G-N and 84 stations of the Mutual network tomorrow. Opening its third year on the air, the popular aviation serial will be broadcast from 5:45 to 6 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

The action of this serial is built around the exploits of Captain Midnight, mysterious world war pilot, and his youthful protégé, Chuck Ramsey, in combatting the sinister Ivan Shark, ambitious criminal, master of intrigue. The drama is written by Robert Burtt and produced by Allen Wallace.

Ed Prentitss will play the title rôle of Captain Midnight for the third consecutive year. Billy Rose, young Chicagoan, will play the part of Chuck Ramsey.

TRIBUNE FASHION SHOW ON W-G-N NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Chicago Tribune's American Fashion Show will broadcast from a brilliant and lavish setting in the main studio audience of W-G-N from 9:15 to 10 p. m. Wednesday, Oct. 2.

The American Fashion Show will mark a new era in the designing of women's wearing apparel—American designs by American women for American women. Travis Banton, noted Hollywood designer, will be the commentator, describing each dress and interpreting the trends of American fashions.

The 48 original creations to be shown, include the 25 prize winning designs selected from over 12,000 entries. Not until after the show will the 25 winners of $7,500 be known. The best design will receive an award of $3,000, the second best, $2,000. There will be three $500 awards and 20 of $50 each. The 300 sketches winning honorable mention will be displayed at the show.

It was a big task for the committee, headed by Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, to pick the winning sketches. But after three weeks, they winnowed it down to 48 superlative designs. Expert dressmakers in Chicago and New York are finishing the gowns.

The studio audience will consist of fashion experts, manufacturers, retail and wholesale dealers, and many women who are interested in a glimpse of what they will wear during the coming season.

Foreign Policy Subject of Northwestern U. Broadcast

A review and forecast of American foreign policy in relation to the European war will be presented on the Northwestern University Reviewing Stand from 10:15 to 10:30 a. m. this morning over W-G-N and the coast to coast Mutual network. "What's Our Foreign Policy Now?" will be discussed by Tracy Strevey and Franklin D. Scott, both professors of history at Northwestern university. Dr. Strevey is an authority on United States history, a student of foreign policy. His colleague, Dr. Scott, specializes in European history.

IGOR GORIN TO BE GUEST ON W-G-N SYMPHONIC HOUR

Pledge to Flag Premiere on Program Tonight.

Songs by Igor Gorin, noted Viennese concert baritone, and the world radio première of one of the most unusual compositions in American music will feature the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour, to be heard from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the network of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

The première will be that of the musical expression of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, composed especially for Gorin by Albert Hay Melotte. Melotte is the former Chicago organist who became famous as a composer of sacred music, including that for the Lord's Prayer and the Twenty-Third Psalm.

Col. McCormick to Speak.

Marion Claire, lovely operatic soprano, will sing three times on the Symphonic hour. Among the songs Miss Claire has selected are the ever popular "Ave Maria" and the finale from "Thais" by Massenet.

The speaker of the evening will be Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE. Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra.

The complete program:

Scene and Farandole from Capricio Espagnole ....Rimsky-Korsakov
Orchestra.
[a] Organ Grinder................Schubert
[b] Ave Maria................Bach-Gounod
Miss Claire, W-G-N chorus, orchestra.
Scherzo from Radio Symphony...A. Hoffman
Orchestra.
Tannhauser March....................Wagner
Chorus and orchestra.
Address ....
Col. Robert R. McCormick.
Finale from Thais.................Massenet
Miss Claire and orchestra.
Concerto Grosso....................Locatelli
Orchestra.
Largo al Factotum from Barber of Seville ....Rossini
Igor Gorin and orchestra.
Allegiance to Flag....................Melotte
Igor Gorin, chorus, and orchestra.

Gorin will be remembered by W-G-N listeners as one of the stars of the "Student Prince" and "Blossom Time" in the spring operetta series featuring Miss Claire as the regular soloist.

Becomes American Citizen.

After his Chicago engagements Gorin went to California and became a citizen of the United States. The oath of citizenship and the patriotic pledge of allegiance to the flag impressed him deeply. Last Thursday night, after attending the In Chicago Tonight program and hearing its patriotic finale, Gorin recalled these impressions to William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. The baritone told of the special music Melotte had written, and Gorin's appearance on the Symphonic Hour was quickly arranged.

The singer is interrupting his concert tour to make this W-G-N appearance. Music critics agree that one of the numbers in which Gorin excels is the "Largo al Factotum" from The Barber of Seville, which he will sing tonight.

Woman's Symphony Will Open New Program Today

Gladys Swarthout, Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano, and her sister, Roma Slaughter, soprano, will appear together as guests on the new "Design for Happiness" program over WBBM-CBS at 4 p. m. today. This series will feature the Chicago Woman's Symphony orchestra with Izler Solomon conducting. This broadcast will come from Toledo. Subsequent broadcasts will be aired from Chicago.

Cantor Back

Comedian Eddie Cantor with dusky voiced Dinah Shore who will be featured on his new show "Time to Smile," starting on WMAQ-NBC at 8 p. m. next Wednesday.

CLUB WOMEN TO STRESS CITIZENSHIP

DEMOCRATS IDLE AS G. O. P. HITS A FASTER PACE

Gains Looked for in Congress Race.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Republican candidates continued last week to furnish practically the only activity in the congressional election campaign in western Chicagoland. The Democratic nominees in most of the districts, following the custom of recent years, are holding back, depending on their highly organized, patronage fed party machine to retain their seats for them.

Observers said last week that while this strategy may work in such small and tightly held districts as the 4th, 5th, and 8th, which take in most of the near west side of Chicago, reversals will not be surprising in the 6th, which includes most of the western suburbs, and the 7th, a corner of which juts down into the west side.

Joseph Wagner, the G. O. P. nominee in the 6th district, said last week he was confident of unseating Congressman Anton F. Maciejewski.

Club Is Raising Funds.

In this endeavor he is getting the aid not only of his regular party machinery, but also of a newly organized special group, the 6th District Willkie club, which is raising funds to fight for victory in the district for the whole G. O. P. ticket.

Joseph Coyner of Oak Park, cochairman of the group, emphasized last week that the money he and his fellow workers raise will be used only in the 6th district, and will not be divided among the various county organizations as is the case with funds collected by the state organization.

This setup, he said, will facilitate the plan to concentrate the club's efforts in territory regarded as strongly Democratic.

Women Are Active.

Forces led by Mrs. John K. Russell III. of Oak Park, chairman of the women's division, continued last week to expand their organization toward the goal of 10,000 volunteers by Oct. 1, and to urge every eligible voter to make certain that he is properly registered in time to vote in the Nov. 5 election.

Wagner announced that he stands on the same platform that brought him victory in the primary last April. This statement of principles calls for "common sense in government, freeing congress from the executive yoke, adequate and impartial relief, and abolition of government competition with private industry."

In the matter of war, Mr. Wagner has declared against "the use of American troops for any purpose other than for the defense of the United States against foreign attack."

Moreland Is Confident.

James C. Moreland, the Republican nominee in the 7th district, declared there are numerous signs that he will retire Congressman Leonard W. Schuetz on Nov. 5.

In addition to the general trend toward Republicanism, there is in the district a growing dissatisfaction with the present congressman's conduct in office, Moreland said. He declared that Schuetz is curt and inattentive to his visiting constituents in Washington if their views do no coincide with his, according to individuals who claim personal experience of such discourtesies.

Moreland said that Schuetz, who is of Polish ancestry, has alienated others of similar extraction by his attempts to create the impression that he is a German, because he was born in Polish territory under German rule. In recent months Schuetz has soft pedaled this claim, but his acquaintances have not forgotten it, Moreland said.

Hammers Third Term.

In his talks thru the district, Moreland is hammering against the third term, and is advocating economy in government and recovery thru restoration of business and private employment.

"A third term," he declared in one of the talks, "means the passing of the age of opportunity, of individualism, for all time. The President's continuance in office could mean only that the people want a dictatorship with all it stands for. I am confident that is not the case and that New Dealism will be voted down in November."

In the 5th district, held since 1906 by A. J. [Half a Congressman] Sabath, the Republican nominee, Martin Dykema, is waging an active fight in the face of heavy odds.

Dykema, official of a gasoline company, is 38 years old and was born in the district. He lives with his wife and daughter in his own home at 1535 West 14th place.

Wins in Primary.

He ran for the Republican nomination two years ago, but it was won by Max Price.

Dykema has opened headquarters at 1301 South Ashland avenue. In his speeches he is attacking the rubber stamp record of Congressman Sabath, whom he charges with "blindly and spinelessly obeying every order that came from the White House."

The 5th district, one of the smallest in Illinois, has been referred to as one of the state's "rotten boroughs" because of the ease with which it has been controled politically. Sabath's nickname, "Half a Congressman," derives from the disprpportionate representation of his district.

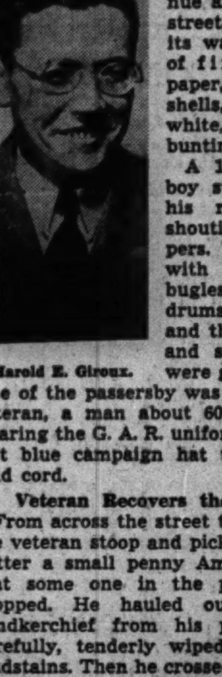
Rescued Flag Called Lesson in Patriotism

A STORY OF AMERICA

The Metropolitan section plans a series of stories on incidents which have made those involved conscious of their love of country and the many blessings which America bestows upon its citizens. Readers are invited to submit suggestions concerning such incidents which have touched themselves or others. Address The Metropolitan Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

BY DAVID ANDERSON.

It was late in the afternoon on the Fourth of July 30 years ago. The parade had swept past Oakley avenue and Madison street, leaving in its wake a litter of firecracker paper, peanut shells, and red, white, and blue bunting.



Harold E. Giroux.

A 12 year old boy stood beside his newsstand shouting his papers. The parade with its blaring bugles and rolling drums was over and the watchers and stragglers were going home. One of the passersby was a civil war veteran, a man about 60 years old, wearing the G. A. R. uniform with the soft blue campaign hat trimmed in gold cord.

Veteran Recovers the Flag.

From across the street the boy saw the veteran stoop and pick out of the gutter a small penny American flag that some one in the parade had dropped. He hauled out a huge handkerchief from his pocket and carefully, tenderly wiped away the mudstains. Then he crossed the street and stood the little flag upright on the newsstand.

That happened 30 years ago. The boy, since grown to manhood, himself a veteran of the world war, has never forgotten that scene. He is Harold E. Giroux, 841 Barry avenue.

"I'll never forget that incident as long as I live," he says. "For me it is an emblem of the American ideal of freedom as symbolized by the flag.

Always Keep Flag Aloft.

"After placing the flag on the stand he explained to me why he had picked it up. He told me of the tradition of the American army of never letting the colors drop, how when the color bearer in battle falls the nearest soldier rushes to take his place, holding the Stars and Stripes aloft.

"You see, my grandparents used to talk to me about freedom, how America provided an opportunity to believe as you pleased, worship as you pleased. America, they told me, stood for those things, and that the American flag was its symbol of freedom. The G. A. R. veteran brought home to me the love for the flag.

"In those days we didn't have Americanism or civics classes in our schools, but this incident served as a complete course in Americanism for me. I can still see that G. A. R. veteran as he talked to me, tall, erect, proud, his Van Dyke beard neatly trimmed, his uniform spotless."

Influenced His Entire Life.

This incident, Mr. Giroux believes, influenced his whole adult life. Ever since he came home from the war he has engaged in civic and patriotic affairs. All his spare time he spends in aiding his community, serving on committees, and taking part in American Legion activities.

Mr. Giroux is a member of 44 committees and organizations. And he is an active member of most of them. The greater part of his committee work he transacts by mail and phone. A few of the organizations and the offices he holds in them include Harold A. Taylor post of the American Legion; 6th District American Legion; member of Voiture 220, The Forty and Eight; president of United States Army Base Hospital association; troop committeeman, Boy Scouts of America; executive committee member, Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A.; public relations committee member, Nonsectarian League for Americanism; secretary of the citizens' civic committee of Lake View; president, Lake View Community council; chairman, education committee for Lake View, and chairman of the new public library committee for Lake View.

A Photographer Visits Oak Park's 19th Century Woman's Club

Doors of clubhouses and clubrooms will swing open this week for the last few months of the golden jubilee of women's clubs. Fifty years ago club women confined their time to talks of the classics, the kitchen, or the cradle. This week when Mrs. Albert Cotsworth Jr., president of the 19th Century Woman's club of Oak Park, takes the gavel in her hand, she opens new horizons for hundreds of women. Beside her Mrs. Sidney R. Flett, secretary, is ready to take more extensive minutes on women's work. Take a trip thru the beautifully appointed clubhouse that serves Oak Park and River Forest women to see how the modern wife or daughter spends her day. First, education has not been forgotten, and three members talk over one of the dozens of courses offered this season. At the eft is Mrs. George C. Tinsley, study course chairman, with Mrs. Donald F. Duncan, music chairman (center). Mrs. Charles W. Stiger Jr. will decide whether she will devote her extra time to Tchaikovsky or current events.

Not just a knowledge of literature, but a lithe figure concerns today's clubwoman. Mrs. Paul Arnal chooses a game of pingpong for pep and posture. Mrs. Clarence Willard Jr. does a cross country bicycle marathon, but doesn't move from the gymnasium of the clubhouse. Between classes, at home and in Red Cross sewing bees there is a corner for women who like handiwork. A warm garment is being fashioned here by Miss Miriam Bulloch while Mrs. Ralph E. Vogel, club treasurer, and Mrs. Edward A. Ribal admire the stitch.

Before we go home we stop at the refreshment bar, where Mrs. Harry B. Todd, chairman of the courtesy committee, so charmingly discharges her duty. The woman in the smart sport suit is Mrs. Gordon D. Shorney and regal in silver fox and classic black wool is Mrs. Reuben C. Swan. When the afternoon is over and there has been everything from a dip in the pastel colored swimming pool to a course in poetry, the members walk down the drive to their cars. At the left is Mrs. James P. Carey Jr. Mrs. Charles E. Franklin is in the center with Miss Virginia Gunderson, social chairman, at the right.

Papa Joshua's Sons Carry On the Tradition

BY MILDRED WILDS.

On Wednesday at sundown three slender young brothers, Morris, David and Phillip Lind, will ascend to the altar of Knesses Israel Nasachsforad, 1308 Independence boulevard, garbed in satin robes and betassled caps. They will chant the ageless prayers of their people to herald the Jewish New Year, 5,701, at the largest orthodox synagogue on the west side.

They will continue the prayers chanted by Great-great-grandfather Lind some 200 years ago and chanted by the sons of his sons ever since. They turned down chances on Broadway and in Hollywood to be in the synagogue for Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur as cantors.

One block away in Kehilath Jacob synagogue, Papa Joshua Lind will chant his prayers in his cantor's robes with proud happiness in his eyes. Morrie, Davie and Phillip have done what he wanted them to do. "Now they can sing in that swing if they want to," he says.

Long Years of Training.

When Morrie, Davie and Phillip chant from the Torah, some of the notes and some of the measures in their sacred song will have authors in Great-great-grandfather David Lind and Great-grandfather Abraham of Vienna, Grandfather Michel of Lamberg and Papa Joshua who chanted in Austria and on the east side of New York and Chicago's west side.

In Radantz, Bucovina, then in Austria but now a city of Rumania, Joshua was chanting his prayers as a young cantor when he met the second cantor's daughter and married her.

With the Rosh Hashana services Papa Joshua Lind will forget the hard years of training his sons. They started on the east side of New York where Papa Lind had come to sing as cantor for the Jewish immigrants who crowded to American shores after the ravages of the world war and upon the death of Austria and czarist Russia. There on the east side Joshua chanted in a synagogue under the elevated tracks. There he coached his young sons in the Torah, in the difficult music with its oriental and Arabic shadings, and in the Hebrew tradition.

No Fighting, No Baseball.

Morrie, Davie and Phillip couldn't play baseball. "Now mind you, you be careful of your throats," cautioned Mamma Lind ten dozen times a day. "Don't you drink cold things, it will hurt your throat."

"Don't you run. It makes you short of breath," warned Papa Lind ten more dozen times a day.

"Don't play baseball. Don't eat ice cream fast. Don't fight," said Mamma Lind.

When Morrie was 13 he was confirmed and went away for a visit to the country. There he turned Indian and young Indians yell. He screamed in the fields and came home to Papa Lind, an unhappy ruined alto.

High holiday services were only a month away. For these days Joshua coached his boy and by slow degrees converted the bad alto into a good soprano. His fame as a soprano spread. Florenz Ziegfeld heard him, offered him a job in his show. Papa Lind turned it down. "You are promised to the synagogue," he said.

Four Tour Country.

When Davie was ten he was heralded by newspapers as the youngest cantor in the world. At 13 he sang

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About People You May Know

An elopment has just come to light in Our Town. George J. Kuehn and Anna Marie Reinhold told their mothers they were going to a picnic. Instead they dashed up to Milwaukee, Wis., and were married. George told his Aunt Kate and she "let the cat out of the bag." But it's almost all forgotten because it happened in 1890. Mr. and Mrs. Kuehn, 2341 South Albany avenue, had a golden wedding honeymoon at their Fox Lake summer home last week. They were married 50 years ago on Sept. 21.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Kuehn.

The Kuehns have resided at their present address for 36 years and have lived for 45 years in the same block. They were neighbors before their marriage, in the vicinity of 18th and Halsted streets, went to the same school and met in 1882. Their sons and daughters are Louis H., Harry B., George W., and Irving W. Kuehn, Mrs. Marie Prescott and Mrs. Mildred Soper.

Paul Mattei, Cicero, was recently named director of athletics at De Paul university. He will take the place of Thomas Haggerty who is on leave of absence to work for the National Defense program. Haggerty is a captain in the 202d Coast Guard unit of the National Guard now training at Fort Bliss, Tex. Mattei will have charge of the Civil Aeronautics association pilot training courses at De Paul in addition to handling basketball schedules and directing intramural activities.

6,000 TO START FALL ACTIVITY IN 6TH DISTRICT

Study of Legislation Is Major Aim.

West side clubwomen will not concern themselves with European affairs. The official opening this week for activities of the 6th district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will find the women looking for flaws near at hand as they organize into a "home guard."

Mrs. J. F. Johnson.

Mrs. J. F. Johnson, president of the 6th district, says, "We will concentrate on American citizenship, American home, and American legislation. When we write to our congressmen, we should know what we are writing about."

Can't Decide on Them.

"World conditions," explains Mrs. Johnson, "have us all guessing. As a club we cannot decide on any theme or motto for 1940-'41. We might have to change it.

"If the people of Holland, Norway, and Poland could carry on their daily work under a rain of bombs from the sky, then we who are removed from it must carry on our work without hysteria."

The women have not declared themselves on the issues of the land. "Conscription is now a national law," says Mrs. Johnson. "There is no use arguing that. However, I think every mother, wife, and sister among us wants peace and wants our boys to be kept at home to defend this soil."

Almost 6,000 women who are members of the west area's 33 senior and 20 junior clubs will go back this week to clubrooms and clubhouses remodeled and repainted.

Must Understand Democracy.

Mrs. D. H. Johnson is the chairman of American citizenship and her ambition for members is to know the constitution, know our own country, and understand the meaning of democracy.

The legislation work will be directed in the district by Mrs. Eliza M. Watts, who says she will urge every club woman to know and understand the bills pending.

Mrs. Jesse Fay Anderson is taking over the difficult job as leader of international relations. She will confine her topics to relations with the South American countries and Mexico.

Art Again to Front.

On the home front the women will concentrate again on the spring art contests for 7th and 8th grade children, for conservation of forests in central Illinois, and for the study of the effects of soil erosion. The Maywood 20th Century club and the Forest Park Woman's club will again take over the work of selling Christmas seals for the village.

Mrs. Albert H. Tosch heads the radio department and is writing radio scripts and stories based on actual club activities. She will present them from 4:45 to 5 o'clock every Friday afternoon over station WHFC.

Mrs. J. Raymond Shideler, music chairman for the district, will continue a program of lectures on composers which she started last year. Mrs. Shideler illustrates her talks with piano solos. An accomplished dramatic reader, Mrs. Millard Gilmore, has been appointed district literature chairman.

First Meeting Oct. 10.

The first general meeting of the district will be on Thursday, Oct. 10, at the Berwyn Methodist church, 34th street and Grove avenue.

Other events of importance to all west area clubwomen are the midwinter meeting, Jan. 9, Presbyterian Church of River Forest; annual meeting, April 10, Austin Baptist church, 515 North Pine avenue; Junior and Senior evening meeting, March 25, Clyde Park Community house, Cicero.

Officers who will assist Mrs. Johnson this term are Mrs. Earle A. Phillips and Mrs. Frank W. Ault, vice presidents; Mrs. Carl Friedley, recording secretary; Mrs. B. C. Wolcott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. P. Joseph McNamara, treasurer; Mrs. F. J. Novark, Mrs. Mary L. Drobish, and Mrs. Frank G. Hinman, directors.

Head Other Departments.

Other department chairman are Mrs. Wylma Post Sidle, American home; Mrs. James H. Perkinson, art; Mrs. Willard Ingalls, civil service; Mrs. William B. Day, conservation; Mrs. Chester W. Hunter, education; Mrs. Beatrice E. Harms, gardens; Mrs. W. C. Detwiler, Indian welfare.

Mrs. H. G. Niese, Junior club women; Mrs. Harry H. Hornbaker, law observance; Mrs. William H. Hernon, motion pictures; Mrs. Russel H. Tamplin, press and publicity; Mrs. H. H. Palmer, public health and child hygiene, and Mrs. John C. Biemeck, public welfare.

Chairmen of standing committees are Mrs. Lee Jolidon, club institutes; Mrs. John Huff and Mrs. Thomas Earl Turner, club magazines; Mrs. Charles J. Kay, Park Ridge School for Girls; Mrs. Cora Evelyn Wilson, printing; Mrs. Harry Raymond, program bureau; Mrs. W. J. Malcolmson, revisions and resolutions, and Mrs. Ellis Lewis, auditing.

FLAGS AND PATRIOTISM.

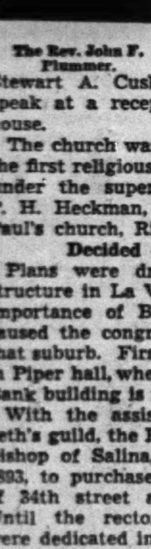
I see a great number of American flags displayed on the street these days. Automobiles have signs reading "I Am a True American." I was just wondering if these "true Americans" know what that means. I wonder just why the sudden display of American flags. It seems to me that patriotism can be better shown by community interest, by throwing garbage in garbage cans, by planting flowers in your back yard and by being kind, considerate and fair to your neighbors. How many "true Americans" study the ballot carefully, discharge their duty as a voting citizen? The display of the American flag is a patriotic gesture and is fine. But when a man has six American flags pasted on his windshield in 1940 and never had them before, I begin to wonder if he is "a true American." T. B.

WINNING WAR AGAINST SMOKE.

The smoke menace is lessening in the city and less is heard of it by residents in home neighborhoods. But some small institutions and factories create a momentary cloud of smoke that is annoying. This is usually rubbish burning. The blackout of smoke is being conquered and that is a condition essential to our health and well being. A. M.

BERWYN CHURCH NOTES 50 YEARS SINCE FOUNDING

Episcopal Unit Holds a Celebration Today.



The Rev. John F. Plummer.

With services starting at 8 o'clock this morning, St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal church of Berwyn will celebrate its golden anniversary. The Rev. Edwin B. Thayer, rector of Christ church, Burlington, Ia., and former member of the parish, will be guest preacher at the Festival Holy Eucharist at 11 a. m.

Tonight at 7 o'clock the Rt. Rev. E. J. Randall, S. T. D., suffragan bishop of Chicago, and Stewart A. Cushman, layman, will speak at a reception in the parish house.

The church was founded in 1890 as the first religious body in La Vergne, under the supervision of the Rev. P. H. Heckman, then rector of St. Paul's church, Riverside.

Decided on Berwyn.

Plans were drawn for a church structure in La Vergne, but growing importance of Berwyn to the west caused the congregation to move to that suburb. First services were held in Piper hall, where the Berwyn State Bank building is now located.

With the assistance of St. Elizabeth's guild, the Rev. H. C. Sage, later bishop of Salina, Kas., was able, in 1893, to purchase lots at the corner of 34th street and Euclid avenue. Until the rectory and guild hall were dedicated in 1894, services were held in the Baptist church.

Later the mission became a parish and included St. Mary's mission of Cicero within its boundaries. In 1922 ground was broken for a new church structure, but it was not until 1926 that the building was completed and dedicated.

Raise Fund of $12,600.

Early in November, 1933, the Rev. John F. Plummer became rector, and due to his work and the coöperation of his parishioners the church today will have successfully completed a campaign to raise $12,600 toward the parish debt.

Those on the vestry are Gordon Best, senior warden; J. Russell Emmert, junior warden; Herbert Best, Clarence Carter, Morris Ferensen, Joseph Griswold, George Hack, John Hill, Harold S. Johnson, James Martinek, Arthur C. Moore, Walter Nofftz, Robert Suerth, and Arthur Thompson.

St. Angela's Circle to Hold Christmas Charity Party

The annual party to raise money for Christmas charity will be held by St. Angela's circle, Daughters of Isabella, tomorrow evening in La Follette Park auditorium, Laramie avenue and Hirsch street.

P.-T. A. Notes

George Cassell, assistant superintendent of the Chicago Board of education, will speak before the introductory meeting of the season for the Burns P.-T.A. which will be held at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the school, 2524 South Central Park avenue.

The first meeting of the Pope P.-T.A. will be held at 1:15 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the school assembly hall. Frank A. Fucik, principal, will give the address.

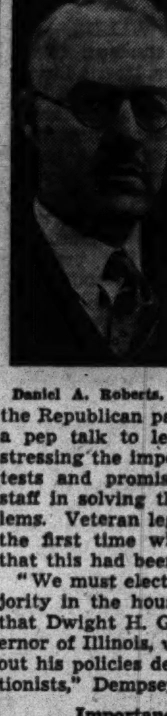
The Farragut High School Band and Orchestra Parents' association will hold its annual get-acquainted meeting at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening in Shedd Park fieldhouse, 23d street and Lawndale avenue. Peter B. Ritzma, Farragut principal, will be guest speaker and a music program will be presented by band and orchestra students.

A double feature motion picture is scheduled for the meeting of the Nash P.-T.A. at 1:15 o'clock Friday afternoon. The pictures are "The Largest Club in the World" and "Oil from the Earth." There will also be four technicolor minute-movies.

2 SEATS IN 23D IS G. O. P. GOAL IN ASSEMBLY RACE

Thon, Roberts Point to Gains in Primary.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.



Daniel A. Roberts.

Food for hope was given last week to the two Republican candidates for the Illinois house of representatives whose task is to displace one of the pair of Democrat incumbents from the 23d senatorial district. The district includes Oak Park, the 31st ward, and parts of wards 26, 30, 32, 36, and 37.

Full coöperation was pledged by John T. Dempsey, young new chairman of the Cook county central committee of the Republican party. Dempsey gave a pep talk to legislative candidates stressing the importance of their contests and promising the aid of his staff in solving their campaign problems. Veteran legislators said it was the first time within their memory that this had been done.

"We must elect a real working majority in the house at Springfield so that Dwight H. Green, the next governor of Illinois, will be able to carry out his policies despite petty obstructionists," Dempsey said.

Importance Is Cited.

"Your candidacies are as important as any other and they will be recognized as such from now on. Your names will be printed on literature distributed from my office and we will give you any help you need."

The 23d district nominees, Representative William G. Thon and Daniel A. Roberts, joined with other house candidates in giving Dempsey a vote of thanks for his adoption of this policy.

They were also heartened by an analysis of the April primary vote on their office which showed that Democrats have slipped substantially since 1938. The district has had only one G. O. P. representative since 1933, but had two during the previous several decades.

Thon and Roberts placed much significance on the fact that the Democratic lead was reduced by 34,000 votes between the two primaries [for this office each voter casts three votes]. In April, 1938, the Democrats piled up 150,000, compared with the G. O. P. total of 47,000—a lead of 103,000. But last April the Democratic figure was down to 136,000 while the Republican total rose to 67,000—a lead of 69,000.

Secret Ballot Leads.

"What really counts in this picture is that the Democrats' primary lead shrinks when the voters get secret ballots in November," Representative Thon said. "In 1938 the primary lead of 103,000 shrank to 27,000 in the November election.

"This is true to form according to what I have observed in other districts, where the pay roll machine is unable to hold its lines in secret elections. I look for the same thing to happen this fall."

Representative Thon said that the Republican sentiment recorded at the primary will be even stronger in November. Wendell L. Willkie, the G. O. P. nominee for President, will draw many Democratic votes and he wasn't a factor in April, Thon pointed out.

Roberts agreed that the change in primary totals bodes well for the G. O. P. cause. However, he warned that the change may have been due in part to the fact that there was a warm Republican primary contest this year, while there was less public interest in the Democratic battle in April than in 1938.

Urge Registry for All.

"As long as the Republicans can keep it up, and distribute their votes evenly between the two candidates for the house, our chances of winning are excellent," Roberts said.

With the final day for registration set for Oct. 7, increasing attention is being given to the need for listing all eligible voters under the permanent registration system. Precinct committeemen are canvassing the homes in their territory to find persons who have never registered or who have moved or changed their names without notifying the election board.

As part of this effort, the Oak Park First Voters Willkie club was organized last week. Two persons who have recently attained voting age were invited from each of 80 precincts to a dinner at the Oak Park Arms hotel sponsored by L. A. Wescott, Oak Park township Republican leader.

Both of the Republican house candidates said that they will support parole reform legislation.

22 Year Record.

Representative Thon, who has served 22 years in the lawmaking body, won the following praise from the nonpartisan Legislative Voters' league last April: "Able, sponsor of much legislation, earnest. His long experience and generally good record entitle him to renomination." He is a lawyer, 53 years old, and lives at 432 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park.

Roberts served one term in the house from 1934 to 1936. He was approved by the L. V. L. as follows: "He won recognition not usually accorded to a first term member, by his level headedness and his effective woork on the floor of the house and in committee." Also a lawyer, he is 55 years old and resides at 1451 North Avers avenue.

Report on Democrats.

Democrats running for reëlection are Representatives Arthur M. Kaindl, 2600 West Chicago avenue, and Stanley A. Halick, 1216 North Maplewood avenue, president of the Polish-American Civic club.

The L. V. L. reported that Kaindl, now ending his fourth term is "earnest, zealous, seldom misses roll call on important measures, and exhibits some independence." But the league turned thumbs down on Halick, saying of him: "Ending third term with record exceedingly poor and unsatisfactory."

Three Brothers Become Cantors

With the opening of the high holidays on Rosh Hashana, young Morris, David, and Phillip Lind, 3716 Douglas boulevard, have become cantors in the Knesses Israel Nusach Sford synagogue, 1308 Independence boulevard. They are sons of Cantor Joshua Lind, who will chant services in Kehileth Jacob synagogue a block away. It is believed the Lind boys, the fifth generation of cantors in the Lind family, are among the youngest cantors in the country. Morris is 27 years old, David is 25, and Phillip is 23.

PAPA JOSHUA'S SONS CARRY ON THE TRADITION

Refuse Movie Call to Chant in Temple.

in Soldiers' field. The money the boys made went fast, for a cantor's home is always open to the Jew who needs money or food.

The cantor and rabbi are the top spiritual leaders of the congregation, the two pairs of helping hands. Eight years ago when depression had struck, the four cantors, father and sons toured the country, giving concerts. Papa Lind's ambition never changed. He said no to radio, to offers of motion picture producers. When necessity took them into concert singing outside the church, the Linds sang religious songs or the classics. "Ach! Stop that," said Papa Lind to swing time pieces.

Orthodox Jews from all over the city will pour into the K. I. N. S. synagogue to hear the Lind brothers this week, for David has one of the few falsetto voices among cantors the world over. One other cantor, Joseph Rosenblatt, made a million dollars with his falsetto but died a pauper because a cantor gives his money away.

Arrangement by Father.

Papa Joshua has arranged the complicated, moving music that at times is a low wail or like the high crying of a lyre. Sometimes it is crashing crescendo with a promise of the end of all trouble.

As the Jews in the synagogue hear the lyric baritone of Davie and the rich tenor of Morrie, they will listen with a father a block away who really can't hear the boys at all.

But Papa Lind will hear those three voices growing stronger thru 20 years of chanting their prayers. "Morrie, Davie and Phillip are cantors now," says Papa Lind. "I've saved them for the synagogue. Tomorrow if they want to they can sing over the radio or on the concert stage. Now they can have the new things. They've learned the old."

SISTER-IN-LAW OF WILLKIE AIDS VOTE CAMPAIGN

His Nomination Changes Quiet Home Life.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Mrs. Edward E. Willkie.

With interest in the Presidential campaign reaching every American household, it may well be guessed that the Edward E. Willkie home in La Grange is following events with family enthusiasm. But Mrs. Edward E. Willkie, 220 South Waiola avenue, La Grange, puts it this way:

"My sister-in-law has told interviewers that she is only the wife of the Republican nominee. Well, I am only the sister-in-law of the nominee."

Mrs. Edward Willkie admits, however, that close relationship to Wendell Willkie has somewhat altered the usual routine of suburban life for her since the Republican convention made its decision. On the Sunday after the convention there were streams of automobiles past the Edward Willkie house, and it soon became necessary for the family to install an extra telephone.

Husband Goes on Tour.

The turn of events has caused Mrs. Edward Willkie to lose her husband during the campaign, for he gave up his work in Chicago to travel with his brother on his speaking tours.

"It means," said Mrs. Willkie, "that I probably won't see much of Ed for several weeks."

A daughter, Marian Elizabeth, who was graduated from Lyons Township High school last year, is attending Randolph Macon college at Lynchburg, Va. A son, Edward, 10, has become the man of the house while keeping up his studies in the La Grange grade school.

Young Edward has gone in for Willkie buttons and wears a different one on his cap every day he goes to school. His mother says he is keeping his mind on his books, including American history, at a time when important new history is being made.

Twelve Years in Belgium.

The Willkies are comparatively newcomers to La Grange after a period of 12 years in Belgium, where Mr. Willkie represented Libby, McNeill & Libby.

"It was our plan," said Mrs. Willkie, "to settle down in La Grange and become a part of the community. Then came the trend of votes down at Philadelphia, Ed responded to a telegram from his brother, and for nights after that we had a house full of visitors."

Mrs. Willkie said that traveling into Chicago had become quite a different experience for her since the campaign started. She said she found herself watching for Willkie buttons, and had had one or two incognito conversations with strangers wearing Roosevelt buttons.

Willkie club groups in the west suburban area and the Republican volunteers have asked Mrs. Willkie to speak at their meetings.

Makes No Speeches.

"There will be no speeches on my part," said Mrs. Willkie, "but I am willing to do all I can during the campaign and have enjoyed chatting with those who attend the meetings. They are loyal workers and I am with them heart and soul."

Mrs. Willkie said that hitherto she had never interested herself deeply in politics. Born in Oklahoma, Faye Hollingsworth, she later moved with her parents to Long Beach, Cal., where she met and was married to Edward Willkie when he was a naval officer. There was the long residence abroad, and two years ago, when Mr. Willkie was again given headquarters in Chicago, the family decided on the west suburbs as a place to establish a home.

ELMHURST COLLEGE ALUMNAE TO VIEW FALL FASHION SHOW

Mrs. F. C. Schafer.

Ten members of the Elmhurst College Women's Alumnae association will serve as models when the group opens its season's activities tomorrow night with a practical style show in the college recital hall. Miss Ruth Brieschke, '37, has charge of the program. Mrs. Antone Hotle, '39, will be production manager. Mrs. F. C. Schafer, '37, is secretary of the association.

"We are not going to have an elaborate show," said Miss Brieschke. "Our models will wear just the clothes ordinarily worn for work, for play and for dress affairs." After the style show, a committee headed by Mrs. Harry Vernon, '39, will serve tea to guests and models.

Members of the alumnae association who will model their own clothes are Miss La Verne Beckman, '37, Mrs. Robert Roos, '37, Miss Evely Jo Hilander, '37, Miss June O'Brien, '37, Mrs. Robert Sheean, '39, Mrs. Edward Schlundt, '42, and Miss Hazel Johnson, '38. Three more models are yet to be announced.

WHEATON TAKES ON APPEARANCE OF WILD WEST

Days of the Old West are being enacted in Wheaton, where, from now until Oct. 19, visitors to the suburb must not be surprised at the sight of changed store fronts, 10 gallon hats, women in trailing skirts, and men with fancy whiskers. Silver dollars, whenever practical, will be used in making change.

Wheaton's early days will be brought to a climax with a three day celebration Oct. 17, 18, and 19. Events sponsored by the Wheaton Chamber of Commerce will include a pet parade for children, a stage coach holdup and western parade, and a public wedding.

Idea for the activity was suggested by Max Kalb, who observed a similar program while visiting in the west last year. As the result of a meeting of the chamber's board of directors at the office of President William C. Atten, Ed Soukup has been made chairman of arrangements.

Chosen to assist Mr. Soukup are Byron Binder, Max Burckal, Bill Gaede, Frank Dieter, Arch Watts, J. A. Munson, Clarice Bricker, Margaret Kennedy, and Helen Kish.

Committee members include the following: Subscriptions, D. W. Cashin, chairman; Anton Carlson, Henry Gieseke, and Don Wheaton; publicity, Phil Durant and Bill Bauler; pet parade, Ethel Duner, Frank Tarr, and Duke Durfee; stage coach and wagon parade, Fred Willis and Doris Murray; public wedding, Frances Jones, Libby Soukup, Mary Alice Kampp, and Leona Binder; entertainment, Fran Steele, Harold Engstrom, and Don Knapp.

A competitive spirit is evident among men of the suburb in the beard growing contest. Old clothes are part of the program. Cardboard cowboy hats and neckerchiefs will be distributed to the children of the community, according to plans.

SUBURBAN CLUB WILL ENTER 30TH YEAR TOMORROW

Western Springs Group Planned in 1910.

President's night tomorrow will open the 1940-'41 season of the Village club of Western Springs. This is its 30th year. Incoming officers will be welcomed.

The club had its beginning in 1910 when J. H. [Hib] Cattell called together a group of young married couples and broached the idea of a social organization for the community that then had a population of 1,000. A photostatic copy of the letter written by Mr. Cattell has been given a place on the clubroom walls. Memberships were sold for $100 each, and a number of fathers bought them for their sons as well as for themselves.

A clubhouse built at Lawn and Chestnut streets was formally opened with a New Year's night dance in 1912. Then, as now, the house was the scene of parties, with bowling, billiards, cards, dances, and family suppers.

Suffered in Depression.

All went well until the advent of the automobile, when country clubs began to flourish but clubs in town suffered. During a low ebb in the depression, 1932, men of the village got together and revived the institution. Younger men were encouraged to take the places of older ones who had slipped out of the organization. Since that year the club has been more popular than ever, has become solvent, paid off part of the mortgage on the building, and each year has made more improvements.

In preparation for this year's President's dinner, the exterior of the clubhouse has been repainted and the bowling alleys have been reconditioned. As in previous years, one night a week is set apart for the "dames' division," when women are given exclusive use of the quarters for badminton, ping pong, and bridge.

Six dances are held a year. There is the autumn formal in October, a Thanksgiving dance, a New Year's fête, a Valentine dance, and a Fool's Frolic costume party in April. Each year, football teams of Lyon Township High school, La Grange, are entertained by the club.

List of New Officers.

New officers to be welcomed on President's night are Val Price, president; Arthur E. Odegard, vice president; Verner D. Armstrong, secretary; Robert R. Hubner, treasurer; and William S. Deeming, controler.

New directors are W. Clare Brooks, A. C. Embshoff, Palmer A. Greene, Carl E. Heimbrodt, Howard G. Knowlton, Laurence H. Norton, Jack H. Oliver, Edward S. Tank, William W. Wishard, and Gordon B. Zimmermann.

Active in the Dames' division are Mrs. Dorothy Hubner, treasurer; Mrs. Mercedes Ferguson, assisted by Mrs. Frances Elder, badminton; Mrs. Mary Schenk, assisted by Mrs. Ruth Weinberg, bowling; Mrs. Thelma Gustin, assisted by Mrs. Myrtle Sturtz, bridge.

The junior division, affording social activities for the high school group, is under the supervision of Sam McMurray.

Village Player

Miss Carolyn Wolfe, Forest Park, will play the role of Paula in Behrman's "End of Summer" which will be presented by the Village theater of Oak Park Thursday and Friday in the Lowell school theater. The Village theater was founded last February by Miss Elizabeth Wolcott, director of the group. This will be the fourth play since the founding.

Sends Challenge to Debate on 'Willkie for President'

Challenge to a debate on the subject: "Resolved, that Wendell Willkie should be elected President of the United States," recently was issued by Leo F. Kennedy, Democratic committeeman of Lyons Township, to Frank J. Kriz and officers of the Regular Republican organization of Lyons township with headquarters in La Grange. Mr. Kennedy suggested the Republicans appoint two members to debate with two members of his organization.

'GOOD TO GIVE' IS SLOGAN FOR BERWYN CHEST

Dinner Thursday Starts the Annual Drive.

"It's Good to Give" is the slogan for the Berwyn community chest. The fourth annual drive for funds will start Thursday and continue thru Oct. 12 under the chairmanship of John D. Moynahan. Several hundred volunteer workers will seek to raise a total of $15,500 for the support, during 1941, of five organizations which are chest members. The groups are the Berwyn Welfare association, the Berwyn Hospital guild, the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Campfire Girls.

John D. Moynahan.

Mr. Moynahan revealed that a special gifts committee has been at work for some time soliciting larger amounts from firms and individuals in Berwyn.

The drive will get under way officially at a dinner meeting to be held at Sokol Tabor hall, 16th street and Clarence avenue, Berwyn, Thursday evening. Patrons of the chest, those who have contributed or pledged more than $25, will be guests.

Will Try New Plan.

"We decided on what might be called a whirlwind campaign," Mr. Moynahan said, "and the hundreds of volunteer workers know in advance that they will not have to drag out their efforts. We also are going to try a new plan this year and we believe it will produce results. Instead of asking contributors for a cash donation outright we are seeking pledges for financial support for the chest.

"We feel this will bring in a larger return because there will be individuals who might not have a sizeable sum in their pocket when the volunteer solicitor calls, yet who will be willing to pledge an amount to be paid later. We are stipulating that pledges may be paid any time before January 1."

Budgets Are Submitted.

The organizations and the budgets they have submitted to the directors of the community chest are:

Berwyn Hospital guild, $2,400; Berwyn Welfare association, $5,000; Boy Scouts, $4,500; Girl Scouts, $2,500, and Campfire Girls, $100. The remainder of the $15,500 sought is for expenses of the drive, including printing, postage, and telephone calls.

The hospital guild hopes to realize an ambition of long standing by creating a small ward in the new addition which is to be built at the Berwyn hospital. The guild provides hospitalization for needy Berwynites. So far this year it has provided care for more than 100 patients.

Officers of the community chest are George S. Prosch, president; William J. Woodward, vice president; William J. Kriz, secretary; Paul R. Skala, treasurer, and Noah Abram, Postmaster J. A. Borkovec, Fire Chief James Hrach, Charles Moravec, Mrs. H. W. Clark, Robert W. Teeter, Mrs. Walter B. Spelman, and Charles H. Coyle, directors.

The 29th Ward Willkie club has opened headquarters at 3547 West Madison street with Mrs. Mary Horras in charge of the office in the afternoons. Members will take turns directing the club activity in the evening.

Leo F. Mucha, leader of the club, says: "We are not interested in other political offices, elective or appointive."

Mr. Mucha is in charge of the program drawn up by the group at its weekly meeting. The program will aid the cause of Mr. Willkie. The club will welcome information pertaining to illegal voting or irregular or illegal tabulating of votes by judges or clerks of election.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

CZECHS HONOR PATRON SAINT IN RITES TODAY

Program Will Begin in Abbey Church.

Ten Czech parishes and more than 150 Czech societies of the six national fraternal orders will hold a celebration today in honor of St. Vaclav, patron saint of Bohemia, whose feast day was yesterday. The program is being directed by the District Alliance of Bohemian Catholics.

The celebration will begin with a 10 o'clock morning service in the Abbey church of St. Procopius, 18th and Allport streets, where the Rev. Abbot Prokop Neuzil and Archbishop Stritch will preside. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Raymond Koman, pastor of St. Procopius and chaplain of the alliance.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the civic ceremonies will be held in the Cicero stadium, 52d avenue and 19th street, Cicero, located in one of the largest settlements of Bohemian people in the Chicago area.

Clevelander to Speak.

The speaker of the afternoon is the Rev. Msgr. Oldrich Zlamal of Cleveland. His address will be a tribute to the Czech patron, St. Wencelaus, and it will be preceded by a program by the Holy Mount band of 75 pieces, by the Catholic Sokols who will present folk dances, and patriotic tribute by the Czecho-Slovak legionnaires.

The combined parish choirs of more than 200 voices will sing. Frank H. Bicek, judge of the Circuit court, is expected to bring greetings from city officials.

From 6:30 to 7 o'clock this evening the gathering will witness a broadcast of the regular Sunday evening Czech Catholic hour from the stadium over WHFC. The broadcast is under the direction of the Rev. Ernest J. Zizka; Prof. Julius Kuchynka, professor of English at Loyola university, and John W. Voller, president of the National Alliance of Czech Catholics. The Moravian societies will open the evening program, after the broadcast, with folk dances.

ANTI-RAT ARMY WIDENS ATTACK INTO 29 WARDS

The war on rats in Chicago spread from 3 to 29 wards last week. An army of several hundred men on relief began extermination work in wards which are 100 per cent equipped with garbage cans. Operations in these wards are to be increased as more men are enlisted in the rat killing drive.

What results they will have won't be known for several weeks, Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt, who is doubling as generalissimo in the campaign, said last week. At that time he hopes to have a casualty list of dead rats. In the sample eradication war conducted recently in three northwest and west side wards he estimated that almost 50,000 rats were killed.

The exterminators, using thousands of pieces of poisoned bait, will operate only in wards where each house has been equipped with garbage cans.

"Experts tell us that it is futile to try to kill rats where there are no proper garbage receptacles," he declared.

Following is a list of 100 per cent wards in which extermination work has been started: 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, and 50.

Those without a perfect rating in the west area are:

25th ward, Thomas Frole, superintendent; 56.2 per cent, 2,594 buildings without cans.

27th ward, George Leake, superintendent; 79.4 per cent, 1,587 buildings without cans.

100 MILE TRAIL RIDE IS TEST OF SKILL IN SADDLE

Annual 3 Day Trip to Start Friday.

Riders from several states will participate in the three-day annual Chicagoland 100 mile trail ride that will start from the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest next Friday. The ride, a test of straightaway horsemanship, is sponsored by the Town and Country Equestrian association and the Horse and Mule Association of America.

Entrants include men and women from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa, according to Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule association. It is expected that even more states will be represented before the entries close early this week, Dinsmore said. The list will close when 100 entries have been received.

The ride will emphasize the system of private horse trails in Lake county that connect with Cook county's 150 miles of forest preserve trails.

Route of the Ride.

Most of the route will be over paths along the Skokie lagoons and in other northern forest preserves, but part of it will be over trails surrounding the Onwentsia club.

The first day's trip will be on trails south of the Onwentsia stables, including those along the upper Des Plaines river. The second day will take the riders over the private trails to the west and north of the club, maintained jointly by the Onwentsia and Knollwood country clubs. The third day's ride will swing south and eastward, past Fort Sheridan and down to the Skokie preserve.

Each day's ride will start and end at Onwentsia. Riders will cover about 40 miles in seven to eight hours the first day, a similar stretch in equal time the second day, and 20 miles in three hours on the final day.

Points to Be Judged.

Participants will be judged on their own condition and the condition of their mounts, both during the ride and at its close, Dinsmore said. The judges will observe the horses along the route and again in the Onwentsia club ring at noon next Sunday. Speed counts 40 points and condition 60 points.

There will be 10 prizes in each of five classes, the largest prize list since the ride was originated three years ago. There will be a lightweight and heavyweight class for livery horses, similar classes for privately owned horses, and an open owner's class. Horses in the lightweight class must carry 160 to 189 pounds of rider and equipment. Those in the heavy class will carry 190 pounds or more.

In Training for Weeks.

Both horses and riders have been in training for several weeks, Dinsmore said. This is because of the unusual strain placed on the participants by three days of forced pace.

"This isn't an endurance contest," Dinsmore said. "It's a competition in which the proper care of horses is emphasized, rather than speed and gameness. Yet it requires more than ordinary riding.

"In ordinary riding the rider can follow a leisurely routine. In the 100 mile ride he or she must ride fast most of the time, for an average speed of nearly six miles an hour is demanded. That can be kept up only if horse and rider are in fine condition at the start and are kept that way thru intelligent conduct."

Many well known Chicago area horsemen have entered the ride, but there is an unusually high proportion of new riders, officials said.

Enters Three Arabians.

A. W. Harris, chairman of the board of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, whose horse won first prize in the lightweight division last year, has entered three Arabian horses this year.

Women who will compete include Mrs. John Ekern Ott of Hinsdale and Miss Josephine Cunningham of Chicago. Miss Cunningham will ride Conquistador, Col. E. N. Wentworth's hunter on which she took second prize in the heavyweight division last year. Robert Burnham, 15 years old, 10201 St. Lawrence avenue, was the youngest among the early entrants.

There will be several father-and-son combinations in the ride. One of these pairs is from out of town. It is made up of F. W. Spear, 65 years old, and his son, Jack, 30, both of Tipton, Ia.

Others to compete include Joseph Gogan and Louis P. Smith of Cleveland, O.; Miss Clara Zehner of Gary, and several riders from Milwaukee and vicinity.

Dinsmore is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Other members are William B. McIlvaine Jr., Elmer J. Holdorf, J. C. Thompson, Lucius Teter, J. M. FitzGerald, and Roberts Mann.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my riding lessons had been given in the socalled English type of park saddle. My riding instructor, Elmer J. Holdorf, assured me, however, that at most stables I could obtain virtually any type of saddle I desired.

There are three main types of saddle in use in Chicago area riding stables, I learned. Each has its advantages and its drawbacks.

The saddle most familiar to the average American, and much in demand in livery, particularly at the low cost riding stables, is the western, or cowboy saddle, with its deep seat, large knee roll and distinctive horn.

This is primarily a work saddle, designed to afford ample comfort and protection for all day riding, and strong and sturdy enough to stand up under the strain of cow roping and the constant assault of hot sun or drenching rain.

Popular for Novices.

It is popular among novice riders both because it is the saddle of the picturesque cowboy and because its depth and knee swell impart a feeling of security to the rider who has not learned proper balance without such artificial aids.

Some of the disadvantages of the western saddle for bridle path riding are that it is hot in summer, the built-out knee swell tend to spread the legs uncomfortably, and the convenient horn is a constant temptation to "pull leather" in an emergency, which is bad riding.

Somewhat similar to the western is the McClellan saddle, a skeletonized modification of the cowboy type, developed by Gen. George B. McClellan of civil war fame, and once used widely in the army. This type is still regulation for the Chicago mounted police.

It also has the high, enveloping cantle and pommel, but is without the flaring knee roll. Its most distinctive characteristic is the open ventilating slit running lengthwise of the seat, which, rightly or wrongly, is reputed to be easy on the horse but hard on the rider.

Lacks Leg Fender.

Like the western, the McClellan is often used with covered stirrups, but it lacks the heavy sudadero or leg fender that is characteristic of the cowboy saddle.

The English or park saddle is characterized by its relatively flat seat, and its light, cutaway construction generally.

Most bridle path riders prefer it, I was told, because it affords a comfortable foundation unobstructed by large projections that interfere with the legs or lower torso. This saddle gives full play to the rider who takes pride in maintaining good form on horseback thru sheer skill and sense of balance.

I find considerable controversy over whether the western or the park saddle is best for long periods on horseback.

One group holds that cowboys, who virtually live in the saddle, choose the western type because it distributes the body weight more evenly over the rider's seat and has other comfort features. If it weren't best, the cowboys would pick something else, they argue.

To this argument the English saddle crowd replies that the United States cavalry, which also spends much time in the saddle, has adopted a type that is an adaptation of the English saddle.

Plans 100 Mile Ride.

I shall soon have an opinion based on experience, for I have just been assigned to take the third annual Chicagoland 100-mile trail ride next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, which is described more fully in an accompanying story.

My saddle will be the English type, for which I have developed a lively preference during this lesson series. By the time I have ridden more than 100 miles in some 17 hours, I shall know better than any verbal argument can tell me whether the park saddle is practical for long rides.

I shall know, too, incidentally, just how much I have gained from my course of instruction by Holdorf, which is now coming to an end.

GETS PRESENT OF 5,000 BOYS AND LIKES IT

Roy F. Webster Is New Crane Principal.

Roy F. Webster was presented two weeks ago with 5,000 boys and he likes it. Mr. Webster is to shoulder all their weighty adolescent problems, must offer the correct solution to all questions, and maybe sometimes must read their minds. He is the new principal of Crane Technical High school, 2245 Jackson boulevard.

Roy F. Webster.

Mr. Webster isn't a very big man and he doesn't have a loud voice. His eyes are a kindly gray-blue and his hair is gray-blac. He believes the first requirement in getting along with boys is to like them. "And the best reward from my 34 years of teaching," he says, "is the tremendous lineup of boys who have been and are my friends."

When the 1940-41 school term opened the new Crane principal took up his duties as head of the Moos Elementary school. At the end of the first week he was notified of the promotion to chief administrator of the school that occupies a full city block, that teaches all the old and new courses from algebra to upholstering.

Just Getting Acquainted.

"Since then," says Mr. Webster, "I've been getting acquainted with my staff, the 160 men and women who will know my boys by name.

"There will be no changes at Crane this semester," explains Mr. Webster, "I believe a principal's success depends on how well he and his faculty can coöperate. The first semester I shall try to know Crane, and the faculty will have to teach me."

After his graduation from the University of Illinois, Mr. Webster, in Sept. 1906, entered the Elgin High school as an instructor in physics and mathematics. He was there three years. In 1909 he came to Chicago as a mathematics instructor at Lane Technical High school, was there 13 years and part of the time served as administrative assistant.

Many Other Duties.

In addition he was the one man gymnasium instructor, taught his full schedule and served as a personnel director in the days before there were personnel departments and then he coached football, baseball, and basketball in his spare time. "Those were the days," says Mr. Webster.

The first heavyweight championship ever won at Lane Tech was by a member of Mr. Webster's team. His baseball team was runner-up in the county league. "There wasn't a city league in those days," he says.

Next he was assigned to Hibbard High school, which went out of existence when Roosevelt High was built. At Hibbard he was assistant principal. He also did administrative work at Armour Elementary and Moos, the school he left two weeks ago. In 1936 Mr. Webster earned a master's degree from Northwestern university.

'Give Boy a Chance.'

My motto in discipline problems," says Mr. Webster, "is 'give the boy a chance to tell his story.'" The new principal also believes in clubs, teams, and social groups because they teach the boy how to get along with his fellow men. "And the world seems sadly lacking in that virtue," he says.

The principal will insist, however, that school activities be supervised by the school and that the general policy of classes, clubs, newspapers, and student will be "a sound democratic education."

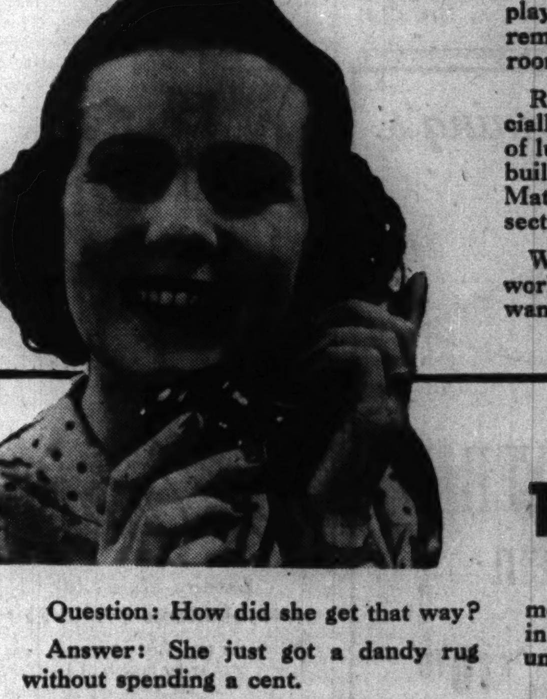
Why not estimate your material and millwork needs today, and follow the Tribune want ad section for values?



THE LADY IS HAPPY

Question: How did she get that way?

Answer: She just got a dandy rug without spending a cent.

Q.: For nothing—how come?

A.: Up in her attic she found Junior's old saxophone which he never plays any more It was just what an advertiser in the Tribune Barter and Exchange column wanted. They made a trade.

Q.: Do you suppose . . . ?

Because they get better results, want ad users place more want advertising in the Tribune than they place in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

FOR 93 YEARS
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

CLUB FINDS '40 WHOLE LOT LIKE YEARS OF '17-'18

War an Active Theme Then and Now.

A few weeks ago Austin women dug into their trunks for momentos saved from club meetings as far back as a quarter century ago. The Austin North End Woman's club is getting ready for its silver anniversary year, which will be formally opened Oct. 8.

In a quarter century the women rather expected changes in programs, in ideas, in lecture topics, for the club has always kept abreast of the times. But this is what they found: Oct., 1917—" Over the Top for Democracy"; Jan., 1918—" America and the World Crisis"; April, 1918—" Children in War Times."

Mrs. Madge Drummond, who has been doing the history collecting says: "Why, we could just take an old yearbook and change the date. The topics would be just as timely."

Some Different Items.

There are a few different items in the old yearbooks. One member worked hard on the committee for the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, one served on the Anti-Saloon league. The women raised $52,000 in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive and they stitched long hours on garments for soldiers at the front. An American flag was sent to the Illinois Training corps.

Skirts were tighter and longer. Hats were like big buckets housing the head instead of fitting it. There were big trees along Chicago avenue, and Madison street in Austin was flanked by open prairies. Austin boulevard was a narrow street and small cottages huddled in the place of sprawling apartments.

It was bad transportation that caused the founding of the Austin North End club 25 years ago. Mrs. L. H. Chamberlin, now of Glen Ellyn, lived in North Austin. She and some of her neighbors attended meetings of the Austin Woman's club at the Austin Masonic temple, several miles distant. "Why can't we have a club near our homes?" asked Mrs. Chamberlin.

Church Women Help.

The Austin club coöperated and the new club for North Austin had its beginning with the added help of the Woman's Missionary society of Faith Presbyterian church.

Of the ten founder members, there are six who are still listed as members. One of these, Mrs. R. W. Olstead, 5339 Ferdinand street, regularly comes to meetings and serves on committees. The others are Mrs. Chamberlin, Mrs. I. F. Jassman, Pasadena, Cal.; Mrs. N. T. Palmer, Glen Ellyn; Mrs. Arthur Masters, Wauwautosa, Wis.; and Mrs. W. R. Mose, Glen Ellyn.

Open Series of Teas.

Recently the club opened a series of silver anniversary teas. They will be held the first Friday of each month in various members' homes. Proceeds will be used for their main 1940-'41 project, financial support for the King's Daughters,

Mrs. Herman Freevol is the president. Her corps of workers are Miss Emily Johnson and Mrs. G. H. Muns, vice presidents; Mrs. E. H. Feddersen and Mrs. Charles Sack, secretaries, and Mrs. E. B. Stuart, treasurer.

TRIBUNE FASHION SHOW ON W-G-N NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Chicago Tribune's American Fashion Show will broadcast from a brilliant and lavish setting in the main studio audience of W-G-N from 9:15 to 10 p. m. Wednesday, Oct. 2.

The American Fashion Show will mark a new era in the designing of women's wearing apparel—American designs by American women for American women. Travis Banton, noted Hollywood designer, will be the commentator, describing each dress and interpreting the trends of American fashions.

The 48 original creations to be shown, include the 25 prize winning designs selected from over 12,000 entries. Not until after the show will the 25 winners of $7,500 be known. The best design will receive an award of $3,000, the second best, $2,000. There will be three $500 awards and 20 of $50 each. The 300 sketches winning honorable mention will be displayed at the show.

It was a big task for the committee, headed by Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, to pick the winning sketches. But after three weeks, they winnowed it down to 48 superlative designs. Expert dressmakers in Chicago and New York are finishing the gowns.

The studio audience will consist of fashion experts, manufacturers, retail and wholesale dealers, and many women who are interested in a glimpse of what they will wear during the coming season.

Church Program

Mrs. Claire Madelein Clark will review the book, "How Green Was My Valley," by Richard Llewellyn tomorrow evening in the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, 900 North Lockwood avenue. The review will be sponsored by the Ladies' Aid organization. Welsh songs will be part of the program.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Sept. 30.

This is the time when the entire garden area should be in tiptop condition. Store all bird houses, garden furniture, and tools. Before the tools are stored they should be greased and oiled. The lawn mower, if not to be used again, should have all clippings removed and the parts thoroly cleaned and oiled. Later the accessories can be repaired, if needed, and exposed parts given a coat of paint. Fences should always be kept in condition; remove annual vines that have died down, and trim back woody growths.

Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Do not overplant the yard with shrubs, especially if the area is small. Shrubs planted too close together are certain to require much pruning to preserve a semblance of their form and beauty. Replace all poor soil with good soil, no matter what kind of plant is used. Use dwarf plants under low windows.

Enclose or screen the garage, if possible, with good shrubs. A lombardy poplar will serve to screen the telephone post in the rear.

Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Now that the house plants are indoors give them daily attention. A bit of plant food scattered on the surface of the soil in which Christmas cacti are growing will aid in the formation of buds. Adopt a regular spraying program to keep house plants free from all pests. Syringe at least once a week with clear water from the hose under pressure of the fingers. This will aid in keeping down the pests.

Thursday, Oct. 3.

Tomatoes will ripen if gathered before a hard frost, or the entire plant, with fruits attached, can be hung up in a light shed and the fruit will ripen. Eggplant and peppers should be gathered before frost touches them. Lettuce can be protected from light frosts by covering with hay or other material.

Friday, Oct. 4.

Be sure to prepare the ground well for bulbs because they will do much better. Bulbs are higher in price this season, but the gardener will find that American grown stock will give fine effects as garden subjects. They require, however, a longer time to flower when forced.

Plant hardy lilies in the borders as soon as they are available. The twelve best lilies for the amateur, and which will give flowers from June to late September, include auratum, candidum, croceum, davuricum, hansoni, henryi, regale, pardalinum, speciosum, tigrinum, testaceum, and umbellatum. Most of these can be obtained from local supply houses.

Saturday, Oct. 5.

If one admires red flowers a few pots of the smaller scarlet sage may be dug and potted. They will last a long time. Do not neglect to lay in a supply of material for mulching newly planted trees, shrubs, perennials, and hardy vines.

Bulb beds also should be mulched to prevent the bulbs from heaving out of the ground during spring thaws. Clean up the iris, removing yellow leaves and all the débris from the bed or border.

NEW EDGEBROOK HOME ARRANGED ON SIMPLE PLAN

Large Bay Windows Give Maximum Light.

BY LOUIS BARGELT.

The desire of a man and a woman for a home of their own is almost fundamental. And lucky are those who can start married life in their own home.

It is as friendly and inviting a home outside as it is livable within. A five room house in the traditional rural French spirit, yet a house essentially modern, with evidence of thoughtful layout, planned for maximum economy, and carefully chosen equipment, and decorations.

The architects are Hooper and Nelson, 118 East 26th street They have achieved balance, simpilicty, and symmetry. There is no feeling here of over-formality, or severity, tho certainly the little home has a great deal of dignity and poise.

Deck Over Garage.

Texture interest is given the exterior by its walls of brick; gray buff with manganese speckles. The trim is white, and the roof a deep blue-black. The large bay windows with their curvatures are well scaled to the exterior of the house and the entrance is of gray limestone. The roof of the attached garage has been made into a deck terrace, and is reached from the master bedroom on the second floor.

Inside you find a generous sized living room at the left of the entrance hall, with adjoining terrace. There is a traditional mantelpiece with stone facing and hearth. The placement of the dining room, at the right of entrance hall, separates it from the living portion, and the central location of stairs to second floor not only makes for economy but also conserves outside light for habitable rooms.

Red Linoleum in Kitchen.

The powder room and kitchen at the back are carried out in linoleum. The modern kitchen has counter tops of bright red linoleum, and this same red is carried into the gray linoleum floor in a feature strip. Elsewhere on the first floor, there are burgundy colored carpets, pearl gray ceilings, and walls pastel hued.

On the second floor there are two bedrooms, generous closet space, and bath with ceramic tile walls and floor. In the basement there is a forced warm air heating system, gas fueled, with provision for winter air conditioning.

Bay Windows for Light.

Speaking of what's new for fall in building and remodeling, it may or may not be news that the window selection available has never before been equaled in building history.

And of all the fine array of designs to choose from—the casement, the picture window, the double hung, the dormer, and the horizontal sliding—there is none more beautiful than the large bay windows of the type seen in this Edgebrook home. The curvature is well designed and as useful as it is lovely, since it captures sunlight and makes the entire room face the window.

'VAGABOND KING' TO OPEN W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Marion Claire, Thibault to Sing Leads Saturday.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The first of the three outstanding musical series which W-G-N will launch this fall will have its première next Saturday evening when Rudolph Friml's "The Vagabond King" is aired on the premier of the Chicago Theater of the Air. The Theater of the Air, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will present outstanding operettas streamlined into one hour productions. They will be aired from 9 to 10 o'clock every Saturday evening.

The second series—concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, directed by Dr. Frederick Stock and with world famous guest soloists—will be launched on Thursday, Oct. 10. And starting Monday, Nov. 4, W-G-N and Mutual will present the productions of the Chicago Opera company.

These new musical features are all in addition to W-G-N's established programs including the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour [Sunday nights]; the Pageant of Melody with Henry Weber and the Concert orchestra [Wednesdays] and In Chicago Tonight [Thursdays] which often features new music as was the case when David Broekman's score to "Ode to Chicago" was presented on Sept. 19.

Marion Claire Is the Star.

Marion Claire, the famous soprano, is to be the star of the Theater of the Air. In "The Vagabond King," she will sing the rôle of Katherine de Vaucelles, a beautiful and high spirited lady of the court.

For the rôle of François Villon, poet and patriot, genius and thief of medieval France, W-G-N will present Conrad Thibault, the American baritone, who made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Grand Opera company. Thibault is widely known to radio listeners for his many network series.

Miss Claire is featured every Sunday evening as soloist of the Symphonic hour. The Theater of the Air will be under the personal direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N and artistic director of the opera, will direct the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus in providing the musical background for the operettas.

Splendor and Squalor.

The romantic operetta, marked by its rousing music including the "Song of the Vagabond," is set in the splendor and squalor of medieval Paris. In the thieves' tavern Louis XI. comes to meet Lady Katherine, who has spurned him, encounters Villon, her admirer.

The story progresses into a web of many involvements. Villon kills the traitorous grand marshal of France. The king makes Villon the grand marshal and, in a moment of wry humor, also makes him king—but only for a day and with the stipulation that Villon shall order himself hanged after his day of glory.

As the grand marshal, Villon and Katherine pledge their love. Later, humiliated to discover that she has given her love to the Vagabond King she renounces her pledge. The final scene takes place at the gallows. At the foot of the gallows Katherine conquers her pride and testifies to her willingness to marry Villon. The king spares Villon and the operetta comes to a close with the singing of the beautiful "Only a Rose" and the stirring "Song of the Vagabonds."

IGOR GORIN TO BE GUEST ON W-G-N SYMPHONIC HOUR

Pledge to Flag on the Program Tonight.

Songs by Igor Gorin, noted Viennese concert baritone, and the world radio première of one of the most unusual compositions in American music will feature the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour, to be heard from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the network of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

The première will be that of the musical expression of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, composed especially for Gorin by Albert Hay Melotte. Melotte is the former Chicago organist who became famous as a composer of sacred music, including that for the Lord's Prayer and the Twenty-Third Psalm.

Col. McCormick to Speak.

Marion Claire, lovely operatic soprano, will sing three times on the Symphonic hour. Among the songs Miss Claire has selected are the ever popular "Ave Maria" and the finale from "Thais" by Massenet.

The speaker of the evening will be Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE. Henry Weber will conduct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra.

The complete program:

Scene and Farandole from Capricio Espagnole............Rimsky-Korsakov
Orchestra.
[a] Organ Grinder................Schubert
[b] Ave Maria................Bach-Gounod
Miss Claire, W-G-N chorus, orchestra.
Scherzo from Radia Symphony...A. Hoffman
Orchestra.
Tannhauser March....................Wagner
Chorus and orchestra.
Address..............................
Col. Robert R. McCormick.
Finale from Thais....................Massenet
Miss Claire and orchestra.
Concerto Grosso......................Locatelli
Orchestra.
Largo al Factotum from Barber of Seville..........................Rossini
Igor Gorin and orchestra.
Allegiance to Flag....................Melotte
Igor Gorin, chorus, and orchestra.

Gorin will be remembered by W-G-N listeners as one of the stars of the "Student Prince" and "Blossom Time" in the spring operetta series featuring Miss Claire as the regular soloist.

Becomes American Citizen.

After his Chicago engagements Gorin went to California and became a citizen of the United States. The oath of citizenship and the patriotic pledge of allegiance to the flag impressed him deeply. Last Thursday night, after attending the In Chicago Tonight program and hearing its patriotic finale, Gorin recalled these impressions to William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. The baritone told of the special music Melotte had written, and Gorin's appearance on the Symphonic Hour was quickly arranged.

The singer is interrupting his concert tour to make this W-G-N appearance.

Milton Berle Is Guest on Show of the Week

With Milton Berle as guest comedian, Buddy Clark as master of ceremonies and soloist, and Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, the 1940-'41 edition of the Show of the Week will have its première from 5:30 to 6 p. m. today over W-G-N and the Mutual network. The show will feature a new guest comedian each week.

'Nina Rosa' Selections Slated by Northerners

Six swift-paced selections from the popular "Nina Rosa," by Sigmund Romberg, will be presented on the Northerners program from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Tuesday over W-G-N. Irene Verner, soprano, will sing "Fraquita's Serenade," by Franz Lehar, for her solo.

ROCKNE PICTURE PREMIERE ON IN CHICAGO TONIGHT

Bob Hope.

The broadcast will run from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Before the microphone as master of ceremonies will be Bob Hope, screen and radio comedian; Pat O'Brien, who plays the Rockne rôle in the film; Gale Page, cast as Mrs. Rockne; Donald Crisp and Ronald Regan also in the picture. Kate Smith, radio favorite, who will broadcast her own show from Notre Dame Friday, will be heard on the W-G-N show.

Switch to Notre Dame.

The program will begin with the "Chicago" theme by the W-G-N chorus from the Chicago studios. Then listeners will be taken to the dining hall on the Notre Dame campus, where more than 1,000 persons will be gathered for the National Rockne Week banquet.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, will direct the "In Chicago Tonight" presentation. The program will be one of the monthly "movie night" shows, the most elaborate yet presented.

South Bend, a city around 100,000, is preparing to handle 200,000 visitors for the première and attendant ceremonies. The first showing of the picture will be Friday, Oct. 4, when it will open at four South Bend theaters. Notre Dame will begin the football season Saturday against Stagg's College of the Pacific team.

Pause in Chicago Thursday.

The movie stars will pass thru Chicago, cross roads for the nation's entertainers, on Thursday aboard a special train and will get into South Bend late Thursday afternoon. Bacher will immediately begin acquainting them with their parts in the W-G-N-Mutual broadcast. A special writer commissioned by the Warner studios will assist the W-G-N writers in rounding out the show.

Dilemma Complicates Plot of Linda's First Love

A new dilemma confronts Linda Crockett in this week's episodes of "Linda's First Love," daytime serial, when wealthy Mrs. Woodruff, Linda's former mother-in-law, offers to provide room and board in her own home for the debt-laden Crockett family. When pride forces the Crocketts to refuse, Mrs. Woodruff delivers an unpleasant ultimatum. The Crocketts' solution to their problem will be depicted next week Monday thru Friday from 10:45 to 11 a. m. over W-G-N.

In Rockne Show

Pat O'Brien, who plays Knute Rockne in the movie of the famous coach's life, will be heard on "In Chicago Tonight" when the program is broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual from South Bend during the world premiere of the Rockne picture next Thursday.

Jane Wyman, another screen notable, also will be heard on the "In Chicago Tonight" broadcast Thursday from the Notre Dame campus.

SAFETY POSTERS TO WARN WALKERS

NEW CHURCHES ARE CHALLENGE TO DISBELIEF

Both Erected Out of Community Faith.

BY GLADYS PRIDDY.

The Rev. A. G. Hoffmann.

Columbus Manor's two new churches are material challenges to those who believe the old-time religion vanished with circuit riders and black cashmere Sunday-go-to-meeting dresses. The structures are humble frame buildings, but they've been erected out of the faith, hopes, and hearts of the residents of the community along 95th street, west of Oak Lawn. They've been built by men and women who have been willing to share their homebuilding funds with the church.

The churches are the Columbus Manor Bible and Faith Evangelical Lutheran. The former, tho incomplete, is already in use. It is served by ministers of all denominations, and it will be dedicated some time this fall. The Lutheran church is almost complete, and it will be dedicated next Sunday. Part of the dedicatory service will be the ordination of its pastor, the Rev. A. G. Hoffmann.

Both Buildings White.

Both buildings are white; both were begun this summer; both are on lots donated by members. The undenominational church antedates the other as a group. It began really as a Sunday school. The children used to meet in the A. C. Adams garage. Then the adults began taking part, and finally there were church services at the school.

The church was not incorporated until early last spring. Meetings continued in the school, but with the outlook of 100 new houses in Columbus Manor this summer, members knew the school would be crowded.

Mrs. C. A. Scrogan gave the land at 9530 South Merton avenue as a memorial to her husband. The lot is 45x125 feet. The corner stone was laid May 5. The $5,000 for the structure has been raised by subscription and personal loans. The building is slightly larger than the Faith church. It will seat 140 to 150.

Organized Last Year.

Faith Lutheran church Sunday school was formally organized Oct. 22 last year. Mrs. Edward Desmond Sr., canvassed the community and found 40 Lutheran families there. She wrote her information to the Lutheran radio hour, and the result was a Lutheran mission, set up by the Missouri synod, with 22 charter members. Meetings were in the basement of the Edwin Hoppe home at 9530 Merrimac avenue. The congregation itself was organized last April and accepted by the synod in June. Mr. and Mrs. Hoppe donated the lots at 97th street and Melvina avenue, where ground was broken last July 4. The Rev. Ernest T. Blau, pastor of Concordia church at Midlothian, developed the missionary enterprise.

This building, too, has cost approximately $5,000. The bulk of the work has been on contract, while the men of the congregation have contributed such handiwork as they could. The auditorium seats 125, and there is a basement recreation room.

Women Lend Aid.

Women of the congregation stained the pews, bought second hand, and the pastor's mother, Mrs. Alber H. Hoffmann Sr. of 5410 Rice street, donated the velvet hangings for the altar.

Next Sunday's dedicatory service will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The Rev. A. H. Semmann of Park Ridge, chairman of the mission board, will officiate.

PLAN TO MAKE BLUE ISLAND A PEONY SUBURB

Rotarians Take Lead in Beautification Idea.

Chicagoland flower lovers have long associated peonies with Blue Island. Every year gardeners from the city and suburbs and from many distant points go to the see the peonies blooming on the grounds of the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Napier. Now all of Blue Island is to follow the Napiers' lead and become peony conscious. Nearly every one is going to plant a peony bed or two.

Martin Rohe, president of the Blue Island Rotary club, introduced the idea. He explains: "I think I first considered the possibility when I read a magazine article about a town that made itself well known by some flower or other. I've forgotten the town and forgotten the flower, but I've been thinking for a long while that Blue Island might do the same thing. I suggested peonies when I introduced the idea to the club, because the Napiers have already made Blue Island known for that flower."

Plan a Peony Class.

The Rotary community service committee—Zephiere Pepin, J. T. Knowles, and Philip Seyfarth—is busy planning a peony class. There, beginning peony growers will learn how to divide a bulb, how deep to plant it these warm fall days and what to do about it next spring. They'll also learn about varieties best suited to the soil and climate of Blue Island. They'll be told to put the flowers where the sun shines—for at least half the day.

The city has been divided into sections for the peony work. There is a division for gas stations, another for churches, and another for parfis. The schools are in a group alone, and the doctors are included with the St. Francis hospital plans. The community service committee will appoint a Rotarian to head each division.

Next spring, when the green shoots come up from the bulb which has wintered under the snow and ice, Rotarians will add greater impetus to making Blue Island a peony center by organizing a garden contest.

Each Will Decide Color.

Colors of the blooms will be decided by the individual gardeners. Rohe says he expects that nearly every one will have a plentiful sprinkling of the old fashioned pink and red blossoms that flourished in the days when lots of persons called them "pineys."

The Rotary club is now shopping for bulbs. Cost of launching the project is to be kept as low as possible, so that every one will be able to buy as many bulbs as he can plant and tend.

Mr. Rohe, who lives at 12920 Elm street in the suburb and is an insurance broker, says that one trouble with the whole plan is that he and his fellow Rotarians have jobs! "We do have to get to work daytimes," he says, "and it kind of interferes with our peony pioneering!"

1,053 REPORTS FILED IN BOOK READING GAME

Chicago Lawn branch of the Chicago public library has completed the summer's celebration of the 500th anniversary of printing with a record of 1,053 reports from children enrolled in the reading games. More than 100 youngsters qualified for the recent birthday party by reading and reporting not fewer than six books. Margaret Dawson, 6129 South Albany avenue, Hubbard branch student, led all readers by reporting on 36 books. Second was June Murys of Hubbard Elementary school with 31 books, and third, Gladys Chapin, Morrill Elementary school, with 30 reports.

Rescued Flag Called Lesson in Patriotism

A STORY OF AMERICA

The Metropolitan section plans a series of stories on incidents which have made those involved conscious of their love of country and the many blessings which America bestows upon its citizens. Readers are invited to submit suggestions concerning such incidents which have touched themselves or others. Address The Metropolitan Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Harold E. Giroux.

It was late in the afternoon on the Fourth of July 30 years ago. The parade had swept past Oakley avenue and Madison street, leaving in its wake a litter of firecracker paper, peanut shells, and red, white, and blue bunting.

A 12 year old boy stood beside his newsstand shouting his papers. The parade with its blaring bugles and rolling drums was over and the watchers and stragglers were going home. One of the passersby was a civil war veteran, a man about 60 years old, wearing the G. A. R. uniform with the soft blue campaign hat trimmed in gold cord.

Veteran Recovers the Flag.

From across the street the boy saw the veteran stoop and pick out of the gutter a small penny American flag that some one in the parade had dropped. He hauled out a huge handkerchief from his pocket and carefully, tenderly wiped away the mudstains. Then he crossed the street and stood the little flag upright on the newsstand.

That happened 30 years ago. The boy, since grown to manhood, himself a veteran of the world war, has never forgotten that scene. He is Harold E. Giroux, 841 Barry avenue.

"I'll never forget that incident as long as I live," he says. "For me it is an emblem of the American ideal of freedom as symbolized by the flag.

Always Keep Flag Aloft.

"After placing the flag on the stand he explained to me why he had picked it up. He told me of the tradition of the American army of never letting the colors drop, how when the color bearer in battle falls the nearest soldier rushes to take his place, holding the Stars and Stripes aloft.

"You see, my grandparents used to talk to me about freedom, how America provided an opportunity to believe as you pleased, worship as you pleased. America, they told me, stood for those things, and that the American flag was its symbol of freedom. The G. A. R. veteran brought home to me the love for the flag.

"In those days we didn't have Americanism or civics classes in our schools, but this incident served as a complete course in Americanism for me. I can still see that G. A. R. veteran as he talked to me, tall, erect, proud, his Van Dyke beard neatly trimmed, his uniform spotless."

Influenced His Entire Life.

This incident, Mr. Giroux believes, influenced his whole adult life. Ever since he came home from the war he has engaged in civic and patriotic affairs. All his spare time he spends in aiding his community, serving on committees, and taking part in American Legion activities.

Mr. Giroux is a member of 44 committees and organizations. And he is an active member of most of them. The greater part of his committee work he transacts by mail and phone. A few of the organizations and the offices he holds in them include Harold A. Taylor post of the American Legion; 6th District American Legion; member of Voiture 220, The Forty and Eight; president of United States Army Base Hospital association; troop committeeman, Boy Scouts of America; executive committee member, Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A.; public relations committee member, Nonsectarian League for Americanism; secretary of the citizens' civic committee of Lake View; president, Lake View Community council; chairman, education committee for Lake View, and chairman of the new public library committee for Lake View.

DANGER POINTS ON SO. SIDE TO BE PLACARDED

Aim to Cut Traffic Death Toll.

Safety posters, illustrating elementary rules for the protection of pedestrians, will be placed at the south side's most dangerous intersections this week. The posters have been exhibited at corners in the loop for the last few weeks as the first step in the pedestrian safety campaign sponsored by Mayor Kelly and city officials, civic and business leaders and the Chicago Motor club. The latter furnished the designs.

The campaign is a concerted effort to reduce Chicago's traffic death toll of approximately 500 persons annually. Last year the box score read: Pedestrians killed in traffic accidents, 502; pedestrians injured, 8,755; complete death toll of both motorists and pedestrians, 696; total injured, 22,597.

The decision to place the posters at south side neighborhood intersections which have the worst traffic accident records was made last week at a joint meeting of all area councils of the Motor club attended by city officials. Ald. George D. Kells [28th], chairman of the city council committee on traffic and public safety, and Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer, approved the proposal.

Where They'll Be Placed.

The corners which will receive the posters are: 63d-Cottage Grove, 63d-Halsted, 47th-Ashland, 71st-South Chicago-Cottage Grove, 79th-Cottage Grove, 92d-Commercial, 67th-Stony Island, 43d-South Park, 43d-Michigan, 79th-Stony Island-South Chicago, and 31st-State.

All, with the exception of 63d-Halsted, 47th-Ashland, and 92d-Commercial, were chosen from the Motor club's list of the 20 high accident corners in this section of the city which club engineers are studying. The three mentioned will receive posters because they are heavily traveled by pedestrians and have heavily marked accident records.

Speakers at the meeting agreed that education was one of the most important weapons they could use in trying to reduce the jaywalking pedestrian trouble. Chairman Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out that the campaign was necessary, inasmuch as three-fourths of Chicago's annual traffic fatality victims are walkers.

Expect Death Reduction.

He predicted that the posters will result in checking deaths and injuries among adult pedestrians, just as education and supervision among children of grade school age has effected a tremendous reduction of casualties in that age group.

He said that now probably was the best time for the launching of a safety campaign, since October, November, and December are the worst months for accidents to persons on foot. The typical pedestrian who is struck on city streets, he added, is a man over 55 years of age who drives a car only occasionally, if at all.

In requesting that the posters be placed at the locations named, J. G. Strader, chairman of the south area council, expressed the desire of the council that these high pedestrian accident intersections be given first consideration, since they represent important hubs of community life. Ald. Kells urged council members to do all in their power to gain the coöperation of other civic organizations.

City Officials Aid.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th] and Ald. Joseph S. Gillespie [29th], members of Mayor Kelly's traffic safety committee, commented that the drive was receiving the full coöperation of city officials.

South siders attending the meeting were Walter S. Bednarski, South Chicago Citizens' club; Riley A. Bender, West Lawn Improvement association; R. B. Dean, Stony Island Park Civic association; Fred Henderson, Southtown Planning association.

SO. WEST SCOUTS ARE ADVANCED TO EAGLE RANK

They are Lyle Thomas Beard, 440 Normal parkway, troop 686, and Chester Burnoski, 3116 West 39th place, troop 431, as winners of the eagle rank, highest in scouting.

Palms for winning more than 21 merit badges required for eagle rank were awarded recently to the following southwest district residents: William Siebert, scoutmaster of troop 610; Charles Radke, troop 629; Wilbur Kelso, assistant scoutmaster of troop 686, and Richard Paulsen, Blue Island, troop 687.

THE GARBAGE REMAINS.

We get a little tired of all the cleanup campaigns out here back of the yards. As individuals, we can do just so much. Then we need a little help by way of city coöperation. When an area is as congested as this one is, it follows what there is more débris, more refuse, more garbage. The more dirt to be picked up, the oftener it should be done. But you should see our alleys! Refuse is stacked high. Our garbage cans—and a good many of us do have them—would have to be the size of village water tanks to hold all of our waste that accumulates between garbage wagon trips. We wait as long as two weeks for our trash to be picked up. And two weeks supply of decaying food is good rat bait anytime. What's more, our trash is set out so long before it is gathered up, it is often scattered by the time the truck arrives. Therefore, while we are all in favor of more garbage cans, why not more frequent garbage collections too?
B. G.

INFREQUENT GARBAGE COLLECTIONS.

"Rid the city of rats."

Of course it is a great idea and people should be compelled to have garbage cans but how about the 9th precinct of the 19th ward where I am a resident?

There is not a house or an apartment without a garbage can and all I have seen are equipped with good, secure tops, but what does that accomplish? The garbage is collected only once in two two weeks [at present it lacks two days of being three weeks] and the garbage bulges out and the cover cannot be shut securely, thereby giving the rats a good feast.

We do our share by having a good garbage can, wrapping all g a r b a g e in paper, and do everything possible to rid ourselves of rats, but I ask you, if the city won't coöperate how can we rid the city of rats?

FOREST BOARD FILES TAX LEVY 6 MONTHS LATE

Will County May Need Legislative Aid.

For some perverse reason people insist on trying to destroy good American superstitions. They work especially hard on Friday the 13th, when they seem to go out of their way to seek good luck and happy things happen to them. There is one group of men, however, that maintained the day's custom and did a thoro job of it.

That group is the 40 supervisors who compose the board of the Will county forest preserve district. On Friday the 13th they held their September meeting and established a budget of $16,139.87. Just the other day they were notified from Springfield that they had filed the tax levy more than six months too late.

Not Aware of Deadline.

An amendment to the forest preserve district act in 1939 fixed March 28 as the last day for levying taxes. Someone slipped up and failed to notify the Will county forest preserve board. So when the supervisors gathered they filed their tax needs for 1940-'41 without knowing that their period of grace was long past.

In an opinion written for State's Attorney James E. Burke by Attorney General John E. Cassidy at Springfield, it was stated that the levy was illegal in as much as it was late, and Cassidy further said that the levy would likely remain invalid unless some special act of the legislature authorized it.

Hope No One Objects.

The commissioners are now at a loss as to where their money will come from to pay for the upkeep of the forest preserve district and the salary of the supervisors. Their plan at present is to push the levy thru, filing it with the county clerk, and trust that they will be given the money without any citizen questioning it. However if some taxpayer objects, and does so legally, the commissioners will have to appeal to the legislature.

GUNS OF G. O. P. ARE TRAINED ON THIRD DISTRICT

Congress Fight Is Led by W. J. Roehler.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Stirred by reinvigorated Republicans with the gleam of anticipated victory in their eyes, the political pot in the six congressional districts of southern and southwestern Chicagoland simmered merrily last week.

The large 3d, which takes in most of southern Cook county, during the week joined the group of districts in which are afoot the most ambitious plans of recent years for ousting incumbent Democrats.

Forces in the 3d are led by Waldemar J. Roehler, young and agressive former west parks commissioner, who won a well fought primary battle for the Republican congressional nomination in the district this year.

He has been joined in the campaign by his primary rival, Goodwin L. Dosland, and the strong group that backed Dosland's candidacy. This combination adds up to a headache for the 3d district incumbent, Edward A. Kelly.

Cuts Into Plurality.

Dosland, the nominee two years ago, in that election almost halved Kelly's 1936 plurality of 50,000. A shift of less than 2½ per cent of the 227,954 votes cast in the district that year could have elected the G. O. P. candidate. Republican leaders say a much greater change than that has occurred.

Roehler, in his appearances before precinct and civic groups, is attacking what he describes as the futility of New Deal experiments, and promises to fight in congress for a more business like conduct of national government.

He declared last week that he plans to vote for Wendell L. Willkie for President because a vote for the present administration is an indorsement of its defeat in its efforts to remedy the country's business ills.

"No loyal American should vote for a continuance of such failure in executive and legislative policies," Roehler said. "It is a simple statement of truth that in little business as well as big business the New Deal has retarded initiative on the part of the individual.

Fear and Uncertainty.

"It has established fear and uncertainty in the hearts of employers of labor. It has intimidated the job makers as well as discouraged job hunters.

"With all other arguments and issues brushed aside, these facts alone are sufficient to call for a change in administrative affairs of the nation."

Greater efficiency is a particularly pressing need just now, because of the situation abroad that demands speedy defense activity by our nation, Roehler said.

Temperatures rose perceptibly last week in the already hot race in the 1st district. In this district, which includes the downtown section as well as the large colored population of the near south side, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell and Former State Senator William E. King are the principals.

Accuses His Rival.

King, a Republican, charged that his rival, the Democratic incumbent, "finds his chief support in an unholy atmosphere." He attacked the political alliance between Mitchell and "his political boss," Former Ald. William L. Dawson, who was a Republican until he became Democratic committeeman of the 2d ward last year.

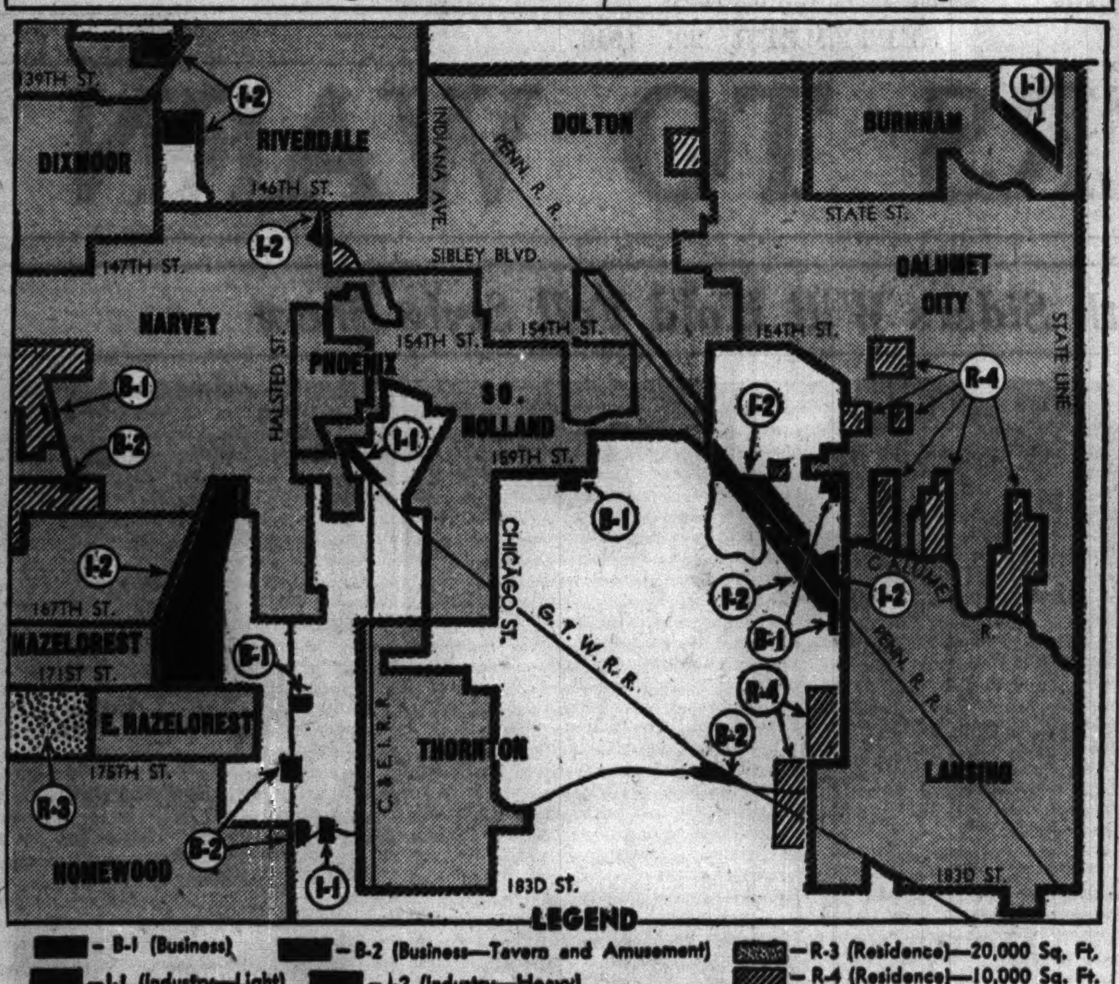
"Dawson is supporting the present congressman with certain reservations and suspicions," King said. "Dawson's indorsement of Mitchell is a kind of forced support, because he realizes that the congressman is more of a liability than an asset.

"Mitchell in his speeches constantly boasts not of his allegiance to the 1st congressional district and the people of his own race [both candidates are colored], but of his political devotion to the philosophy of southern senators and representatives who dictate his vote in congress."

St. Bride's Society.

The first meeting of St. Bride's Altar and Rosary society will take place Friday afternoon in the St. Bride's school hall.

Fix Zoning Rules for Thornton Township



Protection for farms and country homes is provided in the zoning ordinance passed recently by the Cook county board. The map of Thornton township shows the various areas allotted to farming, residence, business, and industry. The zoning ordinance also provides zoning protection to those who live on the edges of towns and villages.

VILLAGES UNITE FOR TOWN HALL ON PATRIOTISM

Riverdale and Dolton Sponsor Lectures.

Residents of Riverdale and Dolton are applying self-criticism these days. They are seeking advice and instruction on how to make themselves good Americans. This procedure, they think, is real patriotism. For their project of becoming the best Americans they know how to be, they have organized a Community Patriotic council.

The council program is to be a series of six oldfashioned town hall meetings to be held monthly. The first one will take place at 8 o'clock Friday evening in the Lincoln school auditorium, Dolton. Edward H. Paine of Michigan City, first vice president of the International Association of Lions Clubs, will be the speaker.

Scouts to Take Part.

William J. Claussen, president of the village of Riverdale, and Ira J. Hastings, president of the village of Dolton, will be introduced. They will make the welcome addresses, and the Boy Scouts of the two communities will participate in the patriotic ceremonies.

Admittance to the meeting is free. Claussen and Hastings have issued a joint proclamation urging all residents of both communities to attend. The council is nonsectarian and nonpolitical. The organizing group is made up of representatives from all fraternal organizations, parent-teacher associations, civic and service clubs, church bodies, business and industrial plants in the communities.

Legion Starts Council.

Definite organization of the council followed a patriotic rally arranged by the community relations committee of Paul Gall post of the American Legion.

Officers of the council are: Earl F. Slaughter, chairman; Arthur E. Dillner, vice chairman; Mrs. Della Dean, secretary, and Edmund J. Sullivan, treasurer. Members of the executive board and finance committee are: Sullivan, H. L. Bills, D. C. Bachmann, William Staat, and Emil Kasten. Dillner is chairman of the program and publicity committee with the following members: R. V. Trimble, Mrs. Andrew V. Garry, Mrs. John Matthiesen, L. K. Klitzke, A. E. Werner, and T. M. Kinney.

Back Home to Celebrate

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Osmon, residents of Morris, Ill., until they retired 10 years ago and came to Chicago to live at 2907 North Kenneth avenue, returned to their old home town recently to celebrate on their golden wedding day. While they held open house at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Ray Bannon, 318 East Jefferson street, in Morris, their neighbors across the street, Mr. and Mrs. William Robinson, also observed their golden anniversary.

NEIGHBORS NOTE GOLDEN JUBILEE AT SAME TIME

It was a double golden wedding day down in Morris, Ill., recently when the Joseph H. Osmons and the William Robinsons, old friends and neighbors, celebrated their 50th anniversaries at the same time.

Mr. and Mrs. Osmon, who now live at 2907 North Kenneth avenue, observed their anniversary at an open house in the home of their daughter, Mrs. Ray E. Bannon, 318 East Jefferson street, Morris. At the same time the Robinsons were holding open house across the street, 319 East Jefferson street.

Mr. Osmon was born in Kendall county on March 30, 1869. His wife, the former Cecilia Marvick, was born in Grundy county on March 1 of the same year. They were married in Morris on Sept. 17, 1890, and farmed in the community until they retired a decade ago.

They have three children — Mrs. Bannon, Earl A. Osmon of 4041 North Kedvale avenue, and Russell M. Osmon of 2907 North Kenneth avenue. There are eight grandchildren.

The Robinsons are longtime residents of Morris. Mr. Robinson is a former clerk of Grundy county. He has been a member of the Oddfellow lodge for 55 years, and he has been a Morris fireman for 53 years. The Robinsons have two daughters—Ruth at home, and Mrs. Tom Fletcher, also of Morris.

BARNARD SCHOOL PRINCIPAL ENDS TEACHING CAREER

Mrs. Edna Meyers to Be Feted at Dinner.

A career in education which began with a trip to the 1893 World's Fair closed a week ago when Mrs. Edna R. Meyers, principal of the Barnard school at 10354 Charles street, retired. Mrs. Meyers has done both elementary and high school teaching in Chicago and she was asked to initiate the individual method of instruction at the Lewis-Champlin school which was the first experimental school in the city.

Mrs. Meyers came to Chicago in 1892 when her father, Dr. Albert Richardson, gave up a country practice to bring his family to the city to see the World's Fair and send his girls to the University of Chicago.

The Richardsons settled in Englewood. Mrs. Meyers was graduated from Englewood High school in 1895, and she went from there to Cook County Normal school where she studied under the leadership of Col. Francis W. Parker, a pioneer in the reform of elementary education.

Goes to St. Louis.

Cook County Normal drew many visitors, and among them was Mrs. Fannie Lachmund, principal of a private school in St. Louis. She invited two members of the graduating class to join her faculty. One was Edna Richardson. After two years in St. Louis she returned to Chicago to teach at the Chicago Latin school on the near north side. She remained there 10 years.

When she was married to Ira Benton Meyers of the University of Chicago, she moved into the university neighborhood, and she taught in the school of education for a year and continued her own training. Twins interrupted her teaching; so did a daughter and a son later on. Four children made it necessary to find plenty of play space, and the family moved to their present home at 10224 Prospect avenue.

Mrs. Meyers became a housewife for a period, but the illness and death of her husband brought her back to teaching. She found a position in Morgan Park, not then incorporated in the city.

Becomes a Principal.

Successively she was assistant principal of Arlington and Western avenue schools, a teacher at Englewood High school, and principal at Jacob Riis and West Pullman schools. In 1931 she was placed in charge of the Lewis-Champlin school, first experimental school in the city system, after a year's leave of absence to study similar schools in New York and Boston.

The individual method of instruction, developed by James E. McDade, assistant superintendent of schools, at Wentworth school, was installed. The course of study was organized into units of work. Later the Barnard school under Ray Bixler and the Joyce Kilmer under Dr. Grace E. Munson were added to the experimental group of schools.

Mrs. Meyers went to Barnard in 1935 when the adjustment-teacher program was being started. Barnard was one of the first 10 schools to adopt the plan. Mrs. Meyers has guided the Barnard pupils thru the period following the fire which destroyed their building last February. The lower grades are housed in portables on the school grounds, and a branch for the upper grades is operated at Sutherland school.

Friends and professional associates of Mrs. Meyers are giving a testimonial dinner for her on Oct. 16 at the Shoreland hotel.

Mothers to Meet.

De La Salle Mother's club will hold a business meeting in the school library Thursday afternoon. A program will be presented by Marie Gifford, home economist. Mrs. John Harris is president of the club.

Principal Retires

Mrs. Edna R. Meyers retired last week after a teaching career which included more than 30 years of service in both private and public schools. She has been principal of the Barnard public school since 1935 and resides at 10224 Prospect avenue.

REPEAT WEDDING VOWS THEY TOOK 60 YEARS AGO

S. Side Always Home of F. J. Schmitzes.

Sixty years together, 60 years on Chicago's south side, and 60 years of memories were celebrated when Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Schmitz of 9045 South Claremont avenue observed their anniversary recently.

They went to the altar of Christ the King church, 92d and South Hoyne avenue, to say again the vows they took six decades ago in St. Anthony church, which was then located at 24th and Canal streets. The bridegroom was in the hardware business, a field in which he remained active until he retired five years ago.

Came from Germany.

Mr. Schmitz came to this country from his native Ormund, Germany, when he was 10 years old. He came with his family to settle in the gangling, growing-up city of Chicago. Almost from the first, he worked. There were the little jobs that school boys get to do. Then, school days over, there was the first steady job. It was in a factory at 33 South Water street where girls put tacks into nickel packages and young Schmitz printed the labels for the packages.

He met his future wife, then Anna Literscheid, whose family had moved to Chicago from Mendota, at a party. In fact, he met her when she sat in his lap! She had left her chair for a moment; he sat in it. She returned, and without looking, sat down—on her future husband.

In Hardware Business.

Mr. Schmitz was in the hardware business at 22d street and Archer avenue for many years, and later at 92d street and Commercial avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Schmitz have two daughters and one son, Mrs. John F. Dillenburg, with whom they make their home; Mrs. Elmer D. Steffen of 9047 South May street, and J. J. Schmitz, 8250 Elizabeth street. They lost five of their first six children in a single year. All died in a black diphtheria epidemic. Their son survived, and later Mrs. Dillenburg and Mrs. Steffen were born.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my riding lessons had been given in the socalled English type of park saddle. My riding instructor, Elmer J. Holdorf, assured me, however, that at most stables I could obtain virtually any type of saddle I desired.

There are three main types of saddle in use in Chicago area riding stables, I learned. Each has its advantages and its drawbacks.

The saddle most familiar to the average American, and much in demand in livery, particularly at the low cost riding stables, is the western, or cowboy saddle, with its deep seat, large knee roll and distinctive horn.

This is primarily a work saddle, designed to afford ample comfort and protection for all day riding, and strong and sturdy enough to stand up under the strain of cow roping and the constant assault of hot sun or drenching rain.

Popular for Novices.

It is popular among novice riders both because it is the saddle of the picturesque cowboy and because its depth and knee swell impart a feeling of security to the rider who has not learned proper balance without such artificial aids.

Some of the disadvantages of the western saddle for bridle path riding are that it is hot in summer, the built-out knee swell tend to spread the legs uncomfortably, and the convenient horn is a constant temptation to "pull leather" in an emergency, which is bad riding.

Somewhat similar to the western is the McClellan saddle, a skeletonized modification of the cowboy type, developed by Gen. George B. McClellan of civil war fame, and once used widely in the army. This type is still regulation for the Chicago mounted police.

It also has the high, enveloping cantle and pommel, but is without the flaring knee roll. Its most distinctive characteristic is the open ventilating slit running lengthwise of the seat, which, rightly or wrongly, is reputed to be easy on the horse but hard on the rider.

Lacks Leg Fender.

Like the western, the McClellan is often used with covered stirrups, but it lacks the heavy sudadero or leg fender that is characteristic of the cowboy saddle.

The English or park saddle is characterized by its relatively flat seat, and its light, cutaway construction generally.

Most bridle path riders prefer it, I was told, because it affords a comfortable foundation unobstructed by large projections that interfere with the legs or lower torso. This saddle gives full play to the rider who takes pride in maintaining good form on horseback thru sheer skill and sense of balance. Moreover, it is by far the most comfortable saddle in warmer weather.

I find considerable controversy over whether the western or the park saddle is best for long periods on horseback.

One group holds that cowboys, who virtually live in the saddle, choose the western type because it distributes the body weight more evenly over the rider's seat and has other comfort features. If it weren't best, the cowboys would pick something else, they argue.

To this argument the English saddle crowd replies that the United States cavalry, which also spends much time in the saddle, has adopted a type that is an adaptation of the English saddle.

Plans 100 Mile Ride.

I shall soon have an opinion based on experience, for I have just been assigned to take the third annual Chicagoland 100-mile trail ride next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, which is described more fully in an accompanying story.

My saddle will be the English type, for which I have developed a lively preference during this lesson series. By the time I have ridden more than 100 miles in some 17 hours, I shall know better than any verbal argument can tell me whether the park saddle is practical for long rides.

I shall know, too, incidentally, just how much I have gained from my course of instruction by Holdorf, which is now coming to an end.

100 MILE TRAIL RIDE IS TEST OF SKILL IN SADDLE

Riders from several states will participate in the three-day annual Chicagoland 100 mile trail ride that will start from the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest next Friday. The ride, a test of straightaway horsemanship, is sponsored by the Town and Country Equestrian association and the Horse and Mule Association of America.

Entrants include men and women from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa, according to Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule association. It is expected that even more states will be represented before the entries close early this week, Dinsmore said. The list will close when 100 entries have been received.

Each day's ride will start and end at Onwentsia. Riders will cover about 40 miles in seven to eight hours the first day, a similar stretch in equal time the second day, and 20 miles in three hours on the final day.

BETHEL CHURCH TO OPEN GOLDEN JUBILEE TODAY

Youth Rally Is First Service in Series.

A youth rally at 10:15 o'clock this morning at Bethel Evangelical Lutheran church, 6200 South Peoria street, will be the first event in a series of golden jubilee programs. Members of the church have planned anniversary meetings thruout the month, according to announcement from the Rev. C. Emil Bergquist.

The Rev. Gilbert Bengston of Lockport will preach at this morning's rally. Ceremonies planned for the service include cradle roll graduation, installation of teachers, officers, and stewarts, and baptism. The youth rally will be the second of the day's events at the church. Earlier, at 8:45 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Bergquist will conduct a Swedish service.

Started in Home.

Bethel's beginning in Englewood is said to have been on Good Friday, 1889, when the first Lutheran service was held at the home of Peter August Carlson at 67th and Peoria streets. After 18 months the Rev. A. S. Becklund was designated by the Conference Mission board to organize a congregation. On Oct. 17, 1890, Dr. M. C. Ranseen, president of the Illinois Conference of the Augustana Synod, presided at a meeting wherein 33 charter members were enrolled. The Rev. Mr. Becklund stayed at Bethel until 1899. He was replaced by Dr. A. P. Fors who was pastor until the fall of 1928 when he was succeeded by the incumbent, the Rev. Mr. Bergquist.

The church now has 825 communicants. Deacons are: Carl F. Johnson, C. E. Burgeson, John Swanson, Roy Johnson, Carl Wahlen, John Carlson, Iver Pearson, R. T. Sandin, and James J. Nelson. Trustees are: J. E. Lindquist, Gust Larson, A. H. Ahlberg, Arvid Grell, J. L. Pearson, Ellis T. Hessell, Melvin Olson, Fred Johnson, and John A. Burgeson.

Speakers Are Listed.

The Rev. Granger Westberg, a Bethel confirmand, will preach at next Sunday morning's 10:45 o'clock service. The minister on Oct. 13 will be Dr. Oscar Benson, president of the Illinois Conference of the Augustana Synod. On Oct. 20, Dr. L. G. Abrahamson of Rock Island, one of the pastors who conducted union meetings which preceded Bethel's formal organization, will be in charge of the Swedish service from 8:45 to 9:45 o'clock in the morning. At 7 o'clock on the evening of Oct. 20 Bethel confirmands will meet for a reunion and fellowship hour in the church school rooms. Holy communion and reception of new members will take place at 10:45 o'clock in the morning on Oct. 27.

A jubilee banquet is planned for Oct. 17 at the Shoreland hotel with the Rev. Otto Groth of the American Lutheran conference as speaker. Ellis Hessell is in charge of reservations.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Sept. 30.

This is the time when the entire garden area should be in tiptop condition. Store all bird houses, garden furniture, and tools. Before the tools are stored they should be greased and oiled. The lawn mower, if not to be used again, should have all clippings removed and the parts thoroly cleaned and oiled. Later the accessories can be repaired, if needed, and exposed parts given a coat of paint. Fences should always be kept in condition; remove annual vines that have died down, and trim back woody growths.

Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Do not overplant the yard with shrubs, especially if the area is small. Shrubs planted too close together are certain to require much pruning to preserve a semblance of their form and beauty. Replace all poor soil with good soil, no matter what kind of plant is used. Use dwarf plants under low windows.

Enclose or screen the garage, if possible, with good shrubs. A lombardy poplar will serve to screen the telephone post in the rear. A wire fence covered with morning glories or other suitable vines will hide the alley from view.

Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Now that the house plants are indoors give them daily attention. A bit of plant food scattered on the surface of the soil in which Christmas cacti are growing will aid in the formation of buds. Adopt a regular spraying program to keep house plants free from all pests. Syringe at least once a week with clear water from the hose under pressure of the fingers. This will aid in keeping down the pests.

Thursday, Oct. 3.

Tomatoes will ripen if gathered before a hard frost, or the entire plant, with fruits attached, can be hung up in a light shed and the fruit will ripen. Eggplant and peppers should be gathered before frost touches them. Lettuce can be protected from light frosts by covering with hay or other material.

Friday, Oct. 4.

Be sure to prepare the ground well for bulbs because they will do much better. Bulbs are higher in price this season, but the gardener will find that American grown stock will give fine effects as garden subjects. They require, however, a longer time to flower when forced.

Saturday, Oct. 5.

If one admires red flowers a few pots of the smaller scarlet sage may be dug and potted. They will last a long time. Do not neglect to lay in a supply of material for mulching newly planted trees, shrubs, perennials, and hardy vines.

Bulb beds also should be mulched to prevent the bulbs from heaving out of the ground during spring thaws. Clean up the iris, removing yellow leaves and all the débris from the bed or border.

NEW EDGEBROOK HOME ARRANGED ON SIMPLE PLAN

Large Bay Windows Give Maximum Light.

BY LOUIS BARGELT.

The desire of a man and a woman for a home of their own is almost fundamental. And lucky are those who can start married life in their own home.

It is as friendly and inviting a home outside as it is livable within. A five room house in the traditional rural French spirit, yet a house essentially modern, with evidence of thoughtful layout, planned for maximum economy, and carefully chosen equipment, and decorations.

The architects are Hooper and Nelson, 118 East 26th street. They have achieved balance, simplicity, and symmetry. There is no feeling here of over-formality, or severity, tho certainly the little home has a great deal of dignity and poise.

Deck Over Garage.

Texture interest is given the exterior by its walls of brick; gray buff with manganese speckles. The trim is white, and the roof a deep blue-black. The large bay windows with their curvatures are well scaled to the exterior of the house and the entrance is of gray limestone. The roof of the attached garage has been made into a deck terrace, and is reached from the master bedroom on the second floor.

Inside you find a generous sized living room at the left of the entrance hall, with adjoining terrace. There is a traditional mantelpiece with stone facing and hearth. The placement of the dining room, at the right of entrance hall, separates it from the living portion, and the central location of stairs to second floor not only makes for economy but also conserves outside light for habitable rooms.

Red Linoleum in Kitchen.

The powder room and kitchen at the back are carried out in linoleum. The modern kitchen has counter tops of bright red linoleum, and this same red is carried into the gray linoleum floor in a feature strip. Elsewhere on the first floor, there are burgundy colored carpets, pearl gray ceilings, and walls pastel hued.

On the second floor there are two bedrooms, generous closet space, and bath with ceramic tile walls and floor. In the basement there is a forced warm air heating system, gas fueled, with provision for winter air conditioning.

The house fits its irregular site exceptionally well, and the windows of every room look out on pleasant views. They are well placed windows which lend personality to the house [as all good windows do].

GOSPEL GROUP TO HOLD BIBLE MEETING TODAY

The association meets monthly.

"Fundamentalism in Practice" will be the theme.

WILLKIE VISIT STIRS HOPE OF G. O. P. IN 13TH

Aids Chance to Gain Two Seats in Assembly.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Optimism last week pervaded the ranks of Republicans fighting to win two of the three 13th district seats in the Illinois house of representatives. This district, with a population of 382,000, includes wards 7, 8, and 9, and portions of wards 6, 17, and 19.

Ragnar G. Nelson.

Reasons for the upsurge of G. O. P. confidence were varied. They ranged from analyses of recent voting in the territory to the fact that Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, drew large crowds there two weeks ago.

Full coöperation with legislative candidates was pledged at a meeting last week by John T. Dempsey, young new chairman of the Republican Cook county central committee.

Must Have Majority.

"We must elect a real working majority in the house at Springfield so that Dwight H. Green, the next governor of Illinois, will be able to carry out his policies despite pay roller 'resistance,' Dempsey said.

The 13th district G. O. P. nominees, Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg and Ragnar G. Nelson, joined with other house candidates in giving Dempsey a vote of thanks for his attitude.

They also were heartened by an analysis of the April primary vote on their office which showed that the Democrats have slipped substantially since 1938.

Primary Lead Cut.

Schnackenberg and Nelson pointed out the Democratic primary lead was cut by 100,000 votes between 1938 and 1940 [each voter casts three votes for this office].

In April, 1938, the Democrats piled up a total of 239,000 votes for the office, compared with 69,000 for Republicans, a lead of 170,000. But in April of this year the score was 184,000 for the Democrats and 114,000 for the Republicans, a lead of only 70,000.

The Democratic primary leads are subject to shrinkage because of the fact that machine rule is not easily exercised in secret November balloting, leaders said. In 1938 the primary lead of 170,000 was reduced to 21,000 in the November election.

Supported by Labor.

Nelson, who has the indorsement of the Joint Council of the American Federation of Labor, also pointed out that Republicans were elected in the last aldermanic contests in the 6th, 8th, and 9th wards. In the mayoralty election, Dwight Green won in the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th wards.

Representative Schnackenberg, a house member for 20 years, has provided his party with experienced leadership in the "lean years." He has always been in the front lines of the fights against bad legislation.

Of him the nonpartisan Legislative Voters' league said in the primary: "Indorsed. Skill in debate, marked ability, careful study of important measures, and hard work long have made him one of the most valuable members of Chicago's delegation in successive Illinois legislatures." He sponsored the Ward-Schnackenberg parole reform bill.

Signs in ward headquarters of the district bear the names of both Schnackenberg and Nelson, attesting to the care being taken not to lose a seat by a lopsided vote in favor of one G. O. P. candidate.

Democrats in Race.

The two Democrats now holding house seats are John G. Ryan, 1530 East 83d place, a Municipal court bailiff, and Adam S. Mioduski, 8115 South Shore drive, a chiropodist and former agent of the state liquor commission. Of Ryan the L. V. L. said: "Four terms [eight years]. His first terms were better."

The nonpartisan group reported of Mioduski, "His first term failed to justify predictions made on his behalf." He won office as a rebel Democrat but in the house soon donned the harness of the regular organization.

Outfitting Time at Tilden

Outfitting time at Tilden Technical High school as the R. O. T. C. unit gets ready to begin a new year. Clean uniforms and creases in the pants are guaranteed to make a military figure out of any one. Here Sergt. Gene McPhillips lines up with his uniform in hand while Sergt. Edward Lantry gets his coat fitted. Responsibility for a well turned out unit falls to First Lieutenant Arthur Adams, who is a supply officer, and to Capt. FENGER SCHOOL CORPS NOW ON REGIMENT BASIS

Lieut. Col. Gino Nicoli Is in Command.

Working as a regiment due to its increased size, the Fenger High school R. O. T. C. unit will be headed this year by Lieut. Col. Gino Nicoli, with Maj. Albert Becker in second command, and Maj. John Halleran in third command.

'VAGABOND KING' TO OPEN W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Marion Claire, Thibault to Sing Leads Saturday.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The first of the three outstanding musical series which W-G-N will launch this fall will have its première next Saturday evening when Rudolph Friml's "The Vagabond King" is aired on the premier of the Chicago Theater of the Air. The Theater of the Air, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will present outstanding operettas streamlined into one hour productions. They will be aired from 9 to 10 o'clock every Saturday evening.

The second series—concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, directed by Dr. Frederick Stock and with world famous guest soloists—will be launched on Thursday, Oct. 10. And starting Monday, Nov. 4, W-G-N and Mutual will present the productions of the Chicago Opera company.

These new musical features are all in addition to W-G-N's established programs including the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour [Sunday nights]; the Pageant of Melody with Henry Weber and the Concert orchestra [Wednesdays] and In Chicago Tonight [Thursdays] which often features new music as was the case when David Broekman's score to "Ode to Chicago" was presented on Sept. 19.

Marion Claire Is the Star.

Marion Claire, the famous soprano, is to be the star of the Theater of the Air. In "The Vagabond King," she will sing the rôle of Katherine de Vaucelles, a beautiful and high spirited lady of the court.

For the rôle of François Villon, poet and patriot, genius and thief of medieval France, W-G-N will present Conrad Thibault, the American baritone, who made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Grand Opera company. Thibault is widely known to radio listeners for his many network series.

Miss Claire is featured every Sunday evening as soloist of the Symphonic hour. The Theater of the Air will be under the personal direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N and artistic director of the opera, will direct the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus in providing the musical background for the operettas. Double casts will be used with outstanding radio actors taking the dramatic parts.

Splendor and Squalor.

The romantic operetta, marked by its rousing music including the "Song of the Vagabond," is set in the splendor and squalor of medieval Paris. In the thieves' tavern Louis XI. comes to meet Lady Katherine, who has spurned him, encounters Villon, her admirer, lately released from prison.

The story progresses into a web of many involvements. Villon kills the traitorous grand marshal of France. The king makes Villon the grand marshal and, in a moment of wry humor, also makes him king—but only for a day and with the stipulation that Villon shall order himself hanged after his day of glory.

As the grand marshal, Villon and Katherine pledge their love. Later, humiliated to discover that she has given her love to the Vagabond King she renounces her pledge. The final scene takes place at the gallows. At the foot of the gallows Katherine conquers her pride and testifies to her willingness to marry Villon. The king spares Villon and the operetta comes to a close with the singing of the beautiful "Only a Rose" and the stirring "Song of the Vagabonds."

In "Shadow"

Marjorie Anderson, who plays Margot, the Shadow's girl friend in the dramatic show by that name returning to W-G-N-Mutual at 4:30 p. m. today. Bill Johnstone plays the Shadow.

In Rockne Show

Pat O'Brien, who plays Knute Rockne in the movie of the famous coach's life, will be heard on "In Chicago Tonight" when the program is broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual from South Bend during the world premiere of the Rockne picture next Thursday.

Jane Wyman, another screen notable, also will be heard on the "In Chicago Tonight" broadcast Thursday from the Notre Dame campus.

TRIBUNE FASHION SHOW ON W-G-N NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Chicago Tribune's American Fashion Show will broadcast from a brilliant and lavish setting in the main studio audience of W-G-N from 9:15 to 10 p. m. Wednesday, Oct. 2.

The American Fashion Show will mark a new era in the designing of women's wearing apparel—American designs by American women for American women. Travis Banton, noted Hollywood designer, will be the commentator, describing each dress and interpreting the trends of American fashions.

The 48 original creations to be shown, include the 25 prize winning designs selected from over 12,000 entries. Not until after the show will the 25 winners of $7,500 be known. The best design will receive an award of $3,000, the second best, $2,000. There will be three $500 awards and 20 of $50 each. The 300 sketches winning honorable mention will be displayed at the show.

It was a big task for the committee, headed by Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, to pick the winning sketches. But after three weeks, they winnowed it down to 48 superlative designs. Expert dressmakers in Chicago and New York are finishing the gowns.

The studio audience will consist of fashion experts, manufacturers, retail and wholesale dealers, and many women who are interested in a glimpse of what they will wear during the coming season.

Milton Berle Is Guest on Show of the Week

With Milton Berle as guest comedian, Buddy Clark as master of ceremonies and soloist, and Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, the 1940-'41 edition of the Show of the Week will have its première from 5:30 to 6 p. m. today over W-G-N and the Mutual network. The show will feature a new guest comedian each week.

4 NATIONALITIES REPRESENTED ON SYMPHONIC HOUR

Marion Claire Will Sing "Ave Maria."

In keeping with W-G-N-Mutual's extensive plans to bring fine music to radio listeners the nation over during the 1940-'41 season, the works of distinguished Italian, French, Russian and German composers will be presented on the Chicago Tribune Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight.

The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the entire network of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening. Songs by Marion Claire, lyric soprano, and music by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, under the baton of Henry Weber, will be featured on the program.

Miss Claire to Sing "Ave Maria."

For the first of her three solos, Miss Claire will present the 'Organ Grinder," by Franz Schubert. Next Miss Claire will sing the beautiful "Ave Maria," by Bach. Writing in the 18th century, Bach composed a simple accompaniment to the song. More than a century later Gounod, a Frenchman, wrote the melody to Bach's prelude.

Adolph Hoffmann's "Scherzo" from the "Radio Symphony," the introduction and cortège from "Divertissement," by Jacques Ibert, and "Scene and Tarandole" from "Capriccio Espagnol," by Nicolai Rimsky-Korsakoff, noted Russian composer, also will be played by the orchestra.

Miss Claire will present the finale from "Thais," by Jules Massenet, as her last solo.

Trendler Directs Chorus.

Under the direction of Robert Trendler, the W-G-N augmented chorus will join the orchestra in presenting the stirring "Tannhauser March," by Richard Wagner. The chorus also will sing in the presentation of "Ave Maria," with Miss Claire.

'Aida' to Be Broadcast on Opera Festival Today

Following announcement of the opera quiz winners last Sunday, when the "Marriage of Figaro" was broadcast, the opera company and WAAF were deluged with requests that "Aida," the opera voted second in popularity, be broadcast. Thus "Aida" will be aired on the final program of the opera festival from 4 to 6 o'clock today. Complete answers to the opera quiz will be given. Mr. Cardelli will give the narrations for "Aida," and will have as his guest Kurt Herbert Adler, young conductor of the Chicago Opera company. "Aida" is the opera which will open the Chicago Opera company's 1940 season Nov. 2.

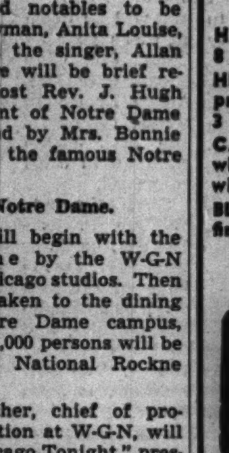
ROCKNE PICTURE PREMIERE ON IN CHICAGO TONIGHT

Host of Stars on W-G-N from Notre Dame.

Next Thursday will bring a host of stars with an entertainment rating of 100 per cent to "In Chicago Tonight," W-G-N-Mutual's variety show. For the program W-G-N's staff will move out into Chicagoland, to South Bend, Ind., to present highlights of the world première of the Warner Brothers' picture, "Knute Rockne, All-American."



Bob Hope.

The broadcast will run from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Before the microphone as master of ceremonies will be Bob Hope, screen and radio comedian; Pat O'Brien, who plays the Rockne rôle in the film; Gale Page, cast as Mrs. Rockne; Donald Crisp and Ronald Regan also in the picture. Kate Smith, radio favorite, who will broadcast her own show from Notre Dame Friday, will be heard on the W-G-N show.

Other Hollywood notables to be heard are Jane Wyman, Anita Louise, Irene Hervey and the singer, Allan Jones. Then there will be brief remarks by the Most Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame university; and by Mrs. Bonnie Rockne, widow of the famous Notre Dame coach.

Switch to Notre Dame.

The program will begin with the "Chicago" theme by the W-G-N chorus from the Chicago studios. Then listeners will be taken to the dining hall on the Notre Dame campus, where more than 1,000 persons will be gathered for the National Rockne Week banquet.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, will direct the "In Chicago Tonight" presentation. The program will be one of the monthly "movie night" shows, the most elaborate yet presented.

South Bend, a city around 100,000, is preparing to handle 200,000 visitors for the première and attendant ceremonies. The first showing of the picture will be Friday, Oct. 4, when it will open at four South Bend theaters. Notre Dame will begin the football season Saturday against Stagg's College of the Pacific team.

Pause in Chicago Thursday.

The movie stars will pass thru Chicago, cross roads for the nation's entertainers, on Thursday aboard a special train and will get into South Bend late Thursday afternoon. Bacher will immediately begin acquainting them with their parts in the W-G-N-Mutual broadcast. A special writer commissioned by the Warner studios will assist the W-G-N writers in rounding out the show.

All the color and excitement of Rockne week, with a fitting tribute to the memory of the man whose name was synonymous with great football, will go into the broadcast.

STEELMAKERS WILL RETURN TO W-G-N ON OCT. 6

With a shrill and familiar blast, a mill whistle will blow at 4 p. m. next Sunday to herald the return to the air of the Musical Steelmakers, original employé-family radio show. In their fourth year on the air, the Musical Steelmakers will broadcast over W-G-N and an expanded network of 46 Mutual stations.

Headlining the gala opening program will be Tommy Whitley, new conductor of the Steelmakers orchestra. Dorothy Ann Crowe, Ardenne White, the Steele Sisters trio, Regina Colbert, the Singing Millmen quartet, and friendly, affable Old Timer—familiar names to Musical Steelmakers fans—complete the list of performers.

SAFETY POSTERS TO WARN WALKERS

NEW YEAR RITES FOR JEWS OPEN ON WEDNESDAY

Synagogues Prepare for Overflow.

Jews thruout the south side will flock to local temples Wednesday evening to attend Rosh Hashana, or Jewish New Year, services, which will begin their annual 10 days of penitence. Special services will continue until Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, which will be observed on Friday evening and Saturday of the following week.

At the South Side Hebrew congregation, 74th street and Chappell avenue, services will begin at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and will be resumed at 7 o'clock Thursday and Friday mornings. Yom Kippur services will start at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon, Oct. 11 and continue until nightfall of the following day. Special services for young people between 16 and 25 years old will be conducted by Ben Aronin.

Prepare for Overflow.

To accommodate the overflow throng of worshipers, services will be held in the assembly room of the synagogue as well as in the main auditorium. Rabbi Morris Teller will read and interpret the prayers in English and will deliver the sermons at the morning services. Cantor Joseph Giblichman, assisted by the choir, under the direction of Hyman Reznick, will sing the traditional chants. Samuel Pesetsky, warden of the congregation, will conduct the Schacharith services.

"Comfort for a Dark Hour" will be the subject of Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein's sermon on Wednesday evening at K. A. M. temple, 50th street and Drexel boulevard. Services will begin at 7:30 o'clock. On Thursday morning Rabbi Weinstein's talk at 10:30 o'clock will be "How Does Youth Look At Its Elders Today?"

A special program for children will be given on Wednesday morning between 9 and 9:45 o'clock. Meyer Lippman, social sponsor of the temple's young people, will conduct the services. Extra features will include a shofar, announcing the arrival of the New Year; responses by the children's choir; and stories by Rabbi Weinstein. Special children's services also will be given on Yom Kippur between 1:30 and 2:15 o'clock in the afternoon.

Am Echod Services.

Rosh Hashana services will be held at Congregation Am Echod, 814 East 81st street, at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday and at 7:30 a. m. and 5:30 p. m. on Thursday and Friday. Rabbi Benjamin L. Teller will conduct the services and preach the sermon. Cantor Jacob Epstein, assisted by the choir, will chant the service.

At Temple Isaiah Israel, 1100 Hyde Park boulevard, Rabbi Morton M. Berman will deliver a New Year's message at the 8 o'clock service Wednesday evening. At 10 o'clock Thursday morning Rabbi Berman's theme will be "Challenge Thru Sacrifice."

Youth Holy day services under the auspices of the temple will be led in the community house of the temple, 5035 Greenwood avenue, by Rabbi Earl Stone at the same hours as the services in the temple proper. On Wednesday evening Rabbi Stone will speak on "The Challenge to Youth in the World of Today." On Thursday morning his theme will be "Youth Answers the Challenge." A choir made up of members of the temple senior group, which has been rehearsing under the direction of Mr. Gerber, will participate in the musical service.

Service for Children.

A New Year's children's service will be conducted by Rabbi Berman at 9 o'clock Thursday morning in the community house.

A special young people's service, all in English, will be conducted by youth of the congregation and supervised by Rabbi Benjamin J. Daskal on Thursday and Friday mornings at Congregation Rodfe Zedek, 1022 East 54th place. A children's service, conducted by and for children, also will be held both mornings.

South Shore Temple.

Evening services on Wednesday will be held in the upstairs and downstairs auditoriums of the South Shore temple, 7215 Jeffery avenue. Dr. G. George Fox, rabbi, will be in charge of the former services, while the downstairs services will be in charge of the junior congregation. The services will begin at 8:15 o'clock. The morning Rosh Hashana will start at 10 o'clock.

The Yom Kippur services will start at 8:15 o'clock on the evening of Oct. 11 in both auditoriums and at 10 o'clock the next morning, continuing thruout the day. Memorial services will begin at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

There will be a children's service for the New Year at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon and one for Yom Kippur at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Oct. 12.

Services at Sinai.

New Year's services will begin at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at Sinai temple, 4600 South Park way, and at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. These services will be conducted by Dr. Louis L. Mann in the temple, which seats 2,200 persons. In the Community Center building, which seats over 800 persons, there will be an additional service for persons who have recently arrived in this country. Dr. Fritz Banberger, a famous German scholar who came to the United States two years ago, will have charge of the latter services.

South Siders Will Hold Fall Style Show

A changing season always is good style show time. Thus, members of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority will model new fall and winter outfits at their annual style show and card party on Wednesday evening, Oct. 9 in Ridge park fieldhouse. Miss Betty Clegg, left, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Walter Clegg, 9757 Longwood drive, will wear this gaily checked frock. Rescued Flag Called Lesson in Patriotism

A STORY OF AMERICA

The Metropolitan section plans a series of stories on incidents which have made those involved conscious of their love of country and the many blessings which America bestows upon its citizens. Readers are invited to submit suggestions concerning such incidents which have touched themselves or others. Address The Metropolitan Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Harold E. Giroux.

It was late in the afternoon on the Fourth of July 30 years ago. The parade had swept past Oakley avenue and Madison street, leaving in its wake a litter of firecracker paper, peanut shells, and red, white, and blue bunting.

A 12 year old boy stood beside his newsstand shouting his papers. The parade with its blaring bugles and rolling drums was over and the watchers and stragglers were going home. One of the passersby was a civil war veteran, a man about 60 years old, wearing the G. A. R. uniform with the soft blue campaign hat trimmed in gold cord.

Veteran Recovers the Flag.

From across the street the boy saw the veteran stoop and pick out of the gutter a small penny American flag that some one in the parade had dropped. He hauled out a huge handkerchief from his pocket and carefully, tenderly wiped away the mudstains. Then he crossed the street and stood the little flag upright on the newsstand.

That happened 30 years ago. The boy, since grown to manhood, himself a veteran of the world war, has never forgotten that scene. He is Harold E. Giroux, 841 Barry avenue.

"I'll never forget that incident as long as I live," he says. "For me it is an emblem of the American ideal of freedom as symbolized by the flag.

Always Keep Flag Aloft.

"After placing the flag on the stand he explained to me why he had picked it up. He told me of the tradition of the American army of never letting the colors drop, how when the color bearer in battle falls the nearest soldier rushes to take his place, holding the Stars and Stripes aloft.

"You see, my grandparents used to talk to me about freedom, how America provided an opportunity to believe as you pleased, worship as you pleased. America, they told me, stood for those things, and that the American flag was its symbol of freedom. The G. A. R. veteran brought home to me the love for the flag.

"In those days we didn't have Americanism or civics classes in our schools, but this incident served as a complete course in Americanism for me. I can still see that G. A. R. veteran as he talked to me, tall, erect, proud, his Van Dyke beard neatly trimmed, his uniform spotless."

Influenced His Entire Life.

This incident, Mr. Giroux believes, influenced his whole adult life. Ever since he came home from the war he has engaged in civic and patriotic affairs. All his spare time he spends in aiding his community, serving on committees, and taking part in American Legion activities.

Mr. Giroux is a member of 44 committees and organizations. And he is an active member of most of them. The greater part of his committee work he transacts by mail and phone. A few of the organizations and the offices he holds in them include Harold A. Taylor post of the American Legion; 6th District American Legion; member of Voiture 220, The Forty and Eight; president of United States Army Base Hospital association; troop committeeman, Boy Scouts of America; executive committee member, Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A.; public relations committee member, Nonsectarian League for Americanism; secretary of the citizens' civic committee of Lake View; president, Lake View Community council; chairman, education committee for Lake View, and chairman of the new public library committee for Lake View.

STEEL WORKERS RALLY FOR FALL SPORT PROGRAM

Good Fellow Clubs Plan Activities.

BY PAUL HEALY.

The arrival of October will mean that another fall and winter program of extracurricular activities is in full swing for workers in the Carnegie-Illinois steel plants of Gary and South Chicago. Like college students, the 35,000 employés of the two plants will have a full schedule of athletic contests and social functions from which to choose a form of relaxation.

A Good Fellow club in each plant is responsible for the program. The clubs, which were founded for the mental and physical welfare of the workers, are made up of supervisors and nonsupervisors alike. Thus, after working hours, the lowliest apprentice and the most dignified supervisor may be found competing against one another in friendly combat.

Bowling Is Popular.

Bowling, which began a few weeks ago, is the first activity on the schedule. About 800 men and 100 women are engaged in league contests in each plant one day every week. Climax of the bowling season at Gary will be the largest single industrial tournament in the United States in which 600 five-man teams will participate.

Other athletic activities at both plants, and the approximate number which participate annually in each club, are as follows: softball in spring and autumn, 350; golf league, 400; archery contests, 50; boxing tournament, 50; tennis tournament for girls and men, 60; interdepartmental basketball, 300, and camera clubs, 75.

In addition each club holds two dances a year and each attracts up to 4,500 persons at each affair. The Gary plant also organizes a basketball team which annually competes in the Missouri Valley Amateur league under the name "Gary Good Fellows" and a rifle club.

Probably the best known activity of the clubs is the singing of the "Carolers." In each plant the 16 best singers are chosen annually to dress in old fashioned English costumes and take 10 days off to present musical concerts at hospitals, sanitariums, and street corners thruout the Chicago area.

Started as Benefit Plan.

Altho the Good Fellow club in Gary was formed only two years ago, the South Works Good Fellow club in South Chicago was created in 1912. The purpose then was to provide a fund to care for needy workers in the mill. The idea was suggested when the company nurse, on her rounds, discovered a poor worker's family with a sick baby in miserable circumstances. It was [illegible]lled to the attention of a group of supervisors, who decided to make up an emergency fund to take care of all such cases.

When a number of workers heard about the plan, they, too, wanted to be part of it. As a result, a Good Fellow club was organized and incorporated in 1913 as a nonprofit organization. From the beginning the club conducted its program of activities entirely on voluntary contributions from its members and without regular dues. This system has endured with marked success. The South Works club now lists 9,000 members in a plant of approximately 15,000 workers.

Besides supplying needy workers' families with the necessary food and clothing, other activities for the benefit of members were added from time to time. One of the first was an emergency loan plan whereby no interest is charged the borrower.

Girls Have Parties.

Among the most active members are approximately 100 girls—nearly all the girl employés at South Works—who enjoy themselves in organized bowling, archery, volley ball, beach parties, and steak fries.

H. E. Cullen is now engaged as a full time athletic director for the recreational program, which was instituted in 1919. According to Wallace Anderson, full time club secretary at South Works, it was bowling that gave real impetus to the recreational program. Today, he says, the bowling league of 92 teams is a remarkable success—especially from the standpoint of sociability, since it is conducted on democratic principles.

B. M. Livezey is president of the South Works Good Fellow club. Other officers are, besides Mr. Anderson, A. W. Gleason, vice president, and W. W. Hebson, treasurer.

The Gary Good Fellow club has enrolled 8,000 workers out of a possible 20,000 in two years of existence.

Buys Land for Camp.

An outstanding feature of the Gary club's program is a life size diorama of the Nativity which is erected annually at Christmas on the plant grounds. Last year 150,000 visitors came to the mill grounds just to view the giant crib, which was topped by a 78 foot candle, flood lighted and lighted with red and gold neon lights.

Recently the club purchased a 70 acre tract of land on the little Calumet river near the old Bailey homestead.

President of the club is Irvin Elser, a clerk in the coke plant. Other officers are as follows: First vice president, Harry Mallinson, job training instructor; second vice president, H. W. Freebury, clerk in the boiler shop; full time secretary, W. J. Barmore, and treasurer, E. T. Mitchell, clerk in the coke plant.

Churches Join in Good-By to Dr. E. S. Ames

A celebration marking the retirement of Dr. Edward Scribner Ames, who has been minister of the University Church of the Disciples of Christ, 5655 University avenue, for 40 years will begin today and continue until next Sunday. More than 40 churches of all denominations will coöperate with civic, service and business organizations in paying tribute to the churchman who is also well known as an author, dean, and civic leader.

The program will open with a sermon at 11 o'clock this morning in University church by Dr. S. C. Kincheloe, professor of the sociology of Christianity at the Chicago Theological seminary and assistant director of the Chicago Congregational union. Based on a survey of church members to discover what the church means to them, the topic of his talk will be "I Believe in Churches."

Associate to Assist.

Dr. Irvin E. Lunger, associate pastor who will succeed Dr. Ames, will assist in the services. Under the leadership of Dr. B. Fred Wise, director of music and education of the University church, the chorus will offer a number of selections.

An anniversary dinner for Dr. and Mrs. Ames on Friday evening at the Sherry hotel will be a highlight of the week. Feature of the dinner will be the presentation to Dr. Ames of the book, "Faith of the Free," written by 23 present and former members of his congregation. The text describes the application of religion, as Dr. Ames interpreted it, to their various businesses and professions.

The principal address at the banquet will be delivered by Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, minister of the Central-Woodward Christian church in Detroit, Mich., and past president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Toastmaster will be Dr. Herbert L. Willett, professor emeritus of oriental languages and literature at the University of Chicago.

Others Are to Speak.

Representatives of the University of Chicago, where Dr. Ames was chairman of the department of philosophy until 1935, together with representatives of Hyde Park and of Disciple churches in the Chicago area, will make brief addresses and Dr. Ames' favorite songs will be sung by Fred B. Wise.

Receiving with Dr. and Mrs. Ames at a reception held in their honor in the church library at 8 o'clock Saturday evening will be church members who were active when Dr. Ames began his ministry at the University church in 1900. Dramatized incidents of important events during his tenure will be followed by dancing and refreshments.

Dr. Ames will deliver a sermon at the University church at 11 o'clock next Sunday, assisted by Dr. Lunger, and special numbers will be presented by the chorus choir.

Other Events Scheduled.

Other events will include a reception given by all church members for Dr. and Mrs. Ames at 4 o'clock next Sunday afternoon in the church library, followed by services in the church auditorium, and the unveiling of a bronze tablet honoring Dr. Ames and his interpretation of religion in the east aisle of the church at the Sunday afternoon services.

Widely recognized as a liberal churchman and one of the pioneer educators who helped to start the University of Chicago, Dr. Ames will continue in his position as dean of the Disciples Divinity House at the university after his retirement. An authority in the psychology of religion, Dr. Ames has written "The Psychology of Religious Experience," "Religion," "The New Orthodoxy" and "Letters to God and the Devil."

Members of the committee in charge of the celebration include Dr. W. C. Bower, chairman; Dr. Roy G. Ross, Dr. W. E. Garrison, B. Fred Wise, Dr. Henry C. Taylor, Dr. Lunger, Dr. Kincheloe, Stephen M. Reynolds, Miss Gladys Finn, and Fred Henderson.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR 3D DISTRICT LITERARY TEST

Mrs. Robert S. Houts of 6635 Yale avenue, this season's literature and library department chairman of the 3d district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, has completed plans for her department's contests. These will include original short stories, essays, poems, and prose works.

Literature department members hope that the interest in the district competition will lead to the organization of creative writing classes in district clubs. Mrs. Houts also plans to build up the library extension service by devoting more time to assisting small clubs in developing their libraries.

The 3d district literature department's study course will be devoted mainly to the history of Latin America. The course will include reviews of the struggles for independence in the various countries and the intellectual forces influencing their growth.

DANGER POINTS ON SO. SIDE TO BE PLACARDED

Aim to Cut Traffic Death Toll.

Safety posters, illustrating elementary rules for the protection of pedestrians, will be placed at the south side's most dangerous intersections this week. The posters have been exhibited at corners in the loop for the last few weeks as the first step in the pedestrian safety campaign sponsored by Mayor Kelly and city officials, civic and business leaders and the Chicago Motor club. The latter furnished the designs.

The campaign is a concerted effort to reduce Chicago's traffic death toll of approximately 500 persons annually. Last year the box score read: Pedestrians killed in traffic accidents, 502; pedestrians injured, 8,755; complete death toll of both motorists and pedestrians, 696; total injured, 22,597.

The decision to place the posters at south side neighborhood intersections which have the worst traffic accident records was made last week at a joint meeting of all area councils of the Motor club attended by city officials. Ald. George D. Kells [28th], chairman of the city council committee on traffic and public safety, and Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer, approved the proposal.

Where They'll Be Placed.

The corners which will receive the posters are: 63d-Cottage Grove, 63d-Halsted, 47th-Ashland, 71st-South Chicago-Cottage Grove, 79th-Cottage Grove, 92d-Commercial, 67th-Stony Island, 43d-South Park, 43d-Michigan, 79th-Stony Island-South Chicago, and 31st-State.

All, with the exception of 63d-Halsted, 47th-Ashland, and 92d-Commercial, were chosen from the Motor club's list of the 20 high accident corners in this section of the city which club engineers are studying. The three mentioned will receive posters because they are heavily traveled by pedestrians and have heavily marked accident records.

Speakers at the meeting agreed that education was one of the most important weapons they could use in trying to reduce the jaywalking pedestrian trouble. Chairman Charles M. Hayes, president of the motor club, pointed out that the campaign was necessary, inasmuch as three-fourths of Chicago's annual traffic fatality victims are walkers.

Expect Death Reduction.

He predicted that the posters will result in checking deaths and injuries among adult pedestrians, just as education and supervision among children of grade school age has effected a tremendous reduction of casualties in that age group.

He said that now probably was the best time for the launching of a safety campaign, since October, November, and December are the worst months for accidents to persons on foot. The typical pedestrian who is struck on city streets, he added, is a man over 55 years of age who drives a car only occasionally, if at all.

In requesting that the posters be placed at the locations named, J. G. Strader, chairman of the south area council, expressed the desire of the council that these high pedestrian accident intersections be given first consideration, since they represent important hubs of community life. Ald. Kells urged council members to do all in their power to gain the coöperation of other civic organizations.

City Officials Aid.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th] and Ald. Joseph S. Gillespie [23th], members of Mayor Kelly's traffic safety committee, commented that the drive was receiving the full coöperation of city officials.

South siders attending the meeting were Walter S. Bednarski, South Chicago Citizens' club; Riley A. Bender, West Lawn Improvement association; R. B. Dean, Stony Island Park Civic association; Fred Henderson, Southtown Planning association.

GRAND CROSSING CENTER APPEALS FOR CLOTHING

An appeal for discarded clothing and shoes was issued last week by Mrs. Daniel Foreman, director of the Grand Crossing Community Aid center, 77th street and Ingleside avenue. Mrs. Foreman said the center needs overcoats, snow suits, sweaters, warm underwear, heavy jackets, skirts, and boys' shirts and trousers.

All articles of clothing are cleaned by local cleaners and then distributed free from 2 until 4 o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the center.

The committee which aids Mrs. Foreman consists of Capt. Brady, Florence Dauwalter, Ernest L. Rea, director of Grand Crossing park; James J. Sullivan, 8th ward Democratic committeeman; Msgr. Ambrose J. Murray, pastor of St. Francis De Paula church; Rabbi Benjamin Teller of Congregation Am Echod; Chatham Woman's club, and student aid P.T.A. chairmen from the Dixon, Ruggles, Burnside, Paul Revere, Madison, Paul Cornell Parkside, Hirsch High, and South Shore High schools.

WANTS SANTA MARIA REPAIRED.

Now that Columbus day is approaching, I think it is a good time for us to decide to do something about the replica of his ship which sits so drearily in Jackson park harbor. I don't know whose jurisdiction it is—the city's, the park district's, or the Historical society's—but I do know that plenty of persons criticize the apparent lack of interest in the relic on the part of authorities. As it is, it's not safe for inspection by school children, who should be able to go thru it for a nominal fee and understand the difficulties America's discoverer was up against, and it certainly doesn't increase the appearance of the harbor for travelers who enter the city by route 41.

Let's either take up a collection and have the boat repainted, refurbished, and recaulked, or tow it away to sea and sink it. This way it has only a nuisance value. As "a museum piece" to be examined and inspected, it would, however, have a special appeal to both lovers of the sea and of America. At any rate, it's too important a symbol to be neglected.

A PATRIOT.

PREDICTS AN ACCIDENT.

On Giles avenue in the 3500 block in the center of the street is a very dangerous hole which, if not repaired soon, is certain to cause an accident or a catastrophe. The neighborhood would appreciate getting this place repaired.

ANTI-RAT ARMY WIDENS ATTACK INTO 29 WARDS

Workers Place Poison Bait in Alleys.

The war on rats in Chicago spread from 3 to 29 wards last week. An army of several hundred men on relief began extermination work in wards which are 100 per cent equipped with garbage cans. Operations in these wards are to be increased as more men are enlisted in the rat killing drive.

What results they will have won't be known for several weeks, Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt, who is doubling as generalissimo in the campaign, said last week. At that time he hopes to have a casualty list of dead rats. In the sample eradication war conducted recently in three northwest and west side wards he estimated that almost 50,000 rats were killed.

Use Poisoned Bait.

The exterminators, using thousands of pieces of poisoned bait, will operate only in wards where each house has been equipped with garbage cans.

"Experts tell us that it is futile to try to kill rats where there are no proper garbage receptacles," he declared.

Commissioner Hewitt is conducting the rat war on two fronts. The first series of operations—now partly completed—is the installation of covered garbage cans at every building in the ward. When the ward has been rated as 100 per cent—a garbage can for every house—the second operation is to begin, that of actual extermination by the use of red squill and bait.

List 100 Per Cent Wards.

Following is a list of 100 per cent wards in which extermination work has been started: 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, and 50.

The following south side wards still are below 100 per cent ownership of garbage cans. Listed are the wards, superintendents, per cent of buildings supplied, and the number of buildings still lacking cans.

2d ward—Morris Laphen; 81.9 per cent of buildings supplied; 1,163 buildings still lacking cans.

10th ward—William Hoger; 97.9 per cent have cans; 188 buildings without cans.

GUNS OF G. O. P. ARE TRAINED ON THIRD DISTRICT

Congress Fight Is Led by W. J. Roehler.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Stirred by reinvigorated Republicans with the gleam of anticipated victory in their eyes, the political pot in the six congressional districts of southern and southwestern Chicagoland simmered merrily last week.

The large 3d, which takes in most of southern Cook county, during the week joined the group of districts in which are afoot the most ambitious plans of recent years for ousting incumbent Democrats.

Forces in the 3d are led by Waldemar J. Roehler, young and agressive former west parks commissioner, who won a well fought primary battle for the Republican congressional nomination in the district this year.

He has been joined in the campaign by his primary rival, Goodwin L. Dosland, and the strong group that backed Dosland's candidacy. This combination adds up to a headache for the 3d district incumbent, Edward A. Kelly.

Cuts Into Plurality.

Dosland, the nominee two years ago, in that election almost halved Kelly's 1936 plurality of 50,000. A shift of less than 2⅓ per cent of the 227,954 votes cast in the district that year could have elected the G. O. P. candidate. Republican leaders say a much greater change than that has occurred.

Roehler, in his appearances before precinct and civic groups, is attacking what he describes as the futility of New Deal experiments, and promises to fight in congress for a more business like conduct of national government.

He declared last week that he plans to vote for Wendell L. Willkie for President because a vote for the present administration is an indorsement of its defeat in its efforts to remedy the country's business ills.

"No loyal American should vote for a continuance of such failure in executive and legislative policies," Roehler said. "It is a simple statement of truth that in little business as well as big business the New Deal has retarded initiative on the part of the individual.

Fear and Uncertainty.

"It has established fear and uncertainty in the hearts of employers of labor. It has intimidated the job makers as well as discouraged job hunters.

"With all other arguments and issues brushed aside, these facts alone are sufficient to call for a change in administrative affairs of the nation."

Greater efficiency is a particularly pressing need just now, because of the situation abroad that demands speedy defense activity by our nation, Roehler said.

Temperatures rose perceptibly last week in the already hot race in the 1st district. In this district, which includes the downtown section as well as the large colored population of the near south side, Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell and Former State Senator William E. King are the principals.

Accuses His Rival.

King, a Republican, charged that his rival, the Democratic incumbent, "finds his chief support in an unholy atmosphere." He attacked the political alliance between Mitchell and "his political boss," Former Ald. William L. Dawson, who was a Republican until he became Democratic committeeman of the 2d ward last year.

"Dawson is supporting the present congressman with certain reservations and suspicions," King said. "Dawson's indorsement of Mitchell is a kind of forced support, because he realizes that the congressman is more of a liability than an asset.

"Mitchell in his speeches constantly boasts not of his allegiance to the 1st congressional district and the people of his own race [both candidates are colored], but of his political devotion to the philosophy of southern senators and representatives who dictate his vote in congress."

AMBROSE P. FINN AIDS 7TH WARD WILLKIE DRIVE

The 7th Ward Willkie club, under the direction of Frederick Shannon, has enlisted the aid of Ambrose P. Finn Jr., 2322 East 70th place, in the club's campaign to have every citizen in the ward register.

Ambrose P. Finn Jr.

Finn, whose family was one of the early settlers in the 7th ward, formerly was an assistant United States attorney, and special agent for the federal bureau of investigation. He is a graduate of Georgetown university, and practices law in Chicago.

Finn predicts the 7th ward will show a 10,000 Willkie majority, pointing out that the ward in 1939 showed the largest Republican vote in the city. The Willkie club expects to reach its goal of 1,000 members in a short time.

BASEBALL STARS OF YESTERYEAR TO SPRINT AGAIN

Old Timers Will Clash This Afternoon.

Lustrous names of baseball heroes who danced across the big league horizon years ago will be shouted back and forth this afternoon at Bessemer park, 89th street and Manistee avenue, as a group of ex-players stage an old timers' reunion and game. The contest will begin at 1:30 o'clock under the sponsorship of the park district, according to Jack Sheehan, park supervisor and coördinator of park district baseball activities.

Among the better known former stars who will appear are Johnny Mostil, White Sox center fielder of the 1920's, who manages the Jonesboro, Ark., Sox farm club; Tony Piet, ex-Pirate, Red, Tiger, and White Sox, now employed as a south side salesman; and "Fidgety Phil" Collins, former pitcher on the Philadelphia Phillies who is a north side business man.

Others are George McNamara, former Senator outfielder who is now a lieutenant in the city fire department; Frank McCue, ex-White Sox and Athletics infielder, now employed as a physical education instructor with the board of education; Johnny "Lefty" Radloff, former pitcher on the Red Sox now with the Short Line railroad; Billy Conroy, once a Senators infielder and now a member of the city fire department, and Billy O'Neill, Boston Braves ex-outfielder and now employed in the city treasurer's office.

Former minor league players who also will participate are Fred Anderson, Ted Burgwald, Herman Black, Johnny Chemma, Frank Erickson, Jimmy Lowe, Harry Reese, Frank Mathews, Gus Purpura, Eddie Rafferty, and Eddie Schaack.

At 3:30 o'clock a second game will be played between the "Bills" of the Calumet region senior baseball league and a team composed of Chicago boys who have returned to the city after having closed their seasons with professional teams in various parts of the country.

'VAGABOND KING' TO OPEN W-G-N THEATER OF AIR

Marion Claire, Thibault to Sing Leads Saturday.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The first of the three outstanding musical series which W-G-N will launch this fall will have its première next Saturday evening when Rudolph Friml's "The Vagabond King" is aired on the premier of the Chicago Theater of the Air. The Theater of the Air, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will present outstanding operettas streamlined into one hour productions. They will be aired from 9 to 10 o'clock every Saturday evening.

The second series—concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, directed by Dr. Frederick Stock and with world famous guest soloists—will be launched on Thursday, Oct. 10. And starting Monday, Nov. 4, W-G-N and Mutual will present the productions of the Chicago Opera company.

These new musical features are all in addition to W-G-N's established programs including the Chicago Tribune Symphonic hour [Sunday nights]; the Pageant of Melody with Henry Weber and the Concert orchestra [Wednesdays] and In Chicago Tonight [Thursdays] which often features new music as was the case when David Broekman's score to "Ode to Chicago" was presented on Sept. 19.

Marion Claire Is the Star.

Marion Claire, the famous soprano, is to be the star of the Theater of the Air. In "The Vagabond King," she will sing the rôle of Katherine de Vaucelles, a beautiful and high spirited lady of the court.

For the rôle of François Villon, poet and patriot, genius and thief of medieval France, W-G-N will present Conrad Thibault, the American baritone, who made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Grand Opera company. Thibault is widely known to radio listeners for his many network series.

Miss Claire is featured every Sunday evening as soloist of the Symphonic hour. The Theater of the Air will be under the personal direction of William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N. Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N and artistic director of the opera, will direct the W-G-N Concert orchestra and chorus in providing the musical background for the operettas.

Splendor and Squalor.

The romantic operetta, marked by its rousing music including the "Song of the Vagabond," is set in the splendor and squalor of medieval Paris. In the thieves' tavern Louis XI. comes to meet Lady Katherine, who has spurned him, encounters Villon, her admirer.

The story progresses into a web of many involvements. Villon kills the traitorous grand marshal of France. The king makes Villon the grand marshal and, in a moment of wry humor, also makes him king—but only for a day and with the stipulation that Villon shall order himself hanged after his day of glory.

As the grand marshal, Villon and Katherine pledge their love. Later, humiliated to discover that she has given her love to the Vagabond King she renounces her pledge. The final scene takes place at the gallows. At the foot of the gallows Katherine conquers her pride and testifies to her willingness to marry Villon. The king spares Villon and the operetta comes to a close with the singing of the beautiful "Only a Rose" and the stirring "Song of the Vagabonds."

In "Shadow"

Marjorie Anderson, who plays Margot, the Shadow's girl friend in the dramatic show by that name returning to W-G-N-Mutual at 4:30 p. m. today. Bill Johnstone plays the Shadow.

In Rockne Show

Pat O'Brien, who plays Knute Rockne in the movie of the famous coach's life, will be heard on "In Chicago Tonight" when the program is broadcast over W-G-N-Mutual from South Bend during the world premiere of the Rockne picture next Thursday.

Jane Wyman, another screen notable, also will be heard on the "In Chicago Tonight" broadcast Thursday from the Notre Dame campus.

TRIBUNE FASHION SHOW ON W-G-N NEXT WEDNESDAY

Travis Banton to Be Commentator.

The Chicago Tribune's American Fashion Show will broadcast from a brilliant and lavish setting in the main studio audience of W-G-N from 9:15 to 10 p. m. Wednesday, Oct. 2.

The American Fashion Show will mark a new era in the designing of women's wearing apparel—American designs by American women for American women. Travis Banton, noted Hollywood designer, will be the commentator, describing each dress and interpreting the trends of American fashions.

The 48 original creations to be shown, include the 25 prize winning designs selected from over 12,000 entries. Not until after the show will the 25 winners of $7,500 be known. The best design will receive an award of $3,000, the second best, $2,000. There will be three $500 awards and 20 of $50 each. The 300 sketches winning honorable mention will be displayed at the show.

It was a big task for the committee, headed by Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, to pick the winning sketches. But after three weeks, they winnowed it down to 48 superlative designs. Expert dressmakers in Chicago and New York are finishing the gowns.

The studio audience will consist of fashion experts, manufacturers, retail and wholesale dealers, and many women who are interested in a glimpse of what they will wear during the coming season.

4 NATIONALITIES REPRESENTED ON SYMPHONIC HOUR

Marion Claire Will Sing "Ave Maria."

In keeping with W-G-N-Mutual's extensive plans to bring fine music to radio listeners the nation over during the 1940-'41 season, the works of distinguished Italian, French, Russian and German composers will be presented on the Chicago Tribune Symphonic Hour from 9 to 10 o'clock tonight.

The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and the entire network of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be speaker of the evening. Songs by Marion Claire, lyric soprano, and music by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, under the baton of Henry Weber, will be featured on the program.

Miss Claire to Sing "Ave Maria."

For the first of her three solos, Miss Claire will present the 'Organ Grinder," by Franz Schubert. Next Miss Claire will sing the beautiful "Ave Maria," by Bach. Writing in the 18th century, Bach composed a simple accompaniment to the song. More than a century later Gounod, a Frenchman, wrote the melody to Bach's prelude.

The symphony orchestra will introduce the hour of classical music with "Concerto Grosse," by Pietro Locatelli.

Adolph Hoffmann's "Scherzo" from the "Radio Symphony," the introduction and cortège from "Divertissement," by Jacques Ibert, and "Scene and Tarandole" from "Capriccio Espagnol," by Nicolai Rimsky-Korsakoff, noted Russian composer, also will be played by the orchestra.

Miss Claire will present the finale from "Thais," by Jules Massenet, as her last solo.

Trendler Directs Chorus.

Under the direction of Robert Trendler, the W-G-N augmented chorus will join the orchestra in presenting te stirring "Tannhauser March," by Richard Wagner. The chorus also will sing in the presentation of "Ave Maria," with Miss Claire.

ROCKNE PICTURE PREMIERE ON IN CHICAGO TONIGHT

Host of Stars on W-G-N from Notre Dame.

Next Thursday will bring a host of stars with an entertainment rating of 100 per cent to "In Chicago Tonight," W-G-N-Mutual's variety show. For the program W-G-N's staff will move out into Chicagoland, to South Bend, Ind., to present highlights of the world première of the Warner Brothers' picture, "Knute Rockne, All-American."

Bob Hope.

The broadcast will run from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Before the microphone as master of ceremonies will be Bob Hope, screen and radio comedian; Pat O'Brien, who plays the Rockne rôle in the film; Gale Page, cast as Mrs. Rockne; Donald Crisp and Ronald Regan also in the picture. Kate Smith, radio favorite, who will broadcast her own show from Notre Dame Friday, will be heard on the W-G-N show.

Switch to Notre Dame.

The program will begin with the "Chicago" theme by the W-G-N chorus from the Chicago studios. Then listeners will be taken to the dining hall on the Notre Dame campus, where more than 1,000 persons will be gathered for the National Rockne Week banquet.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, will direct the "In Chicago Tonight" presentation. The program will be one of the monthly "movie night" shows, the most elaborate yet presented.

South Bend, a city around 100,000, is preparing to handle 200,000 visitors for the première and attendant ceremonies. The first showing of the picture will be Friday, Oct. 4, when it will open at four South Bend theaters. Notre Dame will begin the football season Saturday against Stagg's College of the Pacific team.

Pause in Chicago Thursday.

The movie stars will pass thru Chicago, cross roads for the nation's entertainers, on Thursday aboard a special train and will get into South Bend late Thursday afternoon. Bacher will immediately begin acquainting them with their parts in the W-G-N-Mutual broadcast. A special writer commissioned by the Warner studios will assist the W-G-N writers in rounding out the show.

NEW EDGEBROOK HOME ARRANGED ON SIMPLE PLAN

Large Bay Windows Give Maximum Light.

BY LOUIS BARGELT.

The desire of a man and a woman for a home of their own is almost fundamental. And lucky are those who can start married life in their own home.

It is as friendly and inviting a home outside as it is livable within. A five room house in the traditional rural French spirit, yet a house essentially modern, with evidence of thoughtful layout, planned for maximum economy, and carefully chosen equipment, and decorations.

The architects are Hooper and Nelson, 118 East 26th street They have achieved balance, simplicty, and symmetry. There is no feeling here of over-formality, or severity, tho certainly the little home has a great deal of dignity and poise.

Deck Over Garage.

Texture interest is given the exterior by its walls of brick; gray buff with manganese speckles. The trim is white, and the roof a deep blue-black. The large bay windows with their curvatures are well scaled to the exterior of the house and the entrance is of gray limestone. The roof of the attached garage has been made into a deck terrace, and is reached from the master bedroom on the second floor.

Inside you find a generous sized living room at the left of the entrance hall, with adjoining terrace. There is a traditional mantelpiece with stone facing and hearth. The placement of the dining room, at the right of entrance hall, separates it from the living portion, and the central location of stairs to second floor not only makes for economy but also conserves outside light for habitable rooms.

Red Linoleum in Kitchen.

The powder room and kitchen at the back are carried out in linoleum. The modern kitchen has counter tops of bright red linoleum, and this same red is carried into the gray linoleum floor in a feature strip. Elsewhere on the first floor, there are burgundy colored carpets, pearl gray ceilings, and walls pastel hued.

On the second floor there are two bedrooms, generous closet space, and bath with ceramic tile walls and floor. In the basement there is a forced warm air heating system, gas fueled, with provision for winter air conditioning.

Bay Windows for Light.

Speaking of what's new for fall in building and remodeling, it may or may not be news that the window selection available has never before been equaled in building history.

And of all the fine array of designs to choose from—the casement, the picture window, the double hung, the dormer, and the horizontal sliding—there is none more beautiful than the large bay windows of the type seen in this Edgebrook home. The curvature is well designed and as useful as it is lovely, since it captures sunlight and makes the entire room face the window.

Together 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sullivan.

John Sullivan, the famous pitcher with the old National's baseball team, and Mrs. Sullivan, 153 North Cicero avenue, celebrated their golden wedding Tuesday. There was a gathering of friends and relatives at the home of their son, Raymond Sullivan, 2445 North Parkside avenue.

Mr. Sullivan was born in Chicago at Polk and Laflin streets. He remembers seeing the water soaked merchandise which was spread out to dry in the open fields following the Chicago fire. He is a member of the Old Timers Baseball club.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan have resided in Chicago for the entire half century. Five of their nine sons and daughters are living. They are Mrs. Katherine Clancy, Mrs. Madeline Hanson, John and Raymond, both members of the Chicago fire department, and Edward, a commercial artist. There are 12 grandchildren.

Marriage Is Announced

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Sept. 30.

This is the time when the entire garden area should be in tiptop condition. Store all bird houses, garden furniture, and tools. Before the tools are stored they should be greased and oiled. The lawn mower, if not to be used again, should have all clippings removed and the parts thoroly cleaned and oiled. Later the accessories can be repaired, if needed, and exposed parts given a coat of paint. Fences should always be kept in condition; remove annual vines that have died down, and trim back woody growths.

Why not organize a community force and burn the vacant lots in the neighborhood to destroy weed seeds? A few residents in the vicinity should make it their business to keep weeds in vacant lots cut to the ground. If possible plow the ground. Alfalfa could be sown which would give a green covering; rye sown and plowed under would bring the soil into good tilth for vegetable crops.

Tuesday, Oct. 1.

Do not overplant the yard with shrubs, especially if the area is small. Shrubs planted too close together are certain to require much pruning to preserve a semblance of their form and beauty. Replace all poor soil with good soil, no matter what kind of plant is used. Use dwarf plants under low windows.

Enclose or screen the garage, if possible, with good shrubs. A lombardy poplar will serve to screen the telephone post in the rear. A wire fence covered with morning glories or other suitable vines will hide the alley from view.

Wednesday, Oct. 2.

Now that the house plants are indoors give them daily attention. A bit of plant food scattered on the surface of the soil in which Christmas cacti are growing will aid in the formation of buds. Adopt a regular spraying program to keep house plants free from all pests. Syringe at least once a week with clear water from the hose under pressure of the fingers. This will aid in keeping down the pests.

If foliage plants [coleus] are to be transplanted for window culture cut back the stems to insure a short, compact habit. Geraniums should be given the same treatment, but if they are to be kept for next season's outdoor beds, merely pack them close together in a box of soil and place in a cool, light cellar or basement window. Allow the soil to remain practically dry all winter because the plants are dormant.

Thursday, Oct. 3.

Tomatoes will ripen if gathered before a hard frost, or the entire plant, with fruits attached, can be hung up in a light shed and the fruit will ripen. Eggplant and peppers should be gathered before frost touches them. Lettuce can be protected from light frosts by covering with hay or other material.

Plant hardy lilies in the borders as soon as they are available. The twelve best lilies for the amateur, and which will give flowers from June to late September, include auratum, candidum, croceum, davuricum, hansoni, henryi, regale, pardalinum, speciosum, tigrinum, testaceum, and umbellatum. Most of these can be obtained from local supply houses.

Friday, Oct. 4.

Be sure to prepare the ground well for bulbs because they will do much better. Bulbs are higher in price this season, but the gardener will find that American grown stock will give fine effects as garden subjects. They require, however, a longer time to flower when forced.

Plant the minor bulbs in quantity for they add much to the garden and require little or no attention. They include the crocus, grape hyacinth, squill, glory-of-the-snow, and others of equal beauty. Repair all broken glass in the small conservatory before cold weather. Stack hotbed sash that is not in use.

Saturday, Oct. 5.

If one admires red flowers a few pots of the smaller scarlet sage may be dug and potted. They will last a long time. Do not neglect to lay in a supply of material for mulching newly planted trees, shrubs, perennials, and hardy vines.

Bulb beds also should be mulched to prevent the bulbs from heaving out of the ground during spring thaws. Clean up the iris, removing yellow leaves and all the débris from the bed or border.

[Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.]

WILLKIE VISIT STIRS HOPE OF G. O. P. IN 13TH

Aids Chance to Gain Two Seats in Assembly.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

Ragnar G. Nelson.

Optimism last week pervaded the ranks of Republicans fighting to win two of the three 13th district seats in the Illinois house of representatives. This district, with a population of 382,000, includes wards 7, 8, and 9, and portions of wards 6, 17, and 19.

Reasons for the upsurge of G. O. P. confidence were varied. They ranged from analyses of recent voting in the territory to the fact that Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, drew large crowds there two weeks ago.

Full coöperation with legislative candidates was pledged at a meeting last week by John T. Dempsey, young new chairman of the Republican Cook county central committee. Dempsey gave a pep talk, stressing the importance of these contests and promising the aid of his staff in solving campaign problems.

Must Have Majority.

"We must elect a real working majority in the house at Springfield so that Dwight H. Green, the next governor of Illinois, will be able to carry out his policies despite pay roller 'resistance,' Dempsey said.

"Your candidacies are as important as any others and they will be recognized as such from now on. Your names will be printed on county campaign literature and we will give you any help you need."

The 13th district G. O. P. nominees, Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg and Ragnar G. Nelson, joined with other house candidates in giving Dempsey a vote of thanks for his attitude.

They also were heartened by an analysis of the April primary vote on their office which showed that the Democrats have slipped substantially since 1938. The district has elected two Democrats and one Republican since 1932, but prior to that was always partial to the Republicans.

Primary Lead Cut.

Schnackenberg and Nelson pointed out the Democratic primary lead was cut by 100,000 votes between 1938 and 1940 [each voter casts three votes for this office].

In April, 1938, the Democrats piled up a total of 239,000 votes for the office, compared with 69,000 for Republicans, a lead of 170,000. But in April of this year the score was 184,000 for the Democrats and 114,000 for the Republicans, a lead of only 70,000.

The Democratic primary leads are subject to shrinkage because of the fact that machine rule is not easily exercised in secret November balloting, leaders said. In 1938 the primary lead of 170,000 was reduced to 21,000 in the November election.

"This shows that WPA workers, still wanting jobs, relief families, and old age pensioners will vote for Republican recovery whenever they can safely do so," Nelson said. "We're going to win two house seats this time."

Supported by Labor.

Nelson, who has the indorsement of the Joint Council of the American Federation of Labor, also pointed out that Republicans were elected in the last aldermanic contests in the 6th, 8th, and 9th wards. In the mayoralty election, Dwight Green won in the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th wards.

Nelson's second child, a girl, was born last Saturday. This will spur him to greater efforts in his campaign, he said. "I'm positive she's a Republican, altho she's only a week old," he added. The Nelsons live at 400 East Kensington street.

He was one of the organizers of the 9th ward Young Republicans in 1931. In 1936 and in 1938 he was elected senatorial committeeman. A member of the Bakery Salesmen's union, local 734, Mr. Nelson believes in abolishing the sales tax by eliminating graft and waste in state government.

Representative Schnackenberg, a house member for 20 years, has provided his party with experienced leadership in the "lean years." He has always been in the front lines of the fights against bad legislation.

Indorsed by L. V. L.

Of him the nonpartisan Legislative Voters' league said in the primary: "Indorsed. Skill in debate, marked ability, careful study of important measures, and hard work long have made him one of the most valuable members of Chicago's delegation in successive Illinois legislatures." He sponsored the Ward-Schnackenberg parole reform bill.

A lawyer and business man, Schnackenberg spoke at the Willkie gatherings, when the nominee was delayed in arriving on the scene. He said that Willkie had benefited himself and the G. O. P. cause by his appearances.

As the campaign got under way with ward meetings at 11138 South Michigan avenue [9th ward] and 7515 Yates avenue [7th ward], Schnackenberg hailed the strides made in unifying the various Republican primary groups. He urged that every citizen register to make certain that he can help vote to overthrow the statehouse machine.

Signs in ward headquarters of the district bear the names of both Schnackenberg and Nelson, attesting to the care being taken not to lose a seat by a lopsided vote in favor of one G. O. P. candidate.

Democrats in Race.

The two Democrats now holding house seats are John G. Ryan, 1530 East 83d place, a Municipal court bailiff, and Adam S. Mioduski, 8115 South Shore drive, a chiropodist and former agent of the state liquor commission. Of Ryan the L. V. L. said: "Four terms [eight years]. His first terms were better."

The nonpartisan group reported of Mioduski, "His first term failed to justify predictions made on his behalf." He won office as a rebel Democrat but in the house soon donned the harness of the regular organization.

Campaign Notes

Mass meetings in the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th wards are being planned for October by the Southeastern Chicago Little Business Men's Willkie for President club, it was announced last week by the club's president, Alfred O'Connor, 9152 Commercial avenue. Nationally known speakers will be heard at the rallies, he said.

The club, organized two weeks ago, boasts 428 members and expects to enroll several thousand before election day. A committee of its members is canvassing stores owned by little business men thruout the area. Charles E. Peters is vice president of the club, Henry Klopfer is secretary, and Oscar E. Bergstrom is treasurer.

* * *

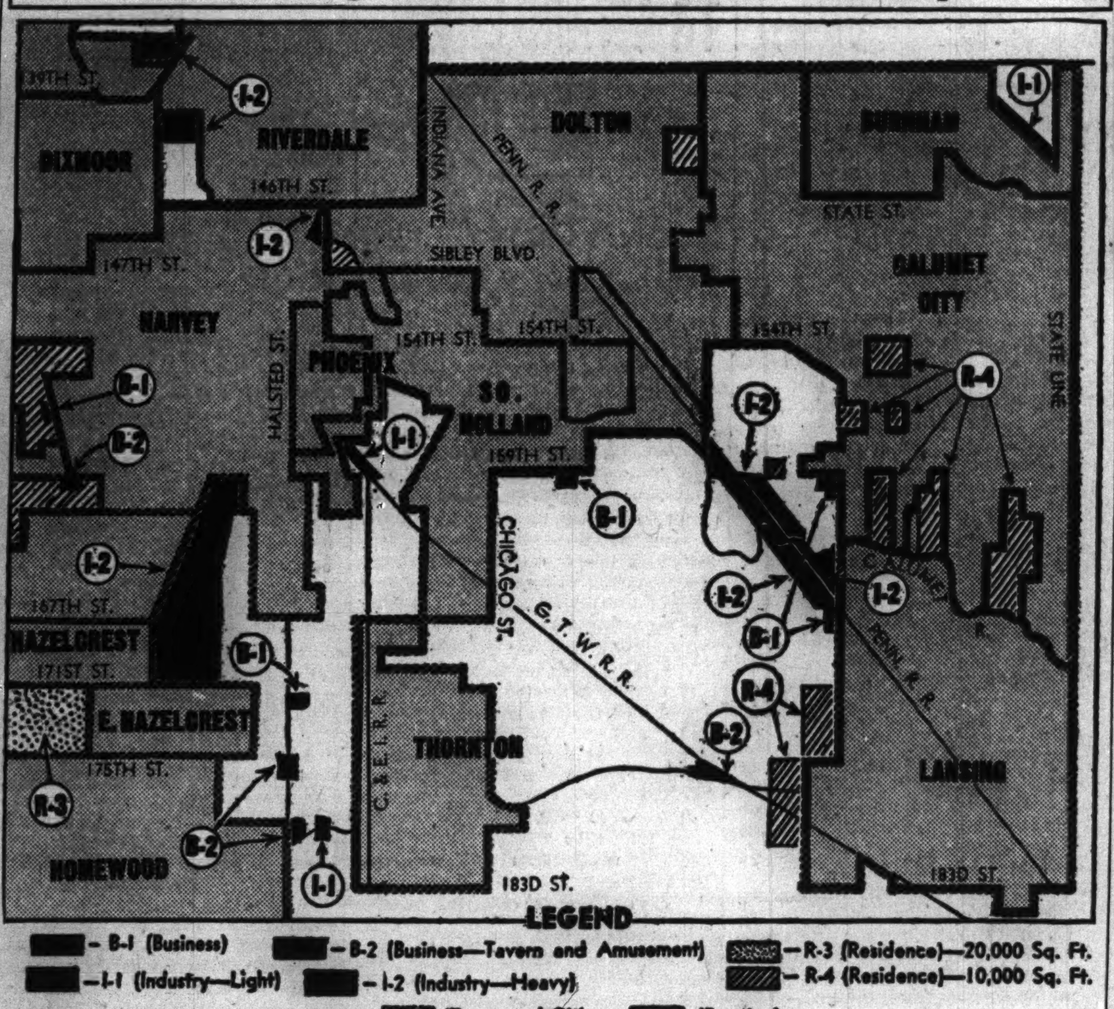
Naming captains for the ward precincts will be discussed at the next meeting of Tenth Ward Willkie for President club Friday evening. The club, which was organized on Aug. 20, received its charter from the Associated Willkie Clubs of Illinois last week, according to Dan Hallahan, 10060 Ewing avenue, president.

Mr. Hallahan predicts that the organization's enrollment of 350 members will grow to approximately 1,500 by Nov. 6. Other officers are Ervin Scherer, vice chairman; William Simons, secretary, and Mrs. Gertrude Ireland, treasurer.

Chicago Medical Society Unit to Hold Card Party

The Women's auxiliary of the South Chicago branch of the Chicago Medical society will open its activities for the fall with a dessert-bridge on Oct. 7 at the South Shore Hospital Nurses' home, 80th street and Crandon avenue.

Fix Zoning Rules for Thornton Township



Protection for farms and country homes is provided in the zoning ordinance passed recently by the Cook county board. The map of Thornton township shows the various areas allotted to farming, residence, business, and industry. The zoning ordinance also provides zoning protection to those who live on the edges of towns and villages.

A Tenderfoot Learns to Ride

BY HAROLD SMITH.

All my riding lessons had been given in the socalled English type of park saddle. My riding instructor, Elmer J. Holdorf, assured me, however, that at most stables I could obtain virtually any type of saddle I desired.

There are three main types of saddle in use in Chicago area riding stables, I learned. Each has its advantages and its drawbacks.

The saddle most familiar to the average American, and much in demand in livery, particularly at the low cost riding stables, is the western, or cowboy saddle, with its deep seat, large knee roll and distinctive horn.

This is primarily a work saddle, designed to afford ample comfort and protection for all day riding, and strong and sturdy enough to stand up under the strain of cow roping and the constant assault of hot sun or drenching rain.

Popular for Novices.

It is popular among novice riders both because it is the saddle of the picturesque cowboy and because its depth and knee swell impart a feeling of security to the rider who has not learned proper balance without such artificial aids.

Some of the disadvantages of the western saddle for bridle path riding are that it is hot in summer, the built-out knee swell tend to spread the legs uncomfortably, and the convenient horn is a constant temptation to "pull leather" in an emergency, which is bad riding.

Somewhat similar to the western is the McClellan saddle, a skeletonized modification of the cowboy type, developed by Gen. George B. McClellan of civil war fame, and once used widely in the army. This type is still regulation for the Chicago mounted police.

It also has the high, enveloping cantle and pommel, but is without the flaring knee roll. Its most distinctive characteristic is the open ventilating slit running lengthwise of the seat, which, rightly or wrongly, is reputed to be easy on the horse but hard on the rider.

Lacks Leg Fender.

Like the western, the McClellan is often used with covered stirrups, but it lacks the heavy sudadero or leg fender that is characteristic of the cowboy saddle.

The English or park saddle is characterized by its relatively flat seat, and its light, cutaway construction generally.

Most bridle path riders prefer it, I was told, because it affords a comfortable foundation unobstructed by large projections that interfere with the legs or lower torso. This saddle gives full play to the rider who takes pride in maintaining good form on horseback thru sheer skill and sense of balance.

I find considerable controversy over whether the western or the park saddle is best for long periods on horseback.

One group holds that cowboys, who virtually live in the saddle, choose the western type because it distributes the body weight more evenly over the rider's seat and has other comfort features. If it weren't best, the cowboys would pick something else, they argue.

To this argument the English saddle crowd replies that the United States cavalry, which also spends much time in the saddle, has adopted a type that is an adaptation of the English saddle.

Plans 100 Mile Ride.

I shall soon have an opinion based on experience, for I have just been assigned to take the third annual Chicagoland 100-mile trail ride next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, which is described more fully in an accompanying story.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

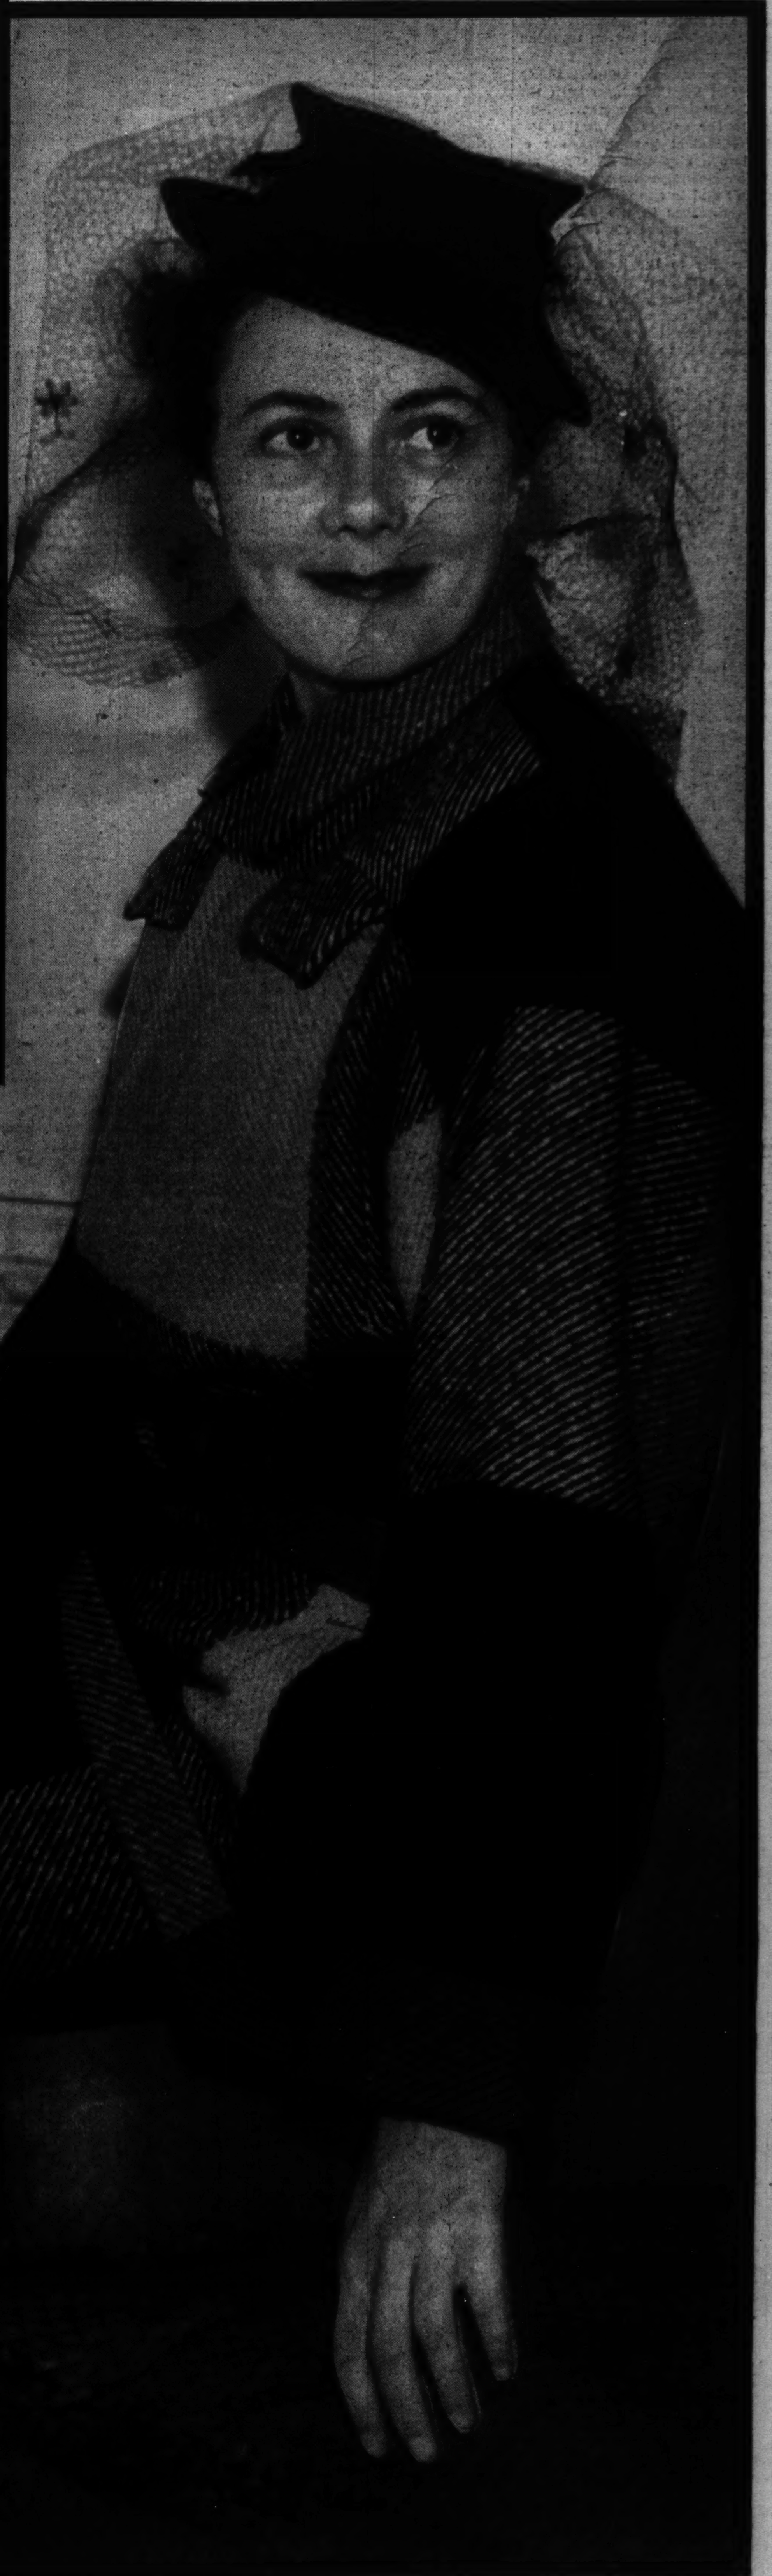
Part 7 SOCIETY

SEPTEMBER 29, 1940

The three young women pictured on this page all will be mannequins in the St. Luke's fashion show to be given on the afternoon and evening of Oct. 15 in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Louis Watermulder, below, one of the most photogenic young women in society, is the former Helen Dawes, daughter of Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes and the late Mr. Dawes.

Left: Miss Betty Mead, daughter of Mrs. Edward H. Bennett of Lake Forest, is equally at home and stunning in an evening gown or a riding habit. She is one of the best riders on the north shore and she and her mother are seen in most of the local horse shows.

Below: Mrs. William K. Meyers has been a favorite mannequin ever since, as Miss Pauline Wolff, she first started taking part in the St. Luke's fashion shows. She is a director of the Lake Forest Y. W. C. A. which is just starting its annual drive for funds.



Music Stirs New Interest in Pittsfield

By Cousin Eve.

This rare old town was a center of excitement during the last summer.

PITTSFIELD, MASS. It was all waked up and full of visitors to the last room. The reason was—music. Pittsfield has suddenly become the American Salzburg—lovely mountains, lakes, and all. There was the Berkshire Music festival during August with attending thousands, and there were the perennial householders and summer people carrying on tradition opulently as ever.

For generations, Lenox, Stockbridge, and Pittsfield have been the hub of American aristocracy. Now they are the spokes in what is left of it. Pittsfield has grown out of hand into a city—and all three are but a few glowing miles apart. What you can't find in one village you may perhaps discover in the other. The three townships are set like jewels in the Berkshire hills, and those hills are a prolog to the high mountain ranges of east New England. They have the blue Alps, the cloud shadows, the emerald green valleys, and pure mountain air—but all in miniature. The peaks aren't high, the valleys aren't deep.

• • •

Lenox I found changed. Just after the world war it was the top of fashion. Vanderbilts, Astors, Fields [not our group], Sloanes, Shepards, Townsends, and Morgans abounded in the magnificent seclusion of enormous acreages. Today the Field estate is a boys' school, and while Mrs. Henry White, widow of a distinguished diplomat, survives, and Mrs. Carlos de Heredia and half a dozen other ladies of great wealth are holding their forts, it isn't the same atmosphere of undiluted splendor. Stockbridge now fancies itself as the leading resort, and Owen Johnson, the author, who lives there in a spacious house, was heard to say: "We bury our dead in Stockbridge."

And almost the first thing they do when a guest arrives is to whisk her out to the cemetery, they're so proud of it. There's a little sign pointing the way to the grave of Henriette Desportes, wife of the Rev. Henry Field; another to the tomb of Cyrus W. Field, father of the Atlantic cable; to Joseph Choate's resting place, and finally to the pinery where in circles great and small lie all the famous Sedgwicks of Stockbridge, with a slave or two, their pet dogs and all.

In the center of this circle, decked only with appropriate yews and evergreens, is the tomb of the earliest local Sedgwick, the friend and counselor of George Washington, Walter Sedgwick; the others radiate from it. The most curious among this family's stones is one to Mumbet, a famous female slave who died in 1829. During the Revolutionary war when the British and their allies, the Hessians, came swarming in to Stockbridge, Mumbet kept British troops out of her quarters, thereby saving the family jewels and silver plate for posterity.

Henriette Desportes, heroine of "All This and Heaven Too," a romantic and beautifully done movie with Charles Boyer as the Duc de Praslin, died nearly a century ago. Yet nowadays travelers come in great numbers to see the quiet, remote resting place of the girl who made history when only a governess in a French ducal family. The Rev. Henry Field, her American husband, buried Henriette in the garden of his house high on the ridge which we saw later. But the Rev. Mr. Field's second wife, according to local historians, obliged him to replace the tomb in Stockbridge cemetery, where it is today with all the Fields.

• • •

Mrs. James Ransom Walker of Chicago has a charming house on the ridge a short distance from the old Field residence, with views of Laurel lake, a great, shining piece of water. At its north end among the pines is the beautiful estate of the late Kate Buckingham of Chicago, philanthropist and patron of the arts. The great house was willed to Walter Byron Smith, Miss Buckingham's trustee, but was not accepted. Lately, in fact this summer, it was bought for a couple of songs by Serge Koussevitsky, the foreign born conductor of the Boston Symphony. He has a beautiful place for rehearsal now to prepare for the August concerts. The outdoor shell for these symphonic concerts was given with the ground by the late Mrs. H. C. Brooks.

I went lunching one day with Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Holloway of Glencoe, who have a most delightful house in the Tyringham valley called Tamarack lodge. The house is poised high on one side of the valley with a wide and very beautiful distant view, and their property extends across the valley and up the hills on the far side, where are the farm and cattle barns.

Tamarack lodge is named for a species of evergreen now almost extinct in the Berkshires, and there are still a few of this long needled pine on the Holloway place. After luncheon we went out to look about, and it was fascinating to hear the rising wind as it came soughing up the valley thru the pines, mingled with the doleful chant of the tree toads. We walked across their two deep ravines to inspect Mrs. Holloway's grove of lovely, slim, white birch trees. They are fantastic and rather ghostly, and in demand by youngsters of the district for midsummer evening picnics. Like all her neighbors, Mrs. Holloway was deep in gardening and making changes for another year around her pool, which struck me as already ideal. Later we drove off in the car and saw enchanting sights, and wound up at a party which "everybody" attended—in the garden of the estate of the late distinguished sculptor, Daniel Chester French.

• • •

The Tyringham valley is only seven miles long and at the top end a Shaker community lived for many years. Finally it died out, and the few Shakers left transferred themselves to another settlement. The community tenements, which are extremely quaint, have been bought up and made into a little village street for one quite large family—their color and demure character have been kept intact, however.

An interesting Shaker exhibit has been on all summer in the Pittsfield museum—their furniture, weaving, carving, designing, and rudimentary art have attracted wide attention. We passed at dusk the large yellow house of the late editor, Richard Watson Gilder, and a bit further the blood-red domicile of Mr. and Mrs. Basil de Selincourt, now in England like good Britishers. But while the sun was still high we paid a visit to the famous Berkshire Garden center, with its remarkable herb garden, both largely the creation of Mrs. Bernhard Hoffman, better known in Chicago as Irene Botsford. The garden center is an acreage where all manner of experiments and tests are made, and it is carried forward in a most scientific manner by a large and enthusiastic board of directors.

It was a perfect summer afternoon, full of warm color, when finally we strolled across the lawn toward Daniel French's studio, where his daughter, Mrs. William Penn Cresson, was receiving. The party was in honor of the 5 cent postage stamp of the sculptor's head issued that day. Mrs. Cresson, who is lovely to look at, with red in her hair and gleam in her eyes, had bought the first stamp at the Stockbridge postoffice. And Senator Treadway was there to make a speech and plant a weeping willow tree, in honor of the man who produced the magnificent statue of Abraham Lincoln for the Lincoln memorial at Washington.

The tree was a young one, and planted on the lawn in front of the studio where it in no way detracted from the remarkable simplicity of the gardening. There were two urns full of fuschias outside the entrance of the house, and nothing else in evidence but green grass and the full skirted sweep of magnificent trees. Back of the studio is a little railroad where the noted sculptor kept a flat car. On this he used to run his plaster models among the woods in order to see how they really looked up against God's trees.

• • •

The studio was filled with distinguished visitors that day. Dominating the scene was the Lincoln, and in the center, covered with canvas, was Daniel French's unfinished last work. In front of it on an easel stood a portrait of the sculptor by John Johansen, who is the tops in portraiture in this country, and a delightful creature full of whimsies. He was standing in front of this unfinished portrait, which already was a notable likeness and work of art, and insisted that he had never painted it. "No," said he, "I can't remember doing it at all." And he also denied having painted Mr. Weld, a Boston banker, one of his most stunning works. "No, I don't know Weld and never painted him," said he.

All the time we were perambulating about, Mr. Holloway's necktie was making history. It was green silk with narrow white stripes, and those stripes were superb. You could read them. "Vote for Willkie," said the necktie. Mrs. Marshall Bullitt was another, a heroine. She was collecting Willkie buttons and wearing a few, much to the delight of her neighbors. Mrs. Marshall Bullitt is related by marriage to William Bullitt, who is ambassador to France, or isn't he? And having been his hostess when he retired to the United States, it was regarded as a wonderful sign of the times for her to be wearing Willkie buttons.

Sally Anne McPherson's button was clever. "If I were 21 I'd vote for Willkie."

• • •

After we met practically the whole of Stockbridge, Mrs. Cresson asked us to go over to her house for tea. Being the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Chester French, their delightful house is hers with all its souvenirs and collections, and it is as feminine and chic a place as I have ever seen. It faces on the south and west, a great sweep of green lawn and rich border of forest. The rooms are neither large nor small, and especially lovely is the dining room. We sat for tea at the round table and the gleam on the black Venetian chairs with gold pattern caught my eye in the last rosy rays of sunset. The furnished hall is hung with portraits by great artists of the French family. The bibelots were from the wide world, and yet they belonged and fitted into New England.

As we left this ideal abode and came into the main street of Stockbridge by a leafy lane, my friends were speaking of the people there. Three Supreme court justices had their summer places here, and over on the right, not far from the red brick church where Jonathan Edward's sermons rang forth, is the great red brick house of the Sedgwick family. With its lovely greensward and noble trees, it is the Buckingham palace of Stockbridge—or so I gathered. The Sedgwick name is still one with which to conjure in the Berkshires. On a near corner is a church, of McKim architecture, with a tower by St. Gaudens, and stained windows by Grant LaFarge; while across the corner is the neat cottage where Cyrus W. Field got the first ocean message to be sent on his Atlantic cable. Really a plethora of geniuses.

• • •

Chimes have rung out all summer in Stockbridge from the old church, playing for a half hour at sunset—a charming idea, it seemed to me, as we rolled along under the arching elms and oaks resting on their carpets of velvety grass. Some of the beautiful old mansions have become private pensions, or boarding houses, notably the house of Miss Astor Bristed that is far more chic than the hotels and done in a superlative way.

On Sunday I went to the polo game in Pittsfield with Fannie and two of her youngsters. It was one of the most intimate games of polo imaginable—not only did the station wagon stand nose on to the game, but we were practically mixed up in much of it, for the gee gees kept spurting over on our side.

Brides Steal Spotlight of Fall Season

By Judith Cass.

Brides have stolen the season's spotlight from the debutants, for all the young women who are going to make early autumn bows have done so and have departed for school. They will return at Thanksgiving, and again at Christmas, to resume their gay round of festivity, but now, theoretically, at least, their heads are full of mathematics, languages and the like, instead of beaux and parties and good times.

In the spring a wedding-goer is certain that no wedding is more beautiful than a spring one, but every fall the same wedding-goer becomes convinced that nothing is lovelier than an autumn ceremony. The soft, pastel shades that are popular in the spring give way to rich, deep, autumnal colorings, and lush velvets are likely to replace the glistening lighter fabrics that are used earlier in the year.

Miss Mary Hill and Matthew Laflin Rockwell are having a short engagement, for their formal announcement was made on Sept. 16, and on Oct. 17 they are to be married. The ceremony will be read at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in St. Chrysostom's church by the rector, the Rev. Dudley Stark. Only the families will be present, but a larger reception will follow at the Casino.

Miss Hill, oldest of the three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Giles Hill of Scott street, will have her sister, Diana, as her only attendant. Benjamin Weisbach will be his half-brother's best man. Both attendants will fly home from eastern schools for the ceremony, Miss Hill from New York, where she is a student at Finch, and Mr. Weisbach from Amherst.

Mr. Rockwell, son of Mrs. Harry Weisbach and Lawrence D. Rockwell, and his bride will go to Bermuda on their wedding trip, and upon their return will live in the east.

• • •

Two days before the Rockwell-Hill wedding St. Luke's fashion show will be given. As usual, the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel has been reserved for the two showings, one in the afternoon and the other at night. Mrs. John W. Gary, president of the woman's board of the hospital, is general chairman of the large committee that manages the show. Among the mannequins will be debutantes Priscilla Armstrong, Harriet Sturgis, and Peggy Rich. Other buds of the season will sell flowers and programs. Schiaparelli, who will design the wedding that will be a feature of the show, will give a brief talk at each performance.

Most of the St. Luke's fashion show committee members will be in one of the three audiences in the W-G-N studio that will enjoy the American Fashion Show sponsored by THE TRIBUNE on Wednesday. The Winnetka women who each year give a fashion show for the benefit of Northwestern University Settlement also are planning to attend one of the shows on Wednesday, for they, like St. Luke's women, never miss an important showing of fashions. The Winnetka show already has been given this year; it was held last Friday. It was the 14th annual one and St. Luke's exhibit this year also will be the 14th that this group has given.

Diary Reveals French Flight Before Nazis

The flight of the French before the invading Germans in the last days of the war in France last summer is graphically depicted in a diary kept by one of the refugees.

This refugee is Mme. Jeanne Boué, a teacher living—until the invasion—in the little town of Boulancourt. In a letter to Mrs. H. P. Harmon of Highland Park, Ill., she incloses her diary and tells the tragic story of her fellow countrymen.

As the former proprietress of a boarding home for girls in Paris, Mme. Boué is known to hundreds of Americans. She writes of the escape from Boulançourt and of the scenes along the crowded highways from mid-June until mid-July, when she was still awaiting an opportunity to return to Paris.

• • •

The diary follows:

Boulancourt, Saturday, June 15.—At 2 o'clock the mayor of the village assembles all the peasants and refugees and gives the order to leave Boulancourt at dark. German planes pass frequently above us, as Malesherbes, nearby, is a military center. The village is 80 kilometers from the river la Loire. We are told all the bridges of the Loire will be blown up at night and that the Germans are advancing rapidly.

Roads are overcrowded with cars, carts with horses, cyclists, people pushing baby carriages loaded with children and packages. It is a terrible sight, a general sauve qui peut. No one seems to care about others. It is indescribably pathetic, and it is all accompanied by a terrible noise.

We decide to take very little with us, in order to use as little gas as possible. Already we hear gas is scarce. I save my home study program, my address book, typewriter, and a few souvenirs. Papa Boué takes care of the clothes while my faithful maid gathers a few pans. We have no time to take food and give liberty to our hundred little animals [rabbits and hens—and such beautiful ones!]. We feel sad to leave everything behind. It is raining and cold.

We pass many little children until we reach the grande route. We go slowly, as most of the peasants are on foot and hold their horses. From 4 o'clock until midnight we drive 25 kilometers—about a mile and a half an hour. All is darkness, with no light. We constantly hear the guns, and there are so many planes above us all the time.

For military operations the officers want us to keep to one side of the road. But this is in vain. As soon as they pass, a new line of cars and sidecars is formed behind. This obstructs the traffic for military cars and trucks moving forward. It is getting more and more difficult for the troops. Some have to go toward la Loire, and some regiments of infantry have to go forward to meet the Germans—and the artillery is going in both directions.

At Fay-aux-Loges people are running madly toward the bridge, leaving their cars and everything and asking all the time if the bridge is still there. It is still about 6 or 7 kilometers' distance. Papa Boué is exhausted. We give it up, hoping for the best. We decide to stay in the car until 4 o'clock in the morning.

• • •

Sunday, June 16.—This day has been the most difficult one. We have seen terrific sights everywhere, and have been bombarded 11 times in 12 hours. Sometimes we would stay 15 minutes, sometimes we would stay an hour, in ditches while the German or Italian planes would pass near us and in great number. Each time we pulled out our big pans and covered our heads with them. They protected us during the campaign.

At 5 o'clock in the morning the first bombardment comes. It lasts more than an hour and is very strong. Not 800 meters from us big clouds of smoke come up from three directions. They are caused by the explosion of an ammunition factory, the destruction of the railway station, and bombs on our road.

We pass Chateau-euf-sur-Loire, and see many people killed—especially old people and women and children. Many horses and dogs are also killed. Some cars are still burning. All these people were, like us, waiting in line to cross the bridge.

The bridge at Fay-aux-Loges does not exist any longer. So we have to go toward the bridge at Jargeau. When we arrive there we hear the bridge is still standing, altho several times in the morning the Italians have tried to destroy it. It has been bombarded in several places, especially at its ends, but it is still strong. We feel very small as we cross on it, and the river seems wider than usual. On both sides all the houses have been destroyed. The town, like so many villages we are passing, is deserted. Many roofs are still burning.

At St. Denis a big truck, containing soldiers and civilians, is completely destroyed. Two big planes pass near us and throw four big bombs. Our radiator needs cold water. I go into a house, and there find a dead woman and her baby. The café of the village is empty of its proprietors, and every one is carrying bottles of old wines and liquors.

At La Ferté Saint Aubain, an important railway junction, we are copiously bombarded. Later we hear that 150 bombs have been hurled down at that point. Hundreds of dead people are lying on either side of the road. The living look very nervous, many women shouting and crying. A woman goes mad after seeing her husband dead at her side. I hear a little boy saying to his mother: "Comme ils dorment bien tous ces gens!" [How well they sleep, all these people!]

We cannot go any further. We stop in the forest, among the colonial infantry. Those Negroes with fixed bayonets, standing near the trees, make a striking impression. Papa Boué sleeps soundly for a few hours. With so many pedestrians around, my maid and I mount guard. Two bundles fixed behind the car have already disappeared.

Monday, June 17.—It is 45 kilometers from La Ferté Saint Aubain to Romorantin. We started at 4 in the morning and arrived at midday. There are still long lines of horse carts, hand carts, bicycles, and whole families on foot. Already many women and children have been lost or are ill. Military trucks take what they can. Some tow civilian cars short of gas. There are many abandoned cars on the side of the road. The guns and planes continue bombarding steadily. We see an aged couple, the husband, 70 years old, walking with difficulty. He carries a white stick in one hand and holds his wife's arm tightly with the other. He is blind. I ask them why they are going up the road, toward the forest, while every one else goes down south. "O," the little woman answers, "we feel so much safer near the cemetery. We go there every time we are bombarded."

At Rumorantin everything has been destroyed. We have not eaten for two days. The military authorities are distributing balls of bread. At 4 o'clock we find an inn where we can sit down and warm some canned goods. They have a little wine left, and we have a real feast.

We hear that the Germans are still about 30 kilometers from us; so we start out again. We pass St. Christophe, Valancay, and Loches. We are in the beautiful chateaux country, but we cannot admire anything. At twilight we are still driving thru troops of infantry going north. The men look terribly tired, and famished. Some of them can hardly walk. Some, supported by sticks, are walking in their slippers. We dare not look at them.

We stop at an open barn at Donus le Sec. At 4 a. m. officers arrive and give orders to leave the farm immediately.

Your Stars Today

By WYNN

Sunday, Sept. 29.

Here's an excellent day for taking inventory, for thinking ahead; use it for building money, business, and social plans along mutual lines. Week ahead can be made very constructive, if we'll work at it; resolve on accomplishment, and get it.

The Choice.

The quality of everything in life is the great puzzle of existence. It is a puzzle we have not solved, and so everything continues to be a problem. Everything that arises in the affairs of a man or a nation offers the choice of integrity or something else that is less than integrity. Integrity is living in exact accord with the pointings of conscience. Few have ever succeeded in doing it.

Your Year Ahead.

Your year ahead from today's anniversary can mean emotional upheavals if not analyzed, understood; careful with partners, health, inferiors, law. Push for just reward from June. Danger: Oct. 1-21, Feb. 20-28, June 28-July 14, 1941.

Journalism Group to Hear French Writer

Among forthcoming events which give promise of an unusually interesting season is the 18th annual Matrix Table of Theta Sigma Phi's active Northwestern university chapter, at which the French journalist, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, widely known as "Aunt Genevieve," is to speak. The dinner is scheduled for Oct. 11, and is one of the first to be held in the new Scott hall on Northwestern university's Evanston campus.

This is to be the first Chicago appearance of the famous French newspaperwoman who, as foreign editor of L'Oeuvre, startled Europe with her predictions of international events more than once. Hitler's march on Prague fulfilled one of her forecasts, and she earned a sarcastic reference from him in one of his speeches that year.

Miss Gladys Perrow, author of a newspaper series entitled "I Married a Nazi" and an alumna member of the chapter, will introduce the petite journalist, who is known for her chic as well as her writings. Miss Constance DuBois is chairman of the table, with Miss Mary Clare Rhodes and Miss Eliza Merrill Hickok among those assisting on arrangements. Miss Mary Katherine Conger heads the chapter.

Exhibits Send Art Season Off to Good Start

By Eleanor Jewett.

The new season is well under way, or so it seems to him who takes a swing thru the galleries where art is the chief topic and finds that already, early as it is, a variety of exhibits has been installed. Probably at the moment the most important show in town is that of historical portraits at the Anderson Galleries, 530 South Michigan avenue. This is a small group of pictures, but most significant is the fact that each individual canvas is irreplaceable and each is of the greatest historical import.

There are two portraits of Washington in the exhibit; one is by Rembrandt Peale and the other by Gilbert Stuart. The Peale portrait is interesting where the Stuart Washington is superb. The Stuart portrait is known as the "Ricard" Washington, and its ownership from the beginning is fully recorded in various wills. It is a beautiful and dignified piece of painting and one of the finest portraits of George Washington that Stuart ever painted.

As we all know, Stuart painted Washington more than once, and not all his efforts were successful. This particular portrait is, however, brilliant. No one should miss seeing it.

Perhaps the dominating portrait in the exhibit is that of Benjamin Franklin by Carle Van Loo. The authority, William Sawitzky, says of it: "The painting is, in my opinion, a most attractive and artistic work of Carle Van Loo, court painter of Louis XV. of France. Comparing it with various other portraits of Franklin, I am convinced that this portrait represents Franklin at the age of 56 or 58, which corresponds with the time Van Loo is known to have been working in London. The portrait is a most valuable addition to the Franklin iconography, not only from a historical, but also from the patriotic point of view."

Note the detail in the portrait. Franklin, by the way, had a human failing common to many of us—a fondness for good food, and the painter has not spared him his fair share of corpulent complacency. The fur on the robe which Franklin wears is the trade-mark of the printer, a member of which profession the great American undoubtedly was; who does not know "Poor Richard's Almanac?"

There is a very engaging portrait of LaFayette in the exhibit. It shows him as an eager young man in a military uniform of such odd cut that it gives LaFayette more youth than perhaps his years warrant, altho we do know that he was little more than 21 when he offered his sword to Washington. The portrait is by Louis Leopold Boilly.

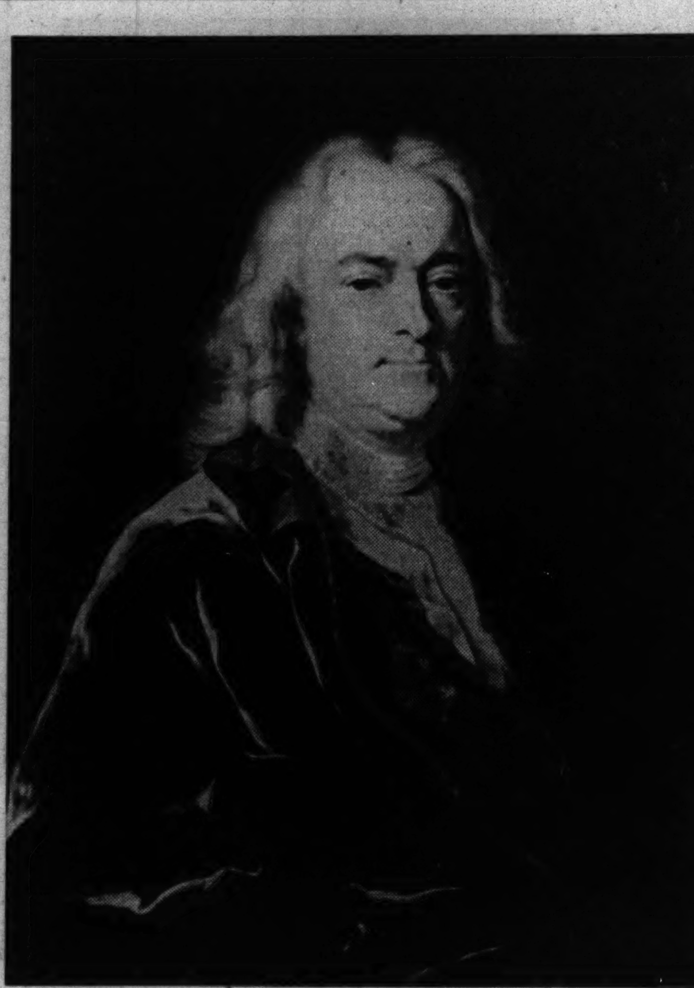
Henry Clay, one of the greatest of American statesmen, is presented in a portrait by Bass Otis. Here we see an example of the authentic primitive—Henry Clay is given us in such strict fashion that we feel at first we are face to face with a caricature. The eyes are the most alive bit of painting in the canvas; they glow like coals. Henry Clay, you feel, tho not handsome, must have been a gentleman of spirit.

In great contrast is the personality, face and figure of John Quincy Adams as depicted by G. P. A. Healy. This beautiful and picturesque likeness was painted in Boston in 1845, according to Healy's own account in his "Reminiscences of a Portrait Painter."

There is a second Gilbert Stuart in the exhibit which must not be overlooked. It is the portrait of General William Hull, who, besides being an important officer in Washington's army, was the first governor of the North West Territory. The portrait had not been out of the possession of the descendants of General Hull since it was painted until it came into Mr. Anderson's hands, he having bought it from the great-great-grandson and granddaughter of the general to settle an estate. The painting could not be torn in two, but money can be divided. By all odds, study the portrait closely. It is a superb example of Stuart at his best, and a magnificent impression of a gentleman in the days of the Revolution.

◆

Julius Moessel, no' l Chicago painter, has just completed a beautiful series of 15 murals for the Field Museum of Natural History. They are installed in hall 25 and are a most important addition to the worth while art in Chicago. The murals show the production, gathering, and distribution of vegetable food in many parts of the world and present scenes illustrating the conditions which prevailed in the past as contrasted to those we find today. Mr. Moessel has done a perfect piece of work; it is hard to overpraise this type of sincere, sound, and authentic painting, which is decorative in addition to being instructive.



"PORTRAIT OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN."

This superb portrait by Carle Van Loo is one of a group of historical portraits on view at the Anderson Galleries, 530 South Michigan avenue.

Adviser Urges Women's Role for Defense

By Betty Browning.

With women's share in the country's defense preparations increasing the preoccupation of civic minded organizations, Miss Harriet W. Elliott's article in the October issue of the Journal of the American Association of University Women is particularly deserving of attention here.

Miss Harriet Elliott. [Acme Photo.]

The association is in the vanguard of those bodies which are studying how best to adjust their programs to the demands of the times. Miss Elliott's recommendations to women interested in patriotic service in many instances underscore findings of the association's conferences on national defense recently held in various parts of the country.

As consumer adviser on the advisory commission to the Council of National Defense and, incidentally, its only woman member, Miss Elliott suggests to women who would aid in the nation's defense: "Get acquainted with the state and local defense setup and arrange for an active relationship therewith."

* * *

Six areas are listed by Miss Elliott as offering opportunity for coöperation between public and private efforts toward a more effective national defense. These are "agricultural resources and production, civil protection; health, welfare, and consumer interests; housing, works, and facilities; human resources and skills, and industrial resources and production."

Problems of consumer protection and health and welfare, particularly, call for coöperation of citizens in general, Miss Elliott emphasizes.

"These social aspects of defense," she insists, "will depend upon the active coöperation of the people of the United States, organized and unorganized."

Lay organizations, such as the American Association of University Women, Miss Elliott emphasizes, may contribute much by continuing their work "to maintain and strengthen our American way of life."

Miss Elliott is professor of political science and dean of women at the University of North Carolina.

* * *

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers is among the organizations which have chosen to contribute toward the national defense, in the fashion recommended by Miss Elliott, by hewing to the line of their customary activities in behalf of child welfare, education, health, and citizenship.

Mrs. William Kletzer.

"Every expression of our program is a phase of our defense of democracy," Mrs. William Kletzer of Portland, Ore., national president, explained following the semiannual meeting of the board of managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers last week-end in Chicago.

A national legislation program adopted at the session will provide guidance for united action of affiliated state organizations in coming months. Abolition of compulsory block booking and blind selling of motion pictures, and federal aid for education, with minimum federal control and maximum local support, are items on the program.

Women who served their country just behind the battle lines in the last war will flock from midwestern states to Angola, Ind., next Saturday and Sunday when 5th and 6th corps area units of the Women's Overseas Service league will hold the first joint corps area conference since the world war.

Besides assisting war veterans and their dependents and coöperating with other patriotic organizations in civic ventures, the league has pioneered in behalf of disabled ex-service women not eligible for government aid.

"Youth and the National Emergency" will be the theme of the first fall luncheon meeting of the Association for Family Living at 11:45 o'clock tomorrow at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. Howard Y. McClusky, professor of educational psychology at the University of Michigan, will speak.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, September 25, 1892.

Dear Julia: I feel rather disheartened tonight, reading of the enthusiasm evoked by an English music hall singer, Lottie Collins, in a silly song called "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay." She is said to have received $300 a week for this entertainment, in which she does a kicking dance, as she sings the refrain.

Lottie Collins.

Once the path to fame and fortune was a toilsome one, but now a woman who is willing to lay aside her modesty and womanly grace is rewarded by a larger salary than a fine actress receives. Similarly, a prize fighter in one night can make more than the honest workman can accumulate in a lifetime.

There was an article about this in one of our newspapers lately, and reference was made to a woman brought up in a cultured home, but now receiving much money on the stage simply because she had received the indorsement of a dissolute prince. I suppose that referred to Lily Langtry and the Prince of Wales. Don't you think so?

I had heard of Lottie Collins' song, for the children shout the refrain when they come over here, but I had really never known the words until I saw them in the newspaper article I was reading. I was horrified by its vulgarity. Here is the first stanza:

"A smart and stylish girl you see,
Belle of good society,
Not too strict, but rather free,
Yet as right as right can be!
Never forward, never bold,
Not too hot and not too cold,
But the very thing, I'm told,
That in your arms you'd like to hold."
Refrain, repeated eight times: "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay."

I understand the words were written by an American, but I don't think it's typical of American humor. Will says the author was one Henry J. Sayers, a theatrical press agent, who heard the song in a low dive in St. Louis, the words being unspeakable. He wrote more acceptable stanzas and it was used in "Tuxedo," a minstrel farce comedy. From America it traveled to England where it was even more successful when sung by Lottie Collins.

Sandy, in speaking of the craze for it, says some of the parodies are much more amusing than the real verses. One of these sings the praises of a girl in Baltimore, ["streetcar runs right by her door,"] and ends with a suggestion, "Johnny, get your hair cut pompadour." Pompadours for men as well as women are all the rage here. Martha Junior was trying to get her young son Esmond to brush his hair into that popular coiffure when they were here one day for dinner. Esmond's hair is so thick the effect was that of his having a new shoe brush above his forehead.

Quite a contrast to cheap stage favorites was Patrick Gilmore, band leader, who died yesterday in St. Louis. Shall we ever have such a band as his again? He was not an old man, only 63, for he was born in Dublin in 1829. Coming to Canada with a military band when he was only 15, he liked the New World so well he decided to remain. He was leading a band in Salem, Mass., I believe, when the civil war broke out, and he enlisted as a band leader. When the war ended he toured America and Europe, winning high praise over there as well as in the United States.

Will thinks his organization of two "Peace Jubilees," one in 1869 and one in 1872, held in Boston, would entitle him to a place in the Hall of Fame, if he had no other claim. I didn't attend either of these entertainments, but you remember there was much in the papers at the time about them. His work on these was colossal . . . collecting a chorus of 10,000 voices; an orchestra of 800 pieces; the most eminent soloists of the world, and erecting a building to accommodate 30,000 persons.

All honor to Patrick Gilmore, whose beautiful music delighted the world. Your loving friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Gilmore's was a famous band of the Seventies and Eighties. Has any reader a memory of this fine organization?

Thumbing thru an old music book, we found the "Song of a Thousand Years," which was sung in high school in our time. Written by Henry C. Work, Connecticut-born, but a resident of Chicago for many years, this is a song for today. We give one verse, with the chorus, and shall be glad to send the entire song [words only] to readers who send a stamped envelope for it. Work wrote also "Marching Thru Georgia," "Grandfather's Clock," of which 800,000 copies were sold, and "Father, Dear Father, Come Home with Me Now," sung in "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

Song of a Thousand Years.

Lift up your eyes, desponding freemen!
Fling to the winds your needless fears!
He who unfurled your glorious banner
Says it shall wave a thousand years!

Chorus:
A thousand years, my own Columbia!
'Tis the glad day so long foretold!
'Tis the glad morn whose early twilight
Washington saw in times of old.

Art Notes

An exhibit of water color compositions and photographs of architecture by Bruce Goff and his students is on view at the Paul Theobald Galleries, 104 South Michigan avenue, for one month. The compositions are decorative efforts at abstract design. They are colorful and effective, viewed as decorations and not as pictures. Mr. Goff's photographs of architecture are most interesting. His buildings are modern and good modern, without too much emphasis on monotony of line. Settings do a great deal for the modern building, and these modern buildings against a sketched background of trees and shrubs are charming.

"The Evil Eye" Scares Indians; It's a Camera!

By Frederic Babcock.

SANTIAGO ATITLAN, GUATEMALA. In some parts of Guatemala the Indians welcome the tourists, and in other parts they don't. This town belongs to the "don't" class.

Here the townsfolk regard the intruders with suspicion, if not aversion. If the intruder happens to be a blonde, she is much less than welcome. If the tourist happens to be carrying a camera, he is even worse off than the blonde. For, to the Indians, a camera is "The Evil Eye," and, therefore, to be avoided as if it were a pestilence.

Squaws carrying papooses pickaback either run, shrieking, or hide their young, and glare at the amateur photographer, when the camera is turned their way. It doesn't take a psychiatrist to discover that they haven't a trace of the exhibitionist complex.

Just why blondes are detested here is something your correspondent hasn't been able to learn.

• • •

All of which doesn't mean that travelers should avoid Santiago Atitlan. Quite the contrary. In some respects this is the most distinctive village in a land full of distinctions.

It lies in a mass of lava at the foot of the Toliman volcano, a little more than an hour's boat ride across Lake Atitlan from our headquarters at Panajachel. This setting is picturesque enough, but the costumes are even more so.

Some one has said that the dress of the women here has the classic simplicity of the attire of the ancient Greeks. White huipiles [blouses] with fine purple and red stripes, skirts in bright red, and blue or red shawls are featured, but the crowning glory is the red headdress. It's sort of a cross between a halo and an oversized doughnut. [Our traveling companion tells us it's a large piece of handwoven cloth twisted into a roll.]

• • •

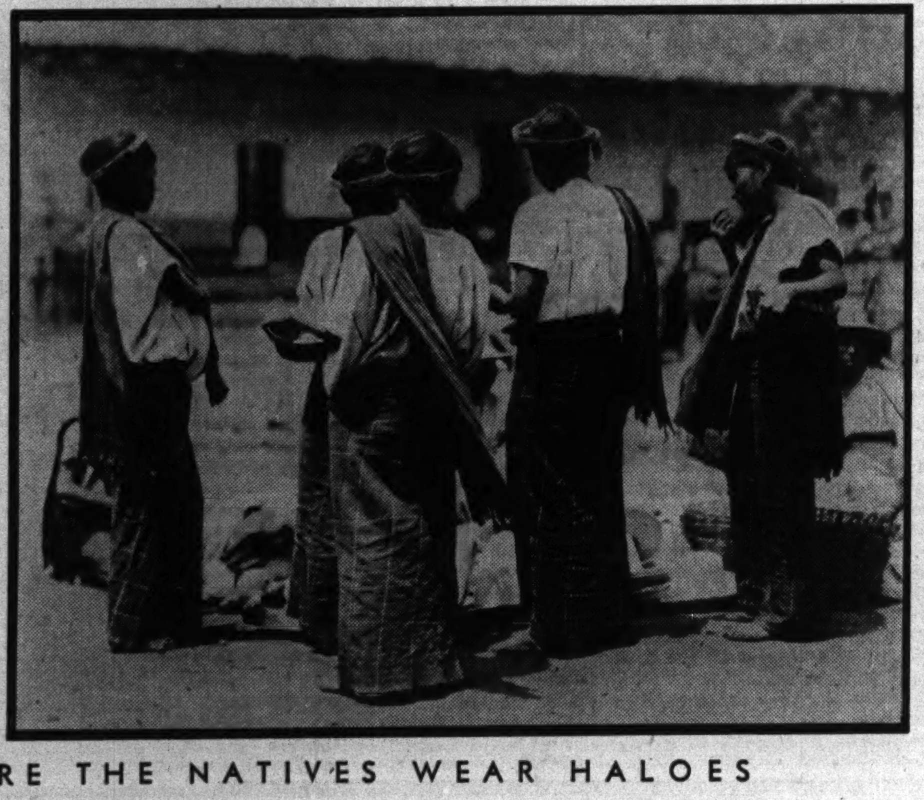
The men content themselves with knee length, striped trousers, white shirts, and some sort of a black frock that, instead of being worn, is thrown over the shoulders. That is all the civilians have. The soldiers [or maybe they're policemen] have even less. Those we saw lounging in front of the comandancia [jail] were barefooted, and their uniforms were nondescript affairs of practically no elegance. Sergeants and corporals displayed their authority by attaching—with safety pins!—chevrons to their ragged sleeves.

Both men and women gather in the public market [every day is market day here, but Saturday is the best day to see the spectacle], sit in the dust, gossip, and exchange their wares. Nobody—except the tourists—bothers them, unless they grow quarrelsome, in which case the soldiers step in and haul them to a building marked Juzgado de Paz. This building, we take it, is where the justice of peace straightens out all difficulties.

• • •

We see another structure marked Deposito Fiscal de Licores, and, harking back to our college Spanish, we wonder if this is where the Indians pay their liquor taxes. We note kettles atop thatched roofs, and this stumps us completely. We speculate as to why, with all the stone available, the people here live in huts of mud, surrounded by walls of mud.

We try to figure out what would happen if some one should come along, some day, and pave the dirt roads, build homes of concrete, and clothe the people in the latest styles. But it is obvious that, if this were ever done, Santiago Atitlan would look like 10,000 other mountain villages, and, therefore, no longer would be one of Central America's leading travel attractions.



WHERE THE NATIVES WEAR HALOES

Indian women at the public market in Santiago Atitlan, Guatemala. Their unusual attire is described in an adjoining story by The Tribune travel editor.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcome. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

WANTS MORE ABOUT THE EAST.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—To the Travel Editor: I wish to tell you how much I enjoy the travel features in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. They are a liberal education in themselves, and, no matter how much one travels, he could not visit all the places described in your paper. I have made several scrapbooks of these articles.

But I wish that you would print more about the United States, especially the New England and middle Atlantic states, as there has been very little about them, and they have so much of interest.

It seems to me that a travel trek thru the historic east would be of special interest in these troublesome times.

M. B. HANSON.

THANK YOU DEPARTMENT.

South Holland, Ill., Sept. 18.—To the Travel Editor: I wish to thank all The Tribune readers who sent me such lovely cards and letters and interesting articles. Words cannot express how much I appreciated this kindness. It has given me a great deal of enjoyment.

[MISS] JANE MURRAY.

Indian Summer Lures Crowd to Land of the Sky

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 28.—Indian summer in the "Land of the Sky" is becoming one of the favorite touring seasons in North Carolina. Thousands of visitors are attracted here each fall to view the forest colors.

More than 150 varieties of trees and nearly 2,000 species of shrubs contribute to the picture. There are displays of color in the Pisgah National forest, the Sapphire country, along the Blue Ridge parkway, and in the Great Smoky Mountains National park.

Charlevoix Plans Fishing Festival

Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 28.—The Sportsmen's club and the board of commerce here are sponsoring a fall fishing festival, and arrangements are being made to floodlight the Round lake docks to facilitate the nightly smelt fishing.

The festival will be held when the smelt, perch, steelhead, and lake trout angling are at their best.

Boyne City, at the end of Lake Charlevoix, also has fall smelt fishing.

Travel Club to Meet.

The Lena Barr Morse Travel club, devoted to the cause of the shut-ins, will have a luncheon and meeting at the Graymont hotel, 1032 East 46th street, at 1 p. m. Saturday. The Rev. J. L. McLaughlin will show pictures of the Mediterranean. It is announced that the public is invited to attend, and that reservations may be made up to Friday noon by phoning Lafayette 6448 or Virginia 1969.

Cheetah Is the Original Poor Sport

By Mason Warner.

LORENZO MARQUES, MOZAMBIQUE. Luck varies from day to day in Kruger park. One day will be so filled with sights of game that the observer gets tired of them; the next day, there may be nothing to see except impalas, wildebeests, and zebras, with not a lion, leopard, cheetah, giraffe, warthog, or other less common animal to be seen.

Our first day's luck was too good to last. On our second and third we cruised for miles and hours with glimpses of game few and far between. Altogether, we drove 600 miles in four days, and we saw everything there was to see except rhinoceroes.

• • •

Not until our third day did we sight an elephant. We followed his spoor for two hours. That was easy, for his path was strewn with broken branches of trees and uprooted saplings. We could not get close to him, because he had crossed the Oliphant river. He was eating the lush green growth on the opposite low bank of the river. Five or six cars had converged at the scene, and we were told there were two more elephants a mile down stream, but we did not seek them on account of the rough road.

That road inspired a question.

"If you cannot get out of a car in the park, what do you do in case of a puncture or blowout?" my daughter asked.

The guide replied: "You stay in the car where you are until help comes. If no other car passes to report your accident, your failure to come in at sundown to the camp where you are booked will start a rescue car on the search for you. A repair man and a warden with a gun will be in that car. While the repair man works, the game warden stands guard. If it's engine trouble, they tow you to the nearest camp."

• • •

On the fourth day we spotted a group of seven cheetahs, or "hunting leopards." They resemble ordinary leopards in coloring, but are marked with solid spots instead of small black rings. They differ, too, in their methods of killing. The ordinary leopard lies in wait and springs upon his victim in sudden surprise attack; the cheetah, longer legged and swifter than his victim, courses and runs down his prey, springs upon his back and starts to devour the poor antelope, zebra, or wildebeest while he is still on the run.

Residents of Kruger National park.

"The cheetah is a nasty beast," said our guide. "Compared to him, the lion is a gentleman. The lion kills before he starts to eat, and he makes sure his prey is dead before he takes a bite. By the way, the lioness does most of the killing for food for the family. She kills by breaking the neck of her prey; simply reaches across the shoulders with her right paw and pulls its head back or to one side until the vertebra cracks."

• • •

Daughter spoke up. "I've seen so many thousands of impalas, it doesn't seem that the lions kill many of them."

Our guide replied: "A lion kills for food every second or third day; so he probably kills 100 to 150 times a year. They say there are more than 600 full grown lions in the park. They live 20 years or longer. The average one will kill and eat 2,000 animals in his lifetime. The daily slaughter in the park must range from 300 to 500. The lions' first choice appears to be zebra; next, antelope; then, wildebeest, but when hungry they will kill leopards, warthogs, giraffes, or anything."

• • •

Witnessing a kill is a longed for thrill by all visitors. That, too, is all a matter of luck. A few years ago one tourist saw two killings in one afternoon, by different lions, of course. In 10 years of service, our guide had seen only two.

On our last afternoon we were driving along a little traveled road when we sighted a herd of a hundred or more wildebeest, with a big bull, near the road, evidently acting as guard. He was gazing intently across the road. Looking to see what he was watching, we sighted a huge lioness lying at ease 100 feet from the car. She had been observing the gnu sentry, and our car stopped in her line of vision. She got up and walked slowly back about 10 feet, laid down again, and resumed her study of the lone watchman and his herd.

"She is getting the lay of the land for tonight's kill," commented our guide.

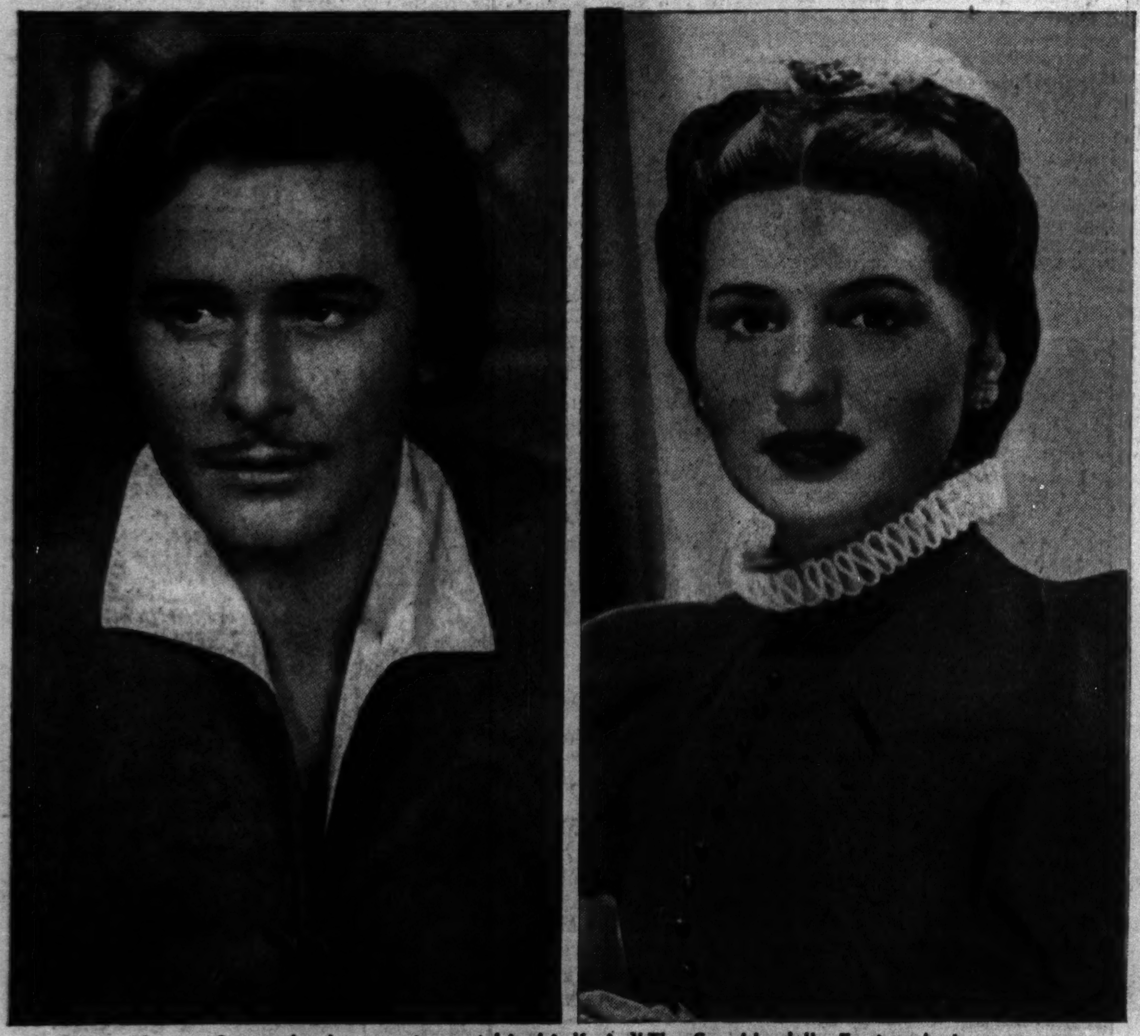
Above: They're calling her "Busy Bet" out in Hollywood because she's forever on the job. Bette Davis, to you, and she's coming out soon in "The Letter".



Above: Screendom's newest great big birdie is "The Sea Hawk." Featured players are Errol Flynn and Brenda Marshall. (Garrick.)

Above: Rita Hayworth "soared to stardom on the wings of four performances"—to quote an admirer. Here she is as "The Lady in Question" in the film of that name.

Above: Gale Page appears opposite Pat O'Brien in "Knute Rockne, All American." Its world premier will be in South Bend Oct. 4.

Above: You are looking now at Martha Scott and Cary Grant, co-featured in "The Howards of Virginia". Martha, you may recall, made her screen debut in "Our Town".

Above: Linda Darnell and Tyrone Power essay to hold fans spellbound in a featured production entitled "Brigham Young." (Chicago.)

'Ladies in Retirement' Opens in Loop Tomorrow Night

Flora Robson Plays Lead in Murder Play

Tomorrow night the Harris theater gets its first play of the season, "Ladies in Retirement." One of last year's Broadway successes, it is also the first subscription offering of the local Theater guild and the American Theater society.

"Ladies in Retirement" would be a distinguished production if for no other reason than that it brought Flora Robson to the American stage. For the last decade she has been one of England's leading actresses, but her appearances on these shores have been limited to the silver screens of motion picture houses.

That has been something, however! For, altho Miss Robson has never been starred in a film, her performances in featured rôles have frequently dominated the pictures. Those who saw her as the Russian Empress Elizabeth in "Catherine the Great" have not forgotten the lascivious portrait she drew nor the innuendoes she conveyed—as good as any by Mae West. Her two versions of the English Queen Elizabeth, in "Fire Over England" and in "The Sea Hawk," were notable for combined dignity, fire, and humanity. As the unpleasant, nagging wife in "We Are Not Alone" she evolved a credible character out of a type, and as Ellen Dean in "Wuthering Heights" she lent importance to a minor rôle, in both cases thru the artful simplicity of her acting and the sheer force of her personality.

With considerable humor Miss Robson claims that she is probably the only person in the theater who was ever forced into it. It seems that her father was a mariner with strong artistic impulses. Since seafaring occupied all his time he took out these impulses on his five daughters, making each pursue one of the arts. In Flora's case it was acting, and when she was only 5 she was informed that she was to go on the stage. To show that she must take this decision seriously she was given private lessons at home and encouraged to tackle, of all things, "Faust!"

As an honor graduate of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and as an esteemed member of the Ben Greet Shakespearean company and the Oxford playhouse repertory group, she won fine notices in the early part of her career but no parts in the London theater. But in this she had no better luck than some of her equally unknown colleagues at that time: John Gielgud, Raymond Massey, Elissa Landi, and Robert Donat.

Discouraged by the fact that she was considered too young for character parts and not good looking enough for romantic ingénue leads, Miss Robson quit the stage from 1925 to 1929. During those four years she was a social worker in a factory. There she discovered that a theater could serve as one of the best recreational outlets for the workers, and accordingly the American owners of the factory built her one. In putting on plays there she got her first taste of directing, which she thinks "fosters a sense for the development of a play as a whole." Directing also gave her a chance to work out characterizations which would never fall her way otherwise.

Back on the stage once again, it wasn't long before the actress gained acclaim and prominence as Mary Paterson in one of James Bridie's plays, "The Anatomist." Later came the inevitable season at the Old Vic, where among other things she played Lady Macbeth opposite Charles Laughton.

In "Ladies in Retirement" she is cast as an elderly woman who murders and impersonates another for the sake of her two simple minded and dependent sisters. The play is broadly patterned after an actual crime and is the work of two Englishmen, Edward Percy and Reginald Denham, the latter also being an accomplished actor, director, and producer.

• • •

Curiously enough, of the four shows that are in town this week two originated not in New York but in Hollywood, "Meet the People" and "The Male Animal." The latter was first produced in Los Angeles by Arthur J. Beckhard, where the co-author and star, Elliott Nugent, was then directing pictures. Later, of course, Herman Shumlin succeeded Mr. Beckhard, and he remade the production after his own brilliant fashion for a New York opening.

On the other hand, "Meet the People," which made a cheerful beginning at the Grand Opera house last night, came to life out west and will not see the shores of the Atlantic until it is thru entertaining Chicago. In one way "Meet the People" might be classified as spontaneous combustion, for it represented a lot of talent, impatient to be released and all of it compressed within the confines of Hollywood. Yet the boys and girls in the cast of the revue would probably resent the phrase "spontaneous combustion," remembering the two or more months of tedious rehearsals without pay while trying to find funds enough to ring up the curtain on their show. In any event, Los Angeles had and has [there is a second company of the musical still flourishing there] a show it could call its own and be proud of, while the motion picture producers are kicking themselves for passing up talent that was lying idle under their very noses.

Leon Ames.
[Vandamm Photo.]

Leon Ames, who makes the ex-football hero in "The Male Animal," such an ingratiating character, is not just acting when he uses football jargon so glibly, for in his Hoosier schooldays he once carried the ball for dear old Delphi High as a genuine half back. In between these actual and synthetic phases of his career as a pigskin carrier he has had a varied time of it. He enjoyed a fling in aviation, rising from private to lieutenant after joining the 113th Observation Squadron of the navy. From aviation he went backward in the alphabet to acting, journeying to Broadway in search of a job. He got one in Charles K. Champlin's repertory company, which toured New England with second-run Broadway hits. Later the road saw him for two years in "The Cat and the Canary" and as the lead in the touring company of "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em." Other stock company jobs led him back once more to Broadway, where he played three diverse rôles in as many plays for a grand total of 37 performances. Once outside of New York he struck better luck again, for he landed the part of Lov Bensey in the west coast company of "Tobacco Road," which ran profitably for 65 weeks. He played the same rôle in the troupe that inhabited the Selwyn theater before the censors shoed it out. Other engagements led to some motion picture work, including the part of Louis Napoleon in that highly distorted bit of history known as "Suez." "The Male Animal" finally brought him that elusive item, a good part on Broadway. It's still a good part as he plays it night after night at the Selwyn, where this honestly funny comedy seems securely installed.

Rehearsals are in progress for the first production of the Loyola Community theater's 14th season, Harry James Smith's "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," a comedy which once served Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske as an amiable vehicle. William F. Madden is directing the play, and Catherine Wallace Hennessy is cast in the title rôle. The performance dates are Oct. 14 and 15. The Rev. F. G. Dinneen, S. J., pastor of St. Ignatius church, continues as the spiritual moderator of the organization, which he founded.

Later productions of the Loyola group will include Victor Wolfson's "Excursion," Dec. 2 and 3; Richard Breen and Harry Schnibbe's "Who Ride on White Horses?", a play about Edmund Campion, March 24 and 25; Graham Moffett's "Bunty Pulls the Strings," May 12 and 13. On Jan. 21 and 22 the Notre Dame players will give two guest performances of Max Marcin's "Cheating Cheaters."

* * *

The first offering of the Spectator players, Thomas F. Guider, director, will be "Dark Victory," by George Brewer Jr., which will be given in Curtiss hall on Oct. 11 and 12. Subsequent attractions will be a streamlined version of "The Taming of the Shrew," "What a Life," and "The Importance of Being Earnest."

On Thursday night the 10th season of Members' Series plays, produced by the School of Drama at the Goodman Memorial theater, will open with "This Fine Pretty World" by Percy Mackaye, the American playwright who is best known for his pioneer work in the community theater movement. It is a comedy of the Kentucky mountains, and its title is offered "in good faith" since it was penned during a more cheerful era in 1923. The production will be given for two weeks with a matinée on Thursday, the 10th, and a Sunday evening performance on the 13th. Credit for the direction, sets, and costumes is due to David Itkin, Spencer Davies, and Virginia Opsvig, respectively.

The Children's theater at the Goodman will start its season on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 26, with Charlotte Chorpenning's version of "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp." It is scheduled for six consecutive Saturday afternoons.

* * *

The Barnum players, operating in the Fine Arts building, will stage Samson Raphaelson's "Accent on Youth" on Oct. 30 as its initial venture of the season. It will be given an intimate production, without benefit of stage, footlights, proscenium arch and other conventions, all of it taking place in a room in which the players and audience mingle. Letitia V. Barnum is the director.

* * *

To open their 15th year of active production the Jack and Jill players will give their version of "The Comedy of Errors" at the Woman's Club theater on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 2. Mary Agnes Foley, founder of this children's organization, will direct as usual.

* * *

Altho the Mummers theater has not yet selected its first play for the season its workshop is open and is going ahead under the guidance of its staff: Shermans Marks, Francis X. Bushman, Victor Sutherland, John Goldsworthy, and Don Koehler.

2 New Shows for Chicago Stages

Olsen, Johnson Celebrate Two Years' Success

By Burns Mantle.

New York [Special].—There was a new drama last week. And there was "Hellzapoppin," too. In fact, you might say truthfully that there appears to be a little "Hellzapoppin" in everything that happens on Broadway these days. Both theatrically and politically.

The drama was one called "Johnny Belinda," which has to do with the stage tragedy of a heroine who speaks only one line all evening. She is a deaf-mute and is roughly pushed around before she arrives at a happy ending with a husband and a baby.

The "Hellzapoppin" feature was a birthday party tendered the Messrs. Olsen and Johnson, who have been playing that vaudeville revue in these parts for the last two years and are actually still selling standing room to many of their performances in the Winter Garden.

Curious geniuses are born to the theater. This "Hellzapoppin" scores on both counts. At the birthday party all manner of practical jokers were represented, partly thru their own impulses and partly because an industrious publicity department had suggested the stunts.

The presents included a variety of live goats, a bull calf, a burro, and a lion cub. There was literally a barnyard full of animals. Western friends of Olsen went to all the trouble of recovering, and shipping to the Winter Garden, a Chic Sale number that had graced the landscape of a farm where Olsen had once lived and carved his name in the woodwork.

• • •

Ole Olsen.

To give the occasion an added touch of hilarity, the birthday audience contained a convention of mayors. These honest representatives of our democracy, with Mayor La-Guardia of New York as their host, had warned the management that they would not put up with any of the Olsen-Johnson indignities during the show. They did not propose to be kidded, nor would they serve as stooges to serve a press man's holiday.

• • •

So, what happens? The mayors were practically ignored by the performers, but managed to get into the show by dancing in the aisles with the showgirls during the "Boomps-a-Daisy" number, and organizing a choral group, consisting of Mayor Angelo Rossi of San Francisco, Mayor Ross Rogers of Amarillo, Mayor Ian Boyer of St. Petersburg, Mayor Joseph Scholtz of Louisville, and Mayor George McCoy of Pawtucket, to sing "Sweet Adeline" on an after the show broadcast.

The boys sawed a 20 pound birthday cake in two with a bandsaw, and among the organized surprises was one in which a vested boys' choir Corner marched solemnly up the aisle singing "Happy Birthday to You," wound up with a bit of "Holy Night," and then, tossing aside their surplices, pulled out revolvers and shot them into the air.

A moment later another huge birthday package was rolled on the stage. It looked as tho it might be a cake covered with a blanket of roses. After Olsen and Johnson had accepted it, and had had their pictures taken, the blanket began to bulge in the middle, and out stepped Broadway Rose, a local street character familiar to Times square crowds.

• • •

Chic Johnson.

I suppose Olsen and Johnson are entitled to their fun. And their success. They have come pretty far the last 26 years, and in the last two years have topped many records. The popular story is that, as a couple of college cut-ups, they headed out of Northwestern university and scored an early success in vaudeville. The record, I think, reads that Johnson was a vaudeville pianist with a chap named Wallace, and Olsen a singer with a college quartet. They were looking for song material in a Chicago music publishing house when they met and formed their partnership.

• • •

The boys had their ups and downs in vaudeville. The Zany business veers with the winds of popularity, but is fairly stable. Their ambition to do a vaudeville revue on Broadway was born as far back as 1925, when they had tried one called "Monkey Business" with some success in the west. In September, 1938, they found Lee Shubert willing to take a gambler's chance with them because he needed an attraction for the Forty-sixth Street theater. The rest, as you know, is show shop history.

Olsen and Johnson were very happy the night they served free beer and cake at their second birthday party. They plan now to keep the original "Hellzapoppin" at the Winter Garden indefinitely and to send a second similar troupe touring. They have invested their profits in both show business and real estate.

• • •

The "Johnny Belinda" drama, written by Elmer Harris, whose former play chores have included "Young Sinners" and "A Modern Virgin," had the play reviewers fumbling for terms of classification and explanation.

It is perhaps the most obvious theater piece that has been recently staged, and yet, because it is frankly an emotional drama depending on situations that, however artificial, are still fundamentally appealing, it had a first-night audience weeping when the deaf-mute heroine was in trouble, and cheering when she defeated the forces of evil that had her down.

Otherwise, a dull September in the theater waits on a promising October.

'Your Loving Son' to Tour.

Ezra Stone, producer, director, and leading player of "Your Loving Son," plans to tour the comedy for seven weeks, starting Oct. 14, prior to a Broadway engagement. The tour is expected to reach as far west as Milwaukee.

Carl Ravazza at Aragon with Jurgens Today

By Will Davidson.

A voice that is fast becoming one of the most popular in the country will be heard this afternoon and evening at the Aragon ballroom when Carl Ravazza appears with his band as a one day co-feature with Dick Jurgens. Carl had a very popular run at the Colony club not long ago, and indications are that he may soon be playing in the Trianon on a longer term basis. His band is sweet, yet versatile enough to provide a dance impelling type of music. And the choral work, led by Ravazza himself, is of a quality rare in the popular entertainment field.

Dick Jurgens is too well known to Chicago to need much comment. His is a youthful orchestra with personality that is as refreshing and infectious as the tunes it plays. Dick has the knack of pouring a molten sort of music into the exacting molds of modern dance arrangements and bringing out a highly polished product that provides another explanation of the Jurgens long term popularity.

June Storm.

An amusing and very skillful little group of musicians has taken over the Buttery, lock, stock, and beer barrel polka. They are the Gertrude Niesen Note-Ables [and Miss Gertrude should be thanked for discovering them, and spanked for giving them that name]. Piano, organ, drums, and violin, plus a deep throated, haunting voice—they make music as rich and rhythmic as that of a full sized band. But very few large bands have the collective sense of humor of this group. Ringleader of the whimsicalities is Chuck Freeman, a drummer who twitches and thumps with a very refined sort of insane abandon. Bobby Swain, violinist and leader; Rene Favre, pianist, and Rich Hayes, organist, are the fellow conspirators. June Storm looks like Hedy Lamarr and sings like a glamorized angel. The répertoire of this group ranges from the peddling proclivities of Princess Papuli to the more serious moods of Poet and Peasant. The musicians go confidently and successfully to both extremes, and every one has fun all the way between.

The very special hit being scored by the Four Inkspots at the Blackhawk calls for a bit of belated biography. Top Tenor Billy Kenny is a 6 foot 2 inch graduate of football teams and midget auto races. He's a recent Benedick. Charles Gladward Fuqua, who plays guitar and sings baritone, entered radio in 1928 as a graduate of Booker T. Washington High school. The personality kid, Ivory "Deek" Watson, whose make-up keeps coming off, composes songs, tries to catch fish, and likes to recount the old days in vaudeville. The cello player, who sings from his shoe tops, is Orville "Hoppy" Jones. A publicity release on him says: "Before he made his first radio appearance in March, 1929, he was a dancer and M. C. Now he is the father of twins." I don't get it.

Boswelling the bistros:

Duke Ellington holds over at the Sherman's Panther room thru Oct. 17, and will be followed by Harry James, the trumpeting jive man. . . . The new decorations at Harry's New Yorker are causing a lot of comment. The color scheme is strictly neo-world's fair, and the posters on the wall exemplify a type of humor that just slays some people. Producer Dave Branower is well satisfied with his show, which stars Arne Barnett's band and Winnie Hoveler's Dancing Darlings. . . . Incidentally, Audrey Hoveler, Winnie's older sister and co-worker in the line, will be married to Arne today at her home. It's a romance that has survived five years of show business. . . . Dining in the gracious atmosphere of old Chicago is the appeal of the recently reopened Southern Tea Shop at Huron and Wabash. Once the home of Julian Rumsey, Chicago's civil war mayor, the old house has been redecorated in the charming and nostalgic decor of that period with such good taste that this has become one of those sought after spots, a restaurant where good food is augmented not by a conversation dimming show, but by an atmosphere that takes one out of the everyday world. Miss Herma Clark, author of THE TRIBUNE's column, "When Chicago Was Young," launched the tea shop with an interesting talk about the history of the house.

Woman's Symphony Orchestra Announces Brilliant Series

Ballet Treats Will Augment Music Season

[This is the second of two articles on miscellaneous concert and dance series planned for the 1940-'41 Chicago season.]

By Edward Barry.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra, whose jubilee season of 1940-'41 was treated in some detail in this column earlier in the month, will not be the only organization of its kind catering to the local public this year. The Woman's Symphony orchestra has already announced its complete plans. The Illinois Symphony orchestra, the Chicago Business Men's orchestra, and the Civic Orchestra of Chicago may all be depended upon to play their usual rôles.

Mischa Mischakoff.

The woman's orchestra, under its now famous conductor, Izler Solomon, will give concerts in Orchestra hall on Oct. 15, Nov. 19, Dec. 11, and Jan. 8. Soloist at the first will be Mischa Mischakoff, former concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, who is now holding the corresponding post in Toscanini's radio orchestra in New York. Mr. Mischakoff won a large following here during the years he occupied the place of honor at Frederick Stock's left, and he may confidently be expected to give this opening concert of the Woman's Symphony orchestra season its proper gala atmosphere. He is both an excellent violinist and an attractive personality.

At the second concert the orchestra will present Robert Topping, the young tenor who won the 1939 Chicago Opera auditions. Not a soloist, but an assisting group—the Chicago Symphonic choir, Walter Aschenbrenner, director—will be featured at the orchestra's third concert.

To close the season Josef and Rosina Lhevinne, duo-pianists, will give a demonstration of a type of art which has grown increasingly popular during these last few years. Mr. Lhevinne is a Russian who is familiar to Chicago thru his teaching here and thru his many appearances in recital and with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. As far as memory and available records go Mr. and Mrs. Lhevinne have never before played together in public here.

• • •

The plans of the Illinois Symphony orchestra are not very far along. An announcement made last week, however, carried assurance that there will be a 1940-'41 series and that the policies of other years—a high percentage of novelties and a profusion of younger soloists—will be continued. The season will probably start late in October and will probably run on Monday night. No information is available yet on the location.

The only known fact about the coming season of the Chicago Business Men's orchestra is that at the final concert, which is to be given in Orchestra hall in May, a young instrumentalist chosen in contest will be presented as soloist. The contest is being conducted by the Society of American Musicians in coöperation with the business men's orchestra. Doubtless there will be at least two concerts by the orchestra previous to this one.

The Civic Orchestra of Chicago, a training school for orchestral players, will present its regular Orchestra hall concert series after the holidays.

• • •

Lovers of the ballet have in store for them what is probably the most brilliant season in the city's history. Besides short stops by the various groups mentioned in this column last Sunday, there will be longer local engagements by three of the most important companies in the world. Col. W. de Basil's Ballet Russe will give seven performances in the Auditorium theater between Oct. 28 and Nov. 2, the Ballet theater is to settle down in the Civic Opera house for the entire month of November and part of December, and Leonid Massine's Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo is scheduled for its regular holiday engagement at the Auditorium.

Col. De Basil's company, now called the Original Ballet Russe, has not been here since early in 1938. For five years previous to that it visited the Auditorium regularly, and many of its members are affectionately remembered here for the perfection of their work and the interest of their personalities. Among those who were with the company on its earlier visits, and who are expected to turn up here the end of next month, are Irina Baronova, Tatiana Riabouchinska, Tamara Toumanova, Lubov Tchernicheva, Nina Verchinina, David Lichine, Roman Jasinsky, Paul Petroff, Serge Grigorieff, and Antal Dorati. Mr. Grigorieff was and is regisseur, and he used to come to the actual stage occasionally for such rôles as the Russian merchant in "Bontique Fantasque." Mr. Dorati, formerly co-conductor, is now musical director.

Sono Osato, an enchanting Chicagoan of mixed Japanese and American blood, stayed with the company thru all its wartime difficulties and on this visit will make her first appearance in her home town in nearly three years. While the troupe was in Australia Miss Osato was entrusted with at least one major rôle. There is every reason to believe that she will be featured during the ballet's Chicago engagement.

About Massine's Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo the only fact now available is that the Chicago engagement will consist of 15 performances. Personnel and repertoire have not yet been announced.

BALLET STAR RETURNING

One of the old favorites returning with the Original Ballet Russe to the Auditorium theater on Oct. 28 is Tamara Toumanova. The company will stay for one week, giving seven performances.

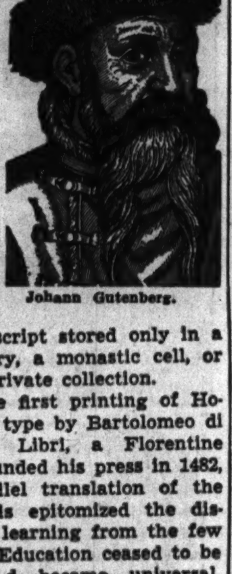
World Honors Gutenberg and His Invention

By the Rev. John Evans.



Johann Gutenberg.

The glory of Gutenberg's invention 500 years ago is brilliantly reflected in the facilities of modern education. Before the invention of printing from movable type, whatever knowledge mankind had was transmitted by the onerous labor of a scribe, conveyed from scholar to scholar almost individually, and in manuscript stored only in a princely library, a monastic cell, or a magnate's private collection.

Between the first printing of Homer in Greek type by Bartolomeo di Francesco di Libri, a Florentine priest who founded his press in 1482, and the parallel translation of the Loeb classic is epitomized the dissemination of learning from the few to the many. Education ceased to be oligarchic and became universal, which explains why the world this year is celebrating the 500th anniversary of Gutenberg's pioneering.

Universities were the first to recognize this revolutionary addition to the graphic arts; they were ever foremost in handing the torch of progress. So today, aware of their heritage and conscious of their responsibility, they are taking the lead in recognizing the debt that the world owes to Gutenberg's practical genius.

• • •

The exact date of Johann Gutenberg's birth is unknown; it is assumed to be somewhere in the last three years of the 14th century. He was the son of Friele zum Gensfleisch and Elyen Wyrich, but he adopted the name of Gutenberg from the village where his mother was born. In 1430 a revolt of the tradesmen of Mainz against the patrician ruling classes of his native town resulted in the family's exile, and Gutenberg went to live at Strasbourg.

While the famous Bible was far from being the first book ever printed, that it was the first important book so to be issued cannot be gainsaid. It is regarded as a monument in the history of civilization, marking the introduction to world notice of an invention which was to exert so vast an influence on humanity.

The Gutenberg Bible consists of 1,282 folio pages, two columns to a page, with 42 lines of type. It was printed, one page at a time, on six hand presses which were worked simultaneously. It is estimated that 150 copies were printed. Of these, 30 were on vellum.

• • •

In 1640 the 200th anniversary of Gutenberg was observed in Europe, and succeeding centenaries were celebrated in 1740 and 1840, thus establishing the tradition which Chicago follows in beginning today a "Printing Week" as tribute to the city's eminence in the industry.

This week, commemorating the 500th anniversary, is being sponsored by 92 organizations. The anniversary dinner Tuesday at the Stevens hotel will be attended by more than 1,500 printers, their families, suppliers, and business associates. The guest speaker will be Douglas C. McMurtrie, typographer and national centenary celebration chairman.

HIT OF NEW RHUMBA SHOW

Her full name is Estelita Rodriguez. She is 18, speaks no English. At the Colony club she is billed as the vocalist with Sacassas' Latin band, but Estelita sings not only with her voice, but her eyes, her hands, her entire body. She is, in a word, the hit of the new show at Chicago's rhumba mecca.

The Chicago Dance council has worked hard to unify the dancers and dance enthusiasts of this city in an effort to increase the audience for this type of art or entertainment—whichever way you choose to look at it. Whether the council is responsible or not, it is worth noting that Chicago will get an unusual amount of ballet this season, a factor treated in detail in other columns of this section. As to its own activities the council announces an elaborate opening meeting, to be held in the Colonial room of the Skyline Athletic club, 188 West Randolph street, on Friday night at 8:30. There will be a program featuring Walter Camryn, Alfred Floyd, Berenice Holmes, and José Castro, all local artists; Marina Novikova of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, and Felix Sadowski and Janina Strostowna of the Polish ballet. The program, like the council, is open to anyone with enthusiasm for the dance and some small change in his or her pockets.

◆

Agnes de Mille will make her Chicago debut on the Art Institute Members' Dance series in the Goodman theater at the end of next month. The daughter of William C. de Mille and the niece of Cecil B. de Mille, she at one time tried acting in the films. She gave it up for dancing, however, a field which has rewarded her with considerable success. Her recitals in London and Paris won her special attention in those capitals. London also knew her as a ballet choreographer before this country did. She staged the dances for Leslie Howard's production of "Hamlet" and for the film version of "Romeo and Juliet." For the incoming Ballet theater she created "Obeah," or "Black Ritual," a Negro ballet danced to Milhaud's "La Création du Monde."

Miss de Mille will appear with an ensemble composed of Sybil Shearer, Katherine Litz, and Joseph Anthony. Later on the dance series will present the Graff ballet.

◆

The Chicago Artists association, representing professional men and women devoted to music, painting, sculpture, poetry, and drama; young artists, and a group of people interested in the arts in general, will open its 26th season on Tuesday, Oct. 15. William D. Vennard, for many years a feature illustrator for the Philadelphia Public Ledger syndicate, is the new president. The association will this year offer a scholarship, to be awarded to a member selected by competition.

◆

Gladys Swarthout and her sister, Roma, will be the guest stars today on the first program of the new "Design for Happiness" radio feature, for which the Woman's Symphony orchestra and its director, Izler Solomon, will regularly furnish the music. Roma—her full name is Roma Slaughter — is a soprano, and as Gladys' older sister, is reputed to have given her considerable coaching as a singer. "Saturday Night," A Barn Dance, by the former Chicagoan, Robert Sanders, will be included on the program. Details can be found in the radio section.

◆

Rudolph Ganz will once again conduct the Young People's concerts of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, as well as of the San Francisco Symphony this season.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

We of the Fourth Estate have long realized with pride and gratitude the bravery and fortitude of press representatives detailed to war zone duty. . . . And acknowledge appreciatively the tribute paid by "Foreign Correspondent" which is dedicated to them.

• • •

The story is hectic—but so are the lives of these men and women who choose to live dangerously that their world may be other-world aware. . . . It depicts the experiences of a young New York newspaper man whose zeal and initiative cause him to be sent abroad by his publisher to ferret out the inside dope on international diplomacy. . . .

The time is 1939. Locales are London and Amsterdam and thereabouts. The action is largely concerned with the disappearance of the Dutch pacifist, Van Meer, whose double has been assassinated. . . .

Pursuit of the killer leads Correspondent Johnny Jones into a maze of thrilling adventure and deep, dark intrigue, presented grippingly and convincingly. . . . The finale packs a WOWful punch in the form of a broadcast from America to London. Following as this does on the heels of a seaplane calamity and several other hair-raising episodes, the observer is rather emotionally used up by the time "The End" is flashed.

It is all very clever—a powerful plea for preparedness and a potent warning against dictatorship.

• • •

Joel McCrea is fast and credible in the title rôle. For such a big guy he sure can cover ground. . . . George Sanders is swell as correspondent for another paper who joins forces with Johnny in a common cause. . . . Robert Benchley, portraying a brother of the press much more concerned with his physician's ban on liquor than the war situation, is most amusing. . . . Laraine Day is a charming heroine.

Herbert Marshall as a gentleman wearing his real identity under a suave mask that didn't deceive me a bit is pretty dead pan and wooden, I thought. What's the matter with him—or ME? I used to be crazy about the man. . . . That grand old German actor, Albert Basserman, does a fine character sketch as Van Meer. Other players were well chosen.

This splendidly directed film runs 118 minutes and holds your attention taut for just that length of time.

See you tomorrow.

[Bernie] McDonald, Veteran's Scenery builder; Emil Friedlander of the Dazian Stage Draperies firm; Mac and Henry Weiss, also stage drapers; Andrew Geoly of Eaves Costume Co., and Max Cohen, theater owner. JACK IN THE POT

By DOROTHY WEST

(Copyright: 1940: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

WHEN she walked down the aisle of the theater, clutching the money in her hand, hearing the applause and laughter, seeing, dimly, the grinning black faces, she was trembling so violently that she did not know how she could ever regain her seat.

It was unbelievable. Week after week she had come on Wednesday afternoon to this smelly, third run neighborhood movie house, paid her dime, received her Beano card, and gone inside to wait thru an indifferent feature until the house lights came on, and a too jovial white man wheeled a board onto the stage and busily fished in a bowl for numbers.

Today it had happened. As the too jovial white man called each number, she found a corresponding one on her card. When he called the 7th number and explained dramatically that whoever had punched five numbers in a row had won the jackpot of $55, she listened in smiling disbelief that there was that much money in his pocket. It was then that the woman beside her leaned toward her and said excitedly, "Look lady, you got it!"

. . . .

She reached her own intersection and paused before Mr. Spiro's general market. Here she regularly shopped, settling part of her bill fortnightly out of her relief check. When Mr. Spiro put in inferior stock because most of his customers were poor paying reliefers, she had wanted to shop elsewhere. But she could never get paid up.

Excitement smote her. She would go in, settle her account, and say good-by to Mr. Spiro forever. Resolutely she turned into the market.

Mr. Spiro, broad and unkempt, began to boom heartily from behind the counter. "Hello, Mrs. Edmunds."

She lowered her eyes and asked diffidently, "How much is my bill, Mr. Spiro?"

Mr. Spiro eyed her shrewdly. His voice was soft and insinuating. "You got cash, Mrs. Edmunds? You hit the number? Every other week you give me something on account. This week you want to settle. Am I losing your trade? Ain't I always treated you right?"

"Sure, Mr. Spiro," she answered nervously. "I was telling my husband just last night, ain't another man treats me like Mr. Spiro. And I said I wished I could settle my bill."

"See," he said triumphantly, "it's like I said. You're one of my best customers. Worrying about your bill when I ain't even worrying. I was telling your investigator——," he paused significantly, "when Mr. Edmunds gets a job, I know I'll get the balance. Mr. Edmunds got himself a job maybe?"

She was stiff with fright. "No I'd have told you right off, and here, too. I ain't one to cheat on relief. I was only saying how I wished I could settle. I wasn't saying that I was."

"Well, then, what you want for supper?" Mr. Spiro asked soothingly.

"Loaf of bread," she answered gratefully, "two pork chops, one kinda thick, can of spaghetti, little can of milk."

The purchases were itemized. Mrs. Edmunds said good-night and left the store. She felt sick and ashamed, for she had turned tail in the moment that was to have been her triumph over tyranny.

A little boy came toward her in the familiar rags of the neighborhood children. Suddenly Mrs. Edmunds could bear no longer the intolerable weight of her mean provisions.

"Little boy," she said.

"Ma'am?" He stopped and stared at her.

"Here." She held out the bag to him. "Take it home to your mama. It's food. It's clean."

He blinked, then snatched the bag from her hands, and turned and ran very fast in the direction from which he had come.

Mrs. Edmunds felt better at once. Now she could buy a really good supper. She walked 10 blocks to a better neighborhood and the cold did not bother her. Her misshapen shoes were winged.

She pushed inside a resplendent store and marched to the meat counter. A porterhouse steak caught her eye. She bought mushrooms, fresh peas, cauliflower, tomatoes, a pound of good coffee, a pint of real cream, a dozen dinner rolls, and a maple walnut layer cake.

The winter stars were pricking the sky when she entered the dimly lit hallway of the old law tenement in which she lived. The dank smell smote her instantly after the long walk in the brisk, clear air. Mr. Johnson, the janitor, was mournfully mopping the hall.

"Evenin', Mis' Edmunds, ma'am," he said plaintively.

"Evening," Mrs. Edmunds said coldly. Suddenly she hated Mr. Johnson. He was so humble.

Five young children shared the uninhabitable basement with him. They were always half sick, and he was always neglecting his duties to tend to them. The tenants were continually deciding to report him to the agent, and then at the last moment deciding not to.

"I'll be up tomorrow, see 'bout them windows, Mis' Edmunds, ma'am. My baby kep' frettin' today, and I been so busy doctorin'."

"Those children need a mother," said Mrs. Edmunds, severely. "You ought to get married again."

"My wife ain' daid," cried Mr. Johnson, shocked out of his servility. "She's in that T. B. home. Been there two years and 'bout on the road to health."

"Well," said Mrs. Edmunds inconclusively, and then added briskly, "I been waiting weeks and weeks for them window strips. Winter's half over. If the place was kept warm——"

"Yes'm, Mis' Edmunds," he said hastily, his bloodshot eyes imploring. "It's that ol' furnace. I done tol' the agent time and again, but they ain' fixin' to fix up this house 'long as all you all is relief folks."

Mr. Edmunds Fails to Notice Surprise

The steak was sizzling on the stove when Mr. Edmunds' key turned in the lock of the tiny three room flat. His step dragged down the hall. Mrs. Edmunds knew what that meant: "No man wanted." Two years ago Mr. Edmunds had begun, doggedly, to canvas the city for work, leaving home soon after breakfast and rarely returning before supper.

Once he had had a little stationery store. After losing it, he had spent his small savings, and sold or pawned every decent article of furniture and clothing before applying for relief. Even so, there had been a long investigation while he and his wife slowly starved. Fear had been implanted in Mrs. Edmunds. Thereafter she was never wholly unafraid. Mr. Edmunds had had to stand by and watch his wife starve. He never got over being ashamed.

Mr. Edmunds stood in the kitchen doorway, holding his rain streaked hat in his knotted hand. He was 49, and he looked like an old man.

"I'm back," he said. "Cooking supper."

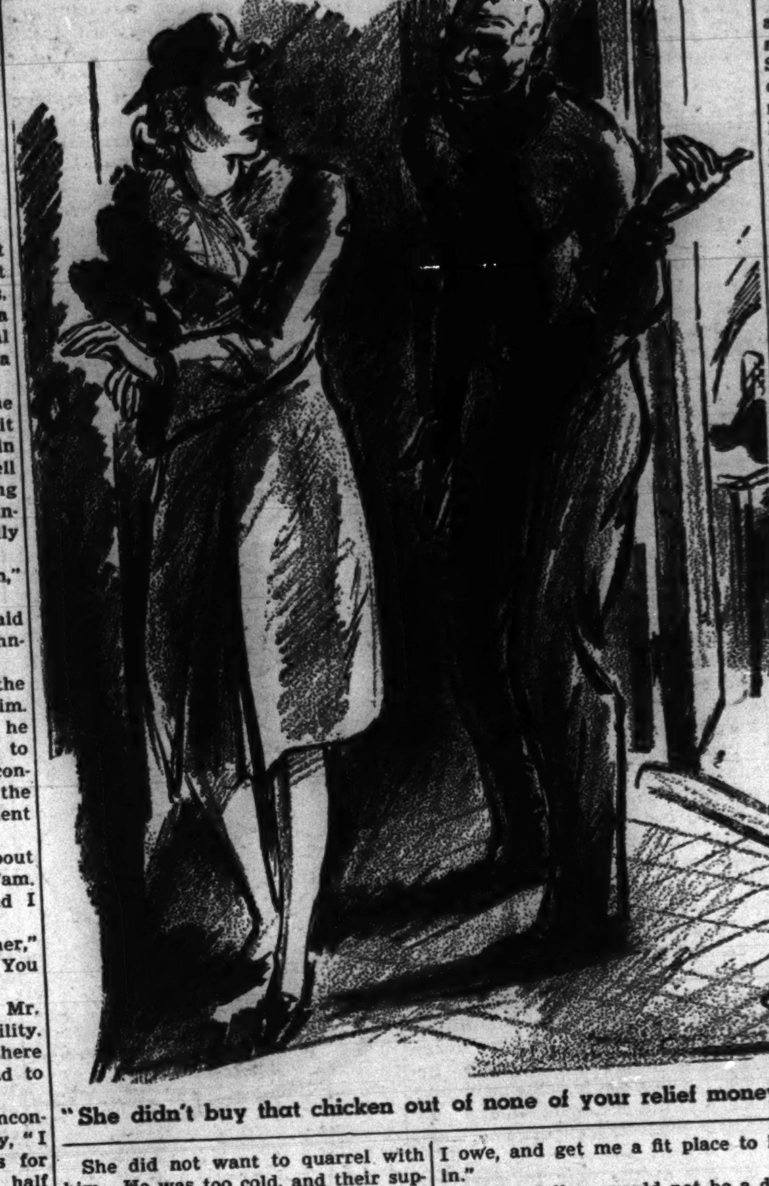
It was not a question. He seemed unaware of the intoxicating odors.

She smiled at him brightly. "Smell good?"

He shook suddenly with the cold that was still in him. "Smells like always to me."

Her face fell in disappointment, but she said gently, "You oughtn't to be walking 'round this kind of weather."

"I was looking for work," he said fiercely.



"She didn't buy that chicken out of none of your relief money."

She did not want to quarrel with him. He was too cold, and their supper was too fine.

"Things'll pick up in the spring," she said soothingly.

"Not for me," he answered gloomily. "Look how I look. Like a bum. I wouldn't hire me, myself."

"What you want me to do about it?" she asked furiously.

"Nothing," he said with wry humor, "unless you can make money, and make me just about $50."

She caught her breath and stared at his shabbiness. She had seen him look like this so long that she had forgotten that clothes would make a difference.

She nodded toward the stove. "That steak and all. Guess you think I got a fortune. Well, I won a little old measly dollar at the movies."

His face lightened, and his eyes grew soft with affection. "You shouldn't have bought a steak," he said. "Wish you'd bought yourself something you been wanting. Like gloves. Some good warm gloves. Hurts my heart when I see you with cold hands."

She was ashamed, and wished she knew how to cross the room to kiss him. "Go wash," she said gruffly. "Steak's 'most too done already."

It was a wonderful dinner. Both of them had been starved for fresh meat. Mrs. Edmunds' face was flushed, and there was color in her lips, as if the good blood of the meat had filtered thru her skin. Mr. Edmunds ate a pound and a half of the two pound steak, and his hands seemed steadier with each sharp thrust of the knife.

Over coffee and cake they talked contentedly. Mrs. Edmunds wanted to tell the truth about the money, and waited for an opening.

"We'll move out of this hole some day soon," said Mr. Edmunds. "Things won't be like this always." He was full and warm and confident.

"If I had $50," Mrs. Edmunds began cautiously, "I believe I'd move tomorrow. Pay up these people what I owe, and get me a fit place to live in."

"Fifty dollars would not be a drop in the bucket. You got to have something coming in steady."

He had hurt her again. "Fifty dollars is more than you got," she said meanly.

"It's more than you got, too," he said mildly. "Look at it like this. If you had $50 and made a change, them relief folks would worry you like a pack of wolves. But say f' ninstance you had $50, and I had a job, we could walk out of here without a howdy-do to anybody."

It would have been anticlimactic to tell him about the money. She got up. "I'll do the dishes. You sit still."

He noticed no change in her and went on earnestly, "Lord's bound to put something in my way soon. Things is got to break for us. We don't live human. I never see a paper 'cept when I pick one up in the subway. I ain't had a cigaret in three years. We ain't got a radio. We don't have no company. All the pleasure you get is a 10 cent movie one day a week. I don't even get that."

Presently Mrs. Edmunds ventured, "You think the investigator would notice if we got a little radio for the bedroom?"

"Somebody got one to give away?" His voice was eager.

"Maybe."

"Well, seeing how she could check with the party what give it to you, I think it would be all right."

"Well, ne' mind——" Her voice petered out.

It was his turn to try. "Want to play me a game of cards?"

He had not asked her for months. She cleared her throat. "I'll play a hand or two."

He stretched luxuriously. "I feel so good. Feeling like this, bet I'll land something tomorrow."

She said very gently, "The investigator comes tomorrow."

He smiled quickly to hide his disappointment. "Clean forgot. It don't matter. That meal was so good it'll carry me straight thru Friday."

She opened her mouth to tell him about the jackpot, to promise him as many meals as there was money. Suddenly some one upstairs pounded on the radiator for heat. In a moment some one downstairs pounded. Presently their side of the house resounded. It was maddening. Mrs. Edmunds was bitterly aware that her hands and feet were like ice.

"'Tisn't no use," she cried wildly to the walls. She burst into tears. "'Tisn't nothing no use."

Her husband crossed quickly to her. He kissed her cheek. "I'm going to make all this up to you. You'll see."

By half past eight they were in bed. By quarter to nine Mrs. Edmunds was quietly sleeping. Mr. Edmunds lay staring at the ceiling. It kept coming closer.

Mrs. Edmunds waked first and decided to go again to the grand market. She dressed and went out into the street. An ambulance stood in front of the door. In a minute an interne emerged from the basement, carrying a bundled child. Mr. Johnson followed, his eyes more bleary, and bloodshot than ever.

Mrs. Edmunds rushed up to him. "The baby?" she asked anxiously.

His face worked pitifully. "Yes, ma'am, Mis' Edmunds. Pneumonia. I heard you folks knockin' for heat last night but my hands was too full. I ain't forgot about them windows, tho. I'll be up tomorrow bright and early.

Mr. Edmunds stood in the kitchen door. "I smell meat in the morning?" he asked incredulously. He sat down, and she spread the feast, kidneys and omelet, hot buttered rolls, and strawberry jam. "You mind," he said happily, "explaining this mystery? Was that dollar of yours made out of elastic?"

"It wasn't a dollar like I said. It was five. I wanted to surprise you."

She did not look at him and her voice was breathless. She had decided to wait until after the investigator's visit to tell him the whole truth about the money. Otherwise they might both be nervous and betray themselves by their guilty knowledge.

"We got chicken for dinner," she added shyly.

"Lord, I don't know when I had a piece of chicken."

They ate, and the morning passed glowingly. With Mr. Edmunds' help, Mrs. Edmunds moved the furniture and gave the flat a thoro cleaning. She liked for the investigator to find her busy. She felt less embarrassed about being on relief when it could be seen that she occupied her time.

The afternoon waned. The Edmunds sat in the living room, and there was nothing to do. They were hungry but dared not start dinner. With activity suspended, they became aware of the penetrating cold and the rattling windows. Mr. Edmunds began to have that wild look of waiting for the investigator.

Mrs. Edmunds suddenly had an idea. She would go and get a newspaper and a package of cigarets for him.

At the corner she ran into Mr. Johnson. Rather he ran into her, for he turned the corner with his head down, and his gait as unsteady as if he had been drinking.

"That you, Mr. Johnson?" she said sharply.

Home Seems Brighter When She Returns

He raised his head, and she saw that he was not drunk.

"Yes, ma'am, Mis' Edmunds."

"The baby—Is she worse?"

Tears welled out of his eyes. "The Lord done took her."

Tears stood in her own eyes. "God knows I'm sorry to hear that. Let me know if there's anything I can do."

"Thank you, Mis' Edmunds, ma'am. But ain't nothin' nobody can do. I been pricin' funerals. I can get one for $50. But I been to my brother, and he ain't got it, I been everywhere. Couldn't raise no more than $10." He was suddenly embarrassed. "I know all you tenants is on relief. I wasn't fixin' to ask you all."

"Fifty dollars," she said strainedly, "is a lot of money."

"God'd have to pass a miracle for me to raise it. Guess the city'll have to bury her. You reckon they'll let me take flowers?"

"You being the father, I guess they would," she said weakly.

When she returned home the flat was a little warmer. She entered the living room. Her husband's face brightened.

NO SURRENDER

KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

(Copyright: 1940: By Katharine Newlin Burt)

CONCLUSION

MARTIN with his own hands set up a little table and spread it with a white cloth. Then he disappeared, to emerge with a daintily appointed tray.

"Well," he said, "now I'm going to spoil your second breakfast for you. You should, you know, Cathryn Kiethan, you really should be marrying Jed Galt yourself."

Her spoon jumped up in her hand, otherwise she managed composure.

"Lots of people have thought that but . . . Jed Galt and I . . ." she laughed lightly, "I don't suppose you can possibly imagine how for years and years we've loathed each other."

"Let me tell you a story. There's a picture you bought . . ."

"That was for Dad."

"Yes. Yes. And there's a picture he bought."

"Dad did?"

"No, Jed Galt did. He was pretty hard up at the time, I happen to know, but he plunked down $1,000 for it . . ."

"A picture? Jed doesn't care for pictures."

"This one he cared for. He named it himself. He called it, 'Salamander'."

"I feel that one of us is going mad."

"Perhaps both but . . . remember your Alice . . . 'I'm mad. You're mad. We're all mad here.' I'll explain about the salamander. It's a fabulous lizard, supposed to live happily in flames."

"And Jed bought from you a picture of a lizard, Mr. Sylvester. Well, if he could like any picture it would be of some cold-blooded reptile like that."

"It was," Martin watched her carefully, "the picture of a girl standing in an almost colorless frock before a mirror. She had her arms up and was twisting to and fro. Back of her an open fire was burning and there were long crimson curtains and two lighted candles; all this was reflected in the mirror. The effect, as you can imagine, was quite a lot like a lively slim lizard playing cheerfully about in a blaze."

"Yes. I can imagine. But . . . Jed Galt?"

"I happened to see this salamander, one winter day, about five years ago in the Rangers' New York house. It was the winter of Cicily's debut. Mrs. Ranger had a secretary to whom I was never introduced. But I think, unless I'm much mistaken, that one evening as I was going along the upper hall I was privileged to see the secretary trying on a dress before a firelit mirror."

"You mean . . . the picture . . . was . . . of me?"

"Yes, my charming salamander. Recognizably of you."

"And Jed Galt bought it for $1,000. It must have been a diabolical . . . what do the critics call it? . . . interpretation of me."

Cathryn Is Directed to Prospective Buyer

"It was nothing of the sort. I didn't call it 'Salamander.' It was one of the most enchanting studies of unconscious girlhood ever painted and quite one of the best things I've done. He took it home with him under his arm. And, by the way, it was under his arm when he finally went out of my door as a deliberate exile. And now, Cathryn Kiethan, do you begin to understand?"

"I am astonished. But that doesn't prove . . ."

"Doesn't prove what?"

"O, please!"

"Good. You ask for mercy. I grant it instantly. Let's consider all questions answered and everything quite clear. I wish you'd leave your Corot with me, Miss Kiethan. I believe I can find a purchaser. But, will you forgive me if I suggest . . . ?"

"Of course."

". . . that it would be only fair, to offer it first to Jed." Martin had gone well away from her and spoke with his back turned, looking down at the painting she brought. "You could find him at his office at this hour."

"Yes," said Cathryn as tho absently. "I suppose that would be only decent. He might want to keep it for himself. But . . . what ought it to be worth?"

"If he wants to buy it in, send him to me. I'll be your agent. That'll save you embarrassment."

"You're terribly kind. I can never thank you."

She had not been gone 20 minutes when Jed Galt's voice was on Sylvester's telephone.

"Hullo, Martin. Is Cathryn Kiethan by any chance at your studio? The Faildyke maid said she might be dropping in on you some time today."

"She has been here. She left about half an hour ago."

"Damn. You don't know . . .?"

"She was on her way, I think, to your office but would probably be lingering at a shop or two en route . . . if I know my suburbanites."

"Thanks a lot. I'll be seeing you soon, I hope."

"The hope is mutual."

Jed called his office. "Has Miss Kiethan been in or on the telephone, asking for me?"

"Not yet, Mr. Galt."

"If she comes in or telephones, will you be sure to give her this exact message? 'Mr. Galt will not be at his office today. He is lunching with Mr. Flint, but he very urgently requests that she have tea with him at about 5 o'clock at his apartment.' And, Miss Oliver, let me know if you are able to give her the message and whether or not she accepts."

When he returned from lunch, the message awaited him. Miss Kiethan had called at the office and would come to his apartment for tea at 5 o'clock.

Wearing the same vague, absent-minded look with which he had danced with Cathryn in the restaurant, Jed Galt prepared for her arrival. He rearranged, tidied, put away magazines, papers, books, lighted two wall candles, one at each end of the table beneath the photograph of Faildyke.

To himself, to that part of his mind that was entirely conscious, he explained his efforts. She will see that even an exile can live beautifully, that a woman is not necessary to the making of a memorable home. Besides . . . being comfortable may make the damned interview in which I may again be exploding all her hopes and plans, a little easier.

He was at the door to greet her as she came along the hall from the elevator, whose attendant was a little slower than usual in clashing shut his doors.

"O Jed, how beautiful. I never saw such a fascinating place. No one ever told me about your rooms." She went from one window to the others, looking down at the water, up at the lavender and salmon towers.

"It's like the Arabian Nights. New York is beautiful. Exciting. Do you always burn candles before Faildyke? And . . . no other pictures, Jed?"

This, after a searching look across his empty walls.

She took without his urging the very chair he had placed for her beside one of the river windows, where the evening light and the light of the candles shone upon her. Delicately bright she looked, her pallor had more value than scarlets, blues, and golds. She took his tea, set the cup down on the little table he had placed beside her, accepted a muffin, sipped, munched, as tho she had been a school girl with a careless heart.

"I'm sorry I wasn't at the office, Cathryn, that you had your trip for nothing."

"I'm not. I wanted to see your office and your secretary and . . . I wouldn't have missed this for anything. How did Miss Oliver know I was going to be there?"

"Sylvester told me. I called him on Mary's information. There was something I had to discuss with you. But . . . you've business with me?"

"Before either of us gets down to business, Jed," her eyes were fastened on the candle flame and had, for once, the wideness as well as the starry innocence of a child's. "I want to tell you a dreadfully long story. It's going to be hard to tell. Will you promise not to interrupt until I'm thru?"

"I'll try."

"And will you please sit down somewhere and not stand glowering at me?"

"I can't stay put. I never can. But I'll begin by sitting and I won't glower. If I look at anything, it'll be the river; that is, if you'll excuse my back."

"Anything but your glower, Jed," said Cathryn. She had set down her cup and locked both hands together on her knee. "I am going to tell you the true story of my life." Her voice trembled. "I feel queer," she said after a pause, "like some one that has put a very last piece of money on a roulette number. O, God!" she prayed aloud, closing her eyes, "don't let me lose my wager."

He waited in complete silence and stillness, sitting as usual, elbows on knees, head bent forward looking down at his own loosely knit hands.

"I am in agony, Jed."

He thought, "Perhaps she knows about Perry's wife and wants to consult me." Aloud, "I'm sorry," he said. "Can't you let yourself off? Is this some crime you've committed?"

"Yes. Against my own pride. I wonder if you ever realized something about . . . us, Jed?"

He flashed up one glittering, frowning look but made no other comment.

"From the time we were babies, every one thought that we were meant for each other. Your father and my mother practically arranged a match. Besides we were great friends. You were lovely to me. I adored you. I worshiped the ground you walked on. Once, when I was very little, you gave me a grass ring, kissed me, told me I was to be your wife, that I must wait for you. I think we were destined to be lovers." She laughed without much breath.

"Give me your lips, Cathryn. . . . What confounded, tragic fools we've been!"

"We had everything, every one's good will and we had, I do believe it, Jed, a . . . let's say . . . a chemical affinity for each other. I believe, Jed, that there can be no true love without surrender. The surrender of one, certainly, and best of all a mutual surrender. Well, then, leaving out your feelings . . . I loved you with all my heart and soul and mind the way the catechism tells you to love the Lord, your God. When I came up to that open window eight years ago in April . . . a time you have long forgotten, perhaps . . . and heard you say to Rufus . . . I can remember the words too, Jed Galt! . . . 'I don't marry to order. I'll be darned if I'll swallow Kitty Kiethan's hook no matter how prettily she's baited it . . .' I died. Yes, it was a death. I knew my mother was ill and I loved her but I wanted to kill her that day because she'd made you despise her and me. I don't believe any boy or man can possibly suffer what I suffered then. So, you know what I did. I went and threw myself at poor little Perry Collen. But here's something you don't know and that I didn't know until long years afterward, myself. You found that letter of mine telling Mamma about my plan because I wanted you to find it.

"I meant you to read it and to be hurt and to rush out and to take me in your arms and to say, 'You'll not marry Peregrine nor any other man in the world. You know you love me and that I love you and that you've got to be my wife.' You see, Jed . . . that I'm crying now, after all these years, because of what did happen under the linden tree."

Jed was silent and still did not look. She, however, could not keep her place, but stood up, lit a cigaret and crushed it out immediately. She went from window to window and down the room, talking rapidly, without hope, now, or faith.

"So it was always like that with me. I was always hoping and planning that you would save me at the last hour from myself. I would have given Rufus back with both hands to Cicily . . . can't you guess now why I failed to write Rufe's name in my note . . . care of you? . . . altho I loved him and wanted him, the way you want water when you can't have wine and are faint and weak around your heart. If you had made one gesture of . . . even of friendliness to me, if you had given me anything but cruelty and contempt and horribly harsh judgments, I'd never have run away to Faildyke and thrown myself upon your father and Rufus.

"And then, that night in May, before the engagement was to be announced, I woke crying from a dream because my heart was broken and I would not admit that to myself. When I saw you under the window on the terrace, bent down in agony, Jed, I knew what your illness meant. It was only your devil's pride that made you tell yourself and me that it was fear of what I'd do to Rufe and Dad and Faildyke that made you suffer. O, Jed, it was your terrible need and love of me and the torment of losing me, of having me for a sister when you knew God himself meant me to be your wife."

She stopped then to control a fit of tearless sobbing. He did not stir hand or foot or head. She got back to her chair, forced herself to sit there composedly, went on in a low, quivering voice.

"Then Rufus was killed and, because of what had passed between us by the little pool with the moon in it, that night, I felt that somehow our frantic, chained wills had brought about his death. I ought never to have said that to you, Jed. It was more cruel than all the terrible things you've said to me, which I've carried about like knives in my heart."

He muttered something inaudible. She hurried on. "And so . . . one night, when Dad asked me why we hated each other, you and I, I broke out into the truth, what I believed and still believe and will die believing, Jed, even if you call me a liar and turn me out of your home. I told him that you loved me and had always loved me romantically, desperately, with all your heart, till death do part. . . . I tried to be a little funny because I didn't really want him to take me seriously.

"Jed, I never dreamed he'd try to break down your pride and mine by making that will. He imagined it would free us both and draw us together. He must have thought we'd laugh and bless him for it. . . . O, it was a tender trick, the very sort of trick he loved to play. But . . . O, God! What you said to me the day you found me hiding from you and dragged me up with you to the house that horrible cold day! I don't think I've been warm since.

"And now . . . you're going to marry Cicily, whom Martin Sylvester loves, and you want to buy Faildyke with her money and bring her there to be its mistress instead of me. If you do, I swear I'll haunt it and you, too, Jed."

"But," Jed broke forth, lifting his head for the first time, "I thought you'd promised Faildyke to Peregrine. . . . I thought you had that all fixed up. Now," he cried out loud and bitterly, and he stood up and struck the table beside him with his hand, "and now I understand. At last . . . and just in time, I understand. You'd got me this time, Cathryn. You used the most tempting bait of all, yourself. And I'd almost swallowed you down whole—hook, bait, and all. O, Lord of Narrow Escapes, I thank you. Now I understand. Perry has told you the truth and you can't bear the thought of that other mistress queening it at Faildyke or, perhaps . . ."

Cathryn's hands were pressed to either side of her head. She had long ago thrown aside her hat. "Stop, Jed, stop! I'm going mad. What are you saying?"

"Don't tell me you don't know. Don't tell me you haven't just discovered on the eve of letting him take over Faildyke and yourself that Perry Collen has a wife?"

She just kept on staring at him between her hands, the pale gold hair pressed close about her temples.

"I've burnt my own bridges, Cathryn, and couldn't help you out now if I would. I've resigned from Flint & Carver. If I don't take Cissie's offer and what I believe it may honorably commit me to, I won't have a cent. I'll be a beggar. I couldn't to save my soul make any bid for Faildyke or for you. . . ."

She had groped for and found her hat, still staring at him, went past him, got herself into his vestibule, somehow into her coat, took up the gloves and purse. He had not followed her. She could not guess at the truth of his silence in there with the candles and the river lights and the photograph of Faildyke. She opened the wrong door. A closet. In it a picture which she quickly turned from the wall. Martin was right. Jed had bought her portrait, but not for love . . . only for the cruel delight of shutting her into his own darkness, her face to the blind closet wall.

She thought she heard him moving and got herself across the hall and out of the front door. She closed it softly, would not take the elevator but started running like mad water down the interminable apartment stairs.

All night she suffered fear and loneliness and when day came, with a pale, uncertain sun, she could not stay indoors—Faildyke itself was hateful—but went out and walked herself to exhaustion up and down the hills.

Cathryn and Perry Meet for Last Time

She was coming back toward the stables along one of the old hooded lanes when she saw a slight man's figure enter the vistaed circle far ahead. He was walking rapidly, bareheaded, the wind ruffled his black hair. He lifted his arm in greeting.

It was Peregrine. She was first glad, then weak, and sat down on a rock beside the lane. She did not move when he came up to her, but let her hands fall down at her sides.

"Matt told me you'd gone out for a long tramp and I took a chance on your coming back this way. You always used to."

She looked up to him, reproach like a weight on her eyelids.

"Why didn't you tell me, Peregrine?"

She saw that he looked older, haggard, very resolute. He clicked his tongue and made a despairing gesture.

"Who told you, Cath?"

"Never mind. I know. You've been married how long, Perry? It's one of those things, isn't it, you tell your friends? I believed in your friendship."

"I came today to tell you. I had to see . . . her . . . first. Yes, she's in New York. I think you must know why I didn't tell you, Cathryn."

"I don't know. I can't understand. I've been thinking about it most of the night."

"Then I must tell you. Because, my darling, since you came to me eight years ago, where I was waiting for you one evening in the stables over yonder," he jerked his head in the direction, "and said, 'Marry me. Take me away with you. You're the only person in the world I love'; since that day you have been my wife and I've been your husband. This marriage that I made in a moment of insanity is as hard to confess to you and must be truly as incomprehensible to any women as would be the drunken infidelity of a devoted husband.

"I worked for you. I told myself that you were waiting. I saved. I studied. I came back to marry you decently, splendidly, before the Galts, Faildyke, the whole world. I was on my way to you. That was in May, too, mavourneen, and the thrushes were singing with just your voice. I came up the path, there were violets along it. I picked some. I stopped at the little bridge to arrange them and to be calm. There came down a fat little old woman like a witch. She waddled up to me and asked me who I was. She began to titter and to shrill some news to me. I was to receive an invitation . . . since I had come back. . . ."

"Don't tell me, Perry." Cathryn had put one of her vital and tender hands across his two, clenched together across his knees. "I can't bear

"You bought a paper!"

She held out the cigarets. "You smoke this kind?" she asked lifelessly.

He jumped up and crossed to her. "I declare I dont know how to thank you! Wish that investigator'd come. I sure want to taste them."

"Go ahead and smoke," she cried fiercely. "It's none of her business. We got our rights same as working people."

She turned into the bedroom. She was utterly spent. Too much had happened in the last 24 hours.

"Guess I'll stretch out for a bit. I'm not going to sleep. If I do drop off, listen out for the investigator. The bell needs fixing. She might have to knock."

At half past five Mr. Edmunds put down the newspaper and tiptoed to the bedroom door. His wife was still asleep. He stood for a moment in indecision, then decided it was long past the hour when the investigator usually called, and went down the hall to the kitchen. He wanted to prepare suppper as a surprise. He opened the window, took the foodstuffs out of the crate that in winter served as icebox, and set them on the table.

The doorbell tinkled faintly.

He went to the door and opened it. The investigator stepped inside. She was small and young and white.

"Good day, miss," he said.

"I'm sorry to call so late," she apologized. "I've been busy all day with an evicted family. But I knew you were expecting me, and I didn't want you to stay in tomorrow."

"You come on up front, miss," he said. "I'll wake up my wife. She wasn't feeling so well and went to lie down."

The Investigator Is a Pleasant Surprise

She saw the light from the kitchen, and the dark rooms beyond.

"Don't wake Mrs. Edmunds," she said kindly, "if she isn't well. I'll just sit in the kitchen for a minute with you."

He looked down at her, but her open, honest face did not disarm him. He braced himself for whatever was to follow.

"Go right on in, Miss," he said.

He took the dish towel and dusted the clean chair. "Sit down, Miss."

He stood facing her with a furrow between his brows, and his arms folded. There was an awkward pause. She cast about for something to say, and saw the table.

"I interrupted your dinner preparations."

His voice and his face hardened for the blow.

"I was getting dinner for my wife. It's chicken."

"It looks like a nice one," she said pleasantly.

He was baffled. "We ain't had chicken once in three years."

"I understand," she said sincerely. "Sometimes I spend my whole salary on something I want very much."

"You ain't much like an investigator," he said in surprise. "One we had before you woulda raised Ned." He sat down suddenly, his defenses down. "Miss, I been wanting to ask you this for a long time. You ever have any men's clothes?"

Her voice was distressed. "Every once in awhile. But with so many people needing assistance, we can only give them to our employables. But I'll keep your request in mind."

He did not answer. He just sat staring at the floor, presenting an adjustment problem. There was nothing else to say to him.

She rose. "I'll be going now, Mr. Edmunds."

"I'll tell my wife you was here, Miss."

A voice called from the bedroom. "Is that you talking?"

"It's the investigator lady," he said. "She's just going."

Mrs. Edmunds came hurrying down the hall, the sleep in her face and tousled hair.

"I was just lying down, ma'am. I didn't mean to go to sleep. My husband should've called me."

"I didn't want to wake you."

"And he kept you sitting in the kitchen."

She glanced inside to assure herself that it was sufficiently spotless for the fine clothes of the investigator. She saw the laden table, and felt so ill that the water welled into her mouth.

"The investigator lady knows about the chicken," Mr. Edmunds said quickly. "She——"

"It was only five dollars," his wife interrupted, wringing her hands.

"Five dollars for a chicken?" The investigator was incredulous.

"She didn't buy that chicken out of none of your relief money," Mr. Edmunds said defiantly. "It was money she won at a movie."

"It was only five dollars," Mrs. Edmunds repeated tearfully.

"We ain't trying to conceal nothing," Mr. Edmunds snarled. He was cornered and fighting. "If you'd asked me how we come by the chicken, I'd have told you."

"For God's sake, ma'am, don't cut us off," Mrs. Edmunds moaned. "I'll never go to another movie. It was only 10 cents. I didn't know I was doing wrong." She burst into tears.

The investigator stood tense. They had both been screaming at her. She was tired and so irritated that she wanted to scream back.

"Mrs. Edmunds," she said sharply, "get hold of yourself. I'm not going to cut you off. That's ridiculous. You won $5 at a movie and you bought some food. That's fine. I wish all my families could win $5 for food."

She turned and tore out of the flat. They heard her stumbling and sobbing down the stairs.

"You feel like eating?" Mrs. Edmunds asked dully.

"I guess we're both hungry. That's why we got so upset."

"Maybe we'd better eat, then."

"Let me fix it."

"No." She entered the kitchen. "I kinda want to see you just sitting and smoking a cigaret."

He sat down and reached in his pocket with some eagerness. "I ain't had one yet." He lit a cigaret, inhaled, and felt better immediately.

"You think," she said bleakly, "she'll write that up in our case?"

"I don't know, dear."

"You think they'll close our case if she does?"

"I don't know that neither, dear."

She clutched the sink for support. "My God, what would we do?"

The smoke curled around him luxuriously. "Don't think about it till it happpens."

"I got to think about it. The rent, the gas, the light, the food."

"They wouldn't hardly close our case for five dollars."

"Maybe they'd think it was more."

"You could prove it by the movie manager."

She went numb all over. Then suddenly she got mad about it.

It was 9 o'clock when they sat down in the living room. The heat came up grudgingly. Mrs. Edmunds wrapped herself in her sweater and read the funnies. Mr. Edmunds was happily inhaling his second cigaret. They were both replete and in good humor.

The window rattled and Mr. Edmunds looked around at it lazily. "Been about two months since you asked Mr. Johnson for weatherstrips."

The paper shook in her hand. She did not look up. "He promised to fix it this morning, but his baby died."

"His baby! You don't say!"

His voice filled with sympathy. He crushed out his cigaret. "Believe I'll go down and sit with him awhile."

"He's not there," she said hastily. "I met him when I was going to the store. He said he'd be out all evening."

"I bet the poor man's trying to raise some money."

She let the paper fall in her lap, and clasped her hands to keep them from trembling. She lied again, as she had been lying steadily in the last 24 hours, as she had not lied before in her life.

"He didn't say nothing to me about raising money."

"Wasn't no need to. Where would you get the first five cents to give him?"

"I guess," she cried jealously, "you want me to give him the rest of my money."

"No," he said. "I want you to spend what little's left on yourself. Me, I wish I had $50 to give him."

"As poor as you are," she asked angrily, "you'd give him that much money? That's easy to say when you haven't got it."

"I look at it this way," he said simply. "I think how I'd feel in his shoes."

"You got your own troubles," she argued heatedly. "The Johnson baby is better off dead. You'd be a fool to put $50 in the ground. I'd spend my $50 on the living."

"Tain't no use to work yourself up," he said. "You ain't got $50, and neither have I. We'll be quarreling in a minute over make-believe money. Let's go to bed."

Mrs. Edmund waked at seven and tried to lie quietly by her husband's side, but lying still was torture. She dressed and went into the kitchen, and felt too listless to make her coffee. She sat down at the table and dropped her head on her folded arms. No tears came. There was only the burning in her throat.

She sat in this manner for half an hour. Suddenly she heard a man's slow tread outside her front door. Terror gripped her. The steps moved on down the hall, but for a moment her knees were water. When she could control her trembling, she stood up and knew that she had to get out of the house. It could not contain her and Mr. Johnson.

She walked quickly away from her neighborhood. It was a raw day, and her feet and hands were beginning to grow numb. She felt sorry for herself. Other people were hurrying past in overshoes and heavy gloves. There was $51 in her purse. It was her right to do what she pleased with them. Determinedly she turned into the subway.

In a downtown department store she rode the escalator to the dress department. She walked up and down the rows of lovely garments, stopping to finger critically, standing back to admire.

A salesgirl came toward her, looking straight at her with soft expectant eyes. Mrs. Edmunds felt queer.

"Do you wish to be waited on madam?"

Mrs. Edmunds opened her mouth to say "Yes," but the word would not come. She stared at the girl stupidly. "I was just looking," she said.

In the shoe department she saw a pair of comfort shoes, memorized the number, and sat down timidly in a fine leather chair.

A salesman lounged toward her. "Something in shoes?"

"Yes, sir. That comfort shoe." She gave him the number.

"Size?" His voice was bored.

"I don't know," she said anxiously. "Five or six, maybe five and a half."

"I'll have to measure you," he said reproachfully. "Give me your foot." He sat down on a stool and held out his hand.

She dragged her eyes up to his face. "How much you say those shoes cost?"

"I didn't say. Eight dollars."

She rose with acute relief. "I ain't got that much with me."

She retreated unsteadily. Something was making her knees weak and her head light.

Her legs steadied. She went quickly to the down escalator. She reached the third floor and was briskly crossing to the next down escalator when she saw the little dresses. A banner screamed that they were selling at the sacrifice price of one dollar. She decided to examine them.

She Hurries Back to Give the Money

She pushed thru the crowd of women, and emerged triumphantly within reach of the dresses. She searched carefully. There were pinks and blues and yellows. She was looking for white. She pushed back thru the crowd. In her careful hands lay a little white dress. It was spun gold and gossamer.

Boldly she beckoned a salesgirl. "I'll take this, Miss," she said.

All the way home she was excited and close to tears. She was in a fever to see Mr. Johnson. She would let the regret come later. A child lay dead and waiting burial.

She turned her corner at a run. Going down the rickety basement stairs, she prayed that Mr. Johnson was on the premises.

She pounded on his door and he opened it. The agony in his face told her instantly that he had been unable to borrow the money. She tried to speak, and her tongue tripped over her eagerness.

Fear took hold of her and rattled her teeth. "Mr. Johnson, what about the funeral?"

"I give the baby to the student doctors."

"O, my God, Mr. Johnson! O, my God!"

"I bought her some flowers."

She turned and went blindly up the stairs. Drooping in the front doorway was a frost-nipped bunch of white flowers. She dragged herself up to her flat. Once she stopped to hide the package under her coat. She would never look at that little white dress again. The 10 five dollar bills were 10 five pound stones in her purse. They almost hurled her backward.

She turned the key in her lock. Mr. Edmunds stood at the door. He looked rested and confident.

"I been waiting for you. I just started to go."

"You had any breakfast?" she asked tonelessly.

"I made some coffee. It was all I wanted."

"I shoulda made some oatmeal before I went out."

"You have on the big pot time I come home. Bet I'll land something good," he boasted. "You brought good luck in this house. We ain't seen the last of it." He pecked her cheek and went out, hurrying as if he were late for work.

She plodded into the bedroom. The steam was coming up fine. She sank down on the side of the bed and unbuttoned her coat. The package fell on her lap. She took the 10 five dollar bills and pushed them between a fold of the package. It was burial money. She could never use it for anything else. She hid the package under the mattress.

Wearily she buttoned up her coat and opened her purse again. It was empty, for the few cents remaining from her last relief check had been spent indiscriminately with her prize money.

She went into the kitchen to take stock of her needs. There was nothing left from their feasts. She felt the coffee pot. It was still hot, but her throat was too constricted for her to attempt to swallow. She looked out at the slate-colored sky, and thought of her husband, and shivered. He would come in wet and cold and miserable. She must remember to get a lemon.

No Surrender

it. What a cruel and wicked girl I've been. Because I wouldn't or couldn't have my own way, I've hurt every one. I've broken up people's hopes and lives and homes. Will you . . . will just you, perhaps, forgive me?"

"No," he said, "I'll not forgive you. I'll just love you, Cathie," and he bent his head forward and touched her hand with his lips before he went on talking.

"I was insane. I meant to kill myself. But . . . fortuniately . . . or unfortunately . . . the adverb's in your hands, mavourneen! . . . Father could send me away. I was to go to South America, but I stopped off at the Canal and there drank myself into further insanity, stupor, delirium, God knows what. There was a girl there who, because I was half blind with alcohol, reminded me of you. She had a way of lifting and letting fall her hands. And she was kind to me. Indulgent. Patient. Listened to my ravings.

"She knew the name of Cathryn before she knew my own or I knew hers. She knew that I was a boy driven out of his wits by cruelly disappointed love. And so, knowing this, she gave herself to me in the generous, reckless way of such women and, finding herself to have a child, she came to me. I was still drunk and bewildered, sick and weak, so I married her. It's what is called a marriage. It meant nothing. I was your husband, Cathryn."

Cathryn murmured half in understanding, half in bitterness, "I have been faithful to thee, Cynara, in my fashion."

"Yes," he cried, turning fiercely on her, his beautiful face and eyes focused into a flame of feeling, "and no woman in the world has ever understood that fashion, the deepest faithfulness of all . . . because it's beyond the will, below the consciousness, a faithfulness that a man can't destroy, himself, even if he tries with all his strength."

He laid his hands on hers where they now were gathered in her lap and then put his dark boy's head upon them. She felt his tears.

"Don't, Perry darling. I think perhaps I'm the only woman who can understand. I've been like that, myself . . . faithful in my fashion."

"To Jed Galt," gasped Perry.

"Yes. Hopelessly."

"I always knew that, even when I was on my way to marry you. But I was sure he'd never take you, Cathryn."

"He never would. You're right."

"And I'm such a poor fool for love that it wouldn't matter to me. I'd teach you to forget your faithfulness, Cathryn. It isn't a woman's nature. Not if you had my children, were in my home. Forgive me. Forgive him. Forgive yourself. Will you let me try to get free and make her not unhappy? Will you let me go away with that much courage in my heart, which is tired from loving you, mavourneen? And then when I come back, just myself, Perry Collen, your stable boy, will you let me take you and Faildyke and care for you both and make you both rich and beautiful and gay, the way the princess is in the sad, cruel old fairy tales where everything ends happily after all?"

She sat, one hand under his lips, the other moving across his head.

"My poor Perry!

"Do you think you'd want me, as I am, Peregrine? Perhaps it's partly because I've been out of your reach, in love with another man, something very difficult to obtain, that you've been 'faithful to me in your fashion.' Men are like that. You are ambitious, have made a great deal out of a small beginning. If you were free to take me and if you saw me just as I how am, poor and beaten and . . . discarded, for Jed knows he could have me but he won't take me, Perry . . . would you let me marry you just for despair and loneliness and . . . Faildyke? Would you, Peregrine?"

"I would," he said.

"Then, if you can come back free, if she can tell me that she's set you free of her own will, gladly, then . . . even if it's years from now, come to me, Perry, and see me as I am and will be. But, I think, my dear, you will never again ask me to be your wife."

They walked back in silence together to the house. And Perry smiled again after he had kissed her good-by in the high porch of Faildyke. Smiling, with an air of confidence, he got into his car and waved his hand, looking back dangerously until the curve of the driveway took her from his sight.

She was so tired that she sat there on the steps with her head on her knees for hours.

After tea that evening, however, she wandered out again. It was impossible for her, now that she was rested, to be still. She could not bear the house. She was as purposeless and wandering as the wind . . . all outdoors seemed small to her unhappiness. She went down the road, looking above the trees, trying to lift her spirit up to a great lonely star.

She had no purpose and no destination, but she was thinking vaguely of the lake, so the direction of her steps changed gradually and took her into the woods, where it was almost dark with the green misty darkness of woods in May.

At the base of a little rise she paused because she thought she heard a step. It was just there and then that a great figure of a man loomed out from the great figures of the pines. Dick Ames . . . big, tall, his head against a crown of little pale stars . . . coming to collect from her his "debt." She went cold and her hand fell of itself into the weighted pocket of her coat. He had seen her, there was a dreadful increase of purpose and energy in his body, which was less visible except as moving darkness when it had left the crest of the low hill and was coming down toward her.

"Stop," her voice rang out with a surprising sternness and vigor. "Don't come any closer, Dick. I've got a gun. I mean to use it. Stop." And she lifted the revolver, remembering, "If you don't pull back the hammer, the gun's safe." She laid her tense index finger about the trigger, wondering if she would be able to pull it back if Dick ignored his danger, did not believe in her threat, and came close.

She felt the weapon jump, heard the loud, sudden bark. The figure started, cried out once, and held both hands high above its head.

"Don't shoot, Cathryn," it shouted with most astonishing laughter. "I surrender."

She threw down the gun. She ran, she had her hands on him.

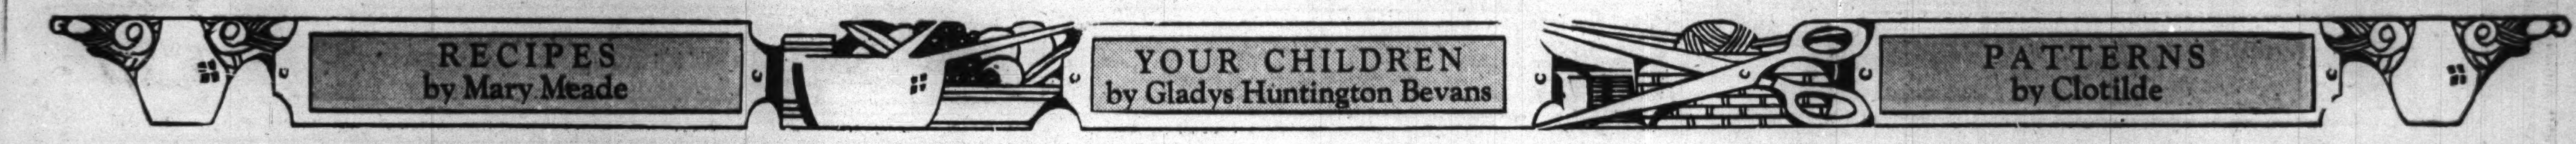
"O, Jed . . . Jed. I thought you were Dick Ames. I didn't mean to shoot. The gun went off of itself . . . are you hurt? What have I done?"

"For the first time in your life you missed me. Here, stop crying. You must begin to be happy now, this instant. We can't afford to lose another second after these eight insensate years.

"Look at me. Look up. I'll be kissing you in a moment; let me tell you first. . . . You ran away so quickly I had no time last night. . . . I haven't a cent. I've thrown over the biggest chance for making a fortune any simple minded lawyer ever had.

"I've destroyed my very promising career. We've nothing, my victorious enemy, but Faildyke and each other. We've got to be tillers of the earth, carriers of wood and drawers of water. And, Cathie, wait . . . wait . . . it won't be long now! . . . I never until this minute knew what it meant to be happy. There, my love, surrender. I've done my part. We're never to quarrel again . . . we've used up our life allowance. Give me your lips, Cathryn . . . what confounded tragic fools we've been!"

THE END.



Get Most Out of the Closing Relish Season

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1940: By The Chicago Tribune.]

There are no better kitchen odors than those of simmering chili sauces, catsups, and other relishes. Tomatoes, onions, peppers, spices, and vinegar can produce most enticing odors, whether they're all bubbling together to make a cooked sauce, or just combined and sealed without cooking.

The remaining few days of September and the first few in October are the housewife's last opportunity this season for preparing these good homemade sauces. A good guide in the process is "Favorite Pickles and Relishes," a booklet which may be obtained for 5 cents, in stamps, by writing to this department.

The recipes which follow are not included in the booklet, but there are others for beet relish, celery relish, corn relish, catsups, cooked and uncooked chili sauces, piccalilli, and the like.

Ingredients for relishes and pickles always should be used as fresh from the garden as possible. Spices should be fresh, too, for if they have stood on the shelf for a year or more, they probably have lost much of their flavor and aroma. Vinegar should be of the best qaulity. A good cider vinegar of 4 to 4.5 per cent acetic acid content is recommended.

INDIA RELISH.

1 dozen medium cucumbers
2 green peppers
2 red peppers [sweet]
6 green tomatoes

Bring slowly to a boil and drain again. Make a smooth paste of sugar, spices and a little cold vinegar. Bring the 2 cups vinegar to the boilding point and add mint, spices and mustard seed. On the House

By Louise Bargelt

If you'd wipe out the past, there's a white pigment stain sealer on the market. One coat of this can be used over dark heavy woodwork before you give it a modern, light color. It claims to insure against seepage thru of old stains. Also if you've a stained plaster wall or ceiling, you can apply this same potent sealer, before proceeding with your finish coats of paint or calcimine.

* *

Some 2,000 years ago the Romans heated their homes by warming their walls and floors. One of our newest types of heating employs this principle! We call it panel heating, and hot water or steam circulates thru coils imbedded or suspended in floors, walls or ceilings. Suited to small homes as well as large.

* *

If you'd cut costs in a new house, check on ways you can have an attractive color a part of your last plaster coat. If you crave a "different" finish for a pine paneled room, some finish appropriate to a boy's den or a man's study, mix for yourself a rich, coca shade stain, and apply.

The Tall Child Is in Need of Wise Guidance

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

There are two very tall girls that I know. Both are now really grown young women. Both are just under six feet in height, and very slender.

Both are attractive and intelligent and good dancers, but while one is straight as a willow wand, the other is very stooped.

Why? You probably know the reason. One was untroubled by her height, and encouraged to "stand tall." The other was so worried when she suddenly shot up that she stooped, making herself feel shorter. For years she did this, and now it is not only a settled posture habit but has in greater or less measure affected her bones and muscles. The correcting, if it could be brought about now, would require persistent effort and expert advice.

The easiest thing to do is to keep the tall girl from letting her shoulders droop while she is getting her growth.

• • •

For physical and psychological reasons, too, the child who is large for his or her years needs wise guiding. Girls take this harder than boys, but for both boys and girls one of the greatest helps is plenty of physical exercise, outdoor interests, and sports, altho it must never be carried to excess. School, as well as parents, must guard them against strain.

And this applies to both types of children who are large for their age, the type which shoots up, tall and slender, often outgrowing his strength, and the type which is not only tall but well developed, seeming more mature than his years. For the girls dancing, added to their other forms of exercise, is wonderful. It gives poise, real grace, and coordination, and so tends to make too tall girls lose the self-consciousness which is the bane of their existence.

All this physical activity helps the general development of the body to keep pace with the lengthening out process. It all helps, too, in posture, one direction in which the tall boy or girl suffers.

• • •

This stooping posture of children that have grow too fast is familiar to all of us. And while the physical activity suggested tends to correct it, the children need to become conscious themselves of the need to stand erect, to make a deliberate effort.

Too often parents, with the best intentions in the world, try to make children conscious of this need by constant nagging and reminding, which often defeats its own end. Of course, some reminding is necessary, but primarily a child should be made to understand the reasons for the reminders, that his bones are still growing and that a bad stooping posture cannot be corrected after he is full grown. He should not only be made to see that he does not look well stooped over, but also that his lung capacity is diminished by it and that it has a cramping effect upon the whole upper torso.

If he understands he is likely to try to remember himself, and not to resent occasional and friendly reminders, but they should only be occasional and always friendly.

And right here I want to remind parents of a fact about which there is still a great misconception. It is this: That standing straight does not mean throwing [or forcing] back the shoulders and thrusting out the chest. The simplest and briefest direction for standing straight is: Stand tall, also walk tall.

• • •

Before leaving the physical side I want to add one more suggestion. The boy or girl, growing excessively tall, need to have their strength conserved by plenty of rest, sleep, and the most nourishing of foods. Keep milk in their diet, too, if possible.

There is no doubt that being very tall is harder for a girl than for a boy. She feels more conspicuous. If she is at the party age, she finds herself taller than many of the boys she dances with. In school, altho she is in the class with girls of her own age, she is often head and shoulders above them. So she needs sympathy and wise counsel at home, besides physical care.

In this connection, one of the most important things to do is not to let your tall boy or girl try to withdraw from the society of other boys and girls during this growing period. Children frequently develop shyness and escape from the difficulties the world presents by constant reading. While the teens are the great reading age, a wise mother will not allow this to develop to the exclusion of plenty of wholesome companionship. And physically, excessive reading is bad for the posture. A "scholarly stoop" may sound interesting, but it really isn't!

• • •

It is not well, either, to allow a mental retreat gained by the too frequent seeing of movies. The most wholesome thing in life for any one, boy or girl, man or woman, is to meet situations, not to escape them.

You can give your girls the feeling that, while being very tall, may have some disadvantages, it may have many advantages, too. They can be made to see how charming many styles are for tall women.

The Lady of the House

Michaelmas today—the feast of St. Michael and All Angels—and how are your Michaelmas daisies and have you any Michaelmas crocus? Here great masses of wild aster overrun the countryside and give bright accent to fence rows and roadsides. Late low growing goldenrod makes a fine setting for these white and amethyst and sapphire jewels; with the hovering white and yellow butterflies like flickering flames, or dancing lights in their facets.

A friend reports that cedar waxwings have made a very thoro job of stripping her mountain ash. Beginning at the top they have worked down systematically, twig by twig and branch by branch, taking every berry. This same bird lover had the rare good fortune of seeing a whole flock of bluebirds at one time earlier in the summer.

Joe Pete brought wild plums from the country last week. The row of ruby glasses is more than just another mess of jelly and jam. It is a drift of fragrant white bloom over a tumbling spring brook; elusive perfume on an April wind; hum of honey bees; tiny green leaves bursting from brown little buds. It recalls a secluded corner in an old orchard, so unspoiled that a wild plum tree grew there undisturbed.

◆

"Give us some more of the rain verses," said several persons to the Lady of the House, and, for the life of her, she couldn't think of anything but Rain-in-the-Face, who was an Indian chief, wasn't he? Won't some one please come to the rescue with rain on the river, or rain on the lake, or rain anywhere—except thru the roof?

◆

Thank goodness, hems are still up and I hope they stay up until I finally can get caught up with them. Get my slips and petticoats and coats and things synchronized, as it were. Only yesterday some one called at 11:30 to remind me of a committee luncheon at 1. I got the family luncheon out of the way a bit early, raced thru a hurried toilet. While I slid a slip over my head I breathed a thankful little sigh at the thought of the new sheer wool in my closet.

When that was on I caught a glimpse of myself in the mirror. Horrors! My slip showed in front. I hastily pinned it up with one of those tiny gilt safety pins [heaven bless the one who invented them], only to discover that when I stood straight the slippery slip slid down my back and hung out behind. Another pin remedied that, but as the skirt swung there was a scallop of slip showing at the side.

I yanked off the dress. Yanked off the slip. Tossed things about frantically, trying to find a shorter one. Finally, I snatched up the offending garment and hastily stitched a deep wiggly tuck in it, making it six inches shorter in several places. I called a taxi and arrived 10 minutes late.

◆

Halfway thru the tomato juice I began to relax and said, "Time was when a girl wore her dresses to cover her knees until her mid teens, when she began to let down her skirts and put up her hair. A year or two later her skirts were down to the floor and the girl was grown up and that settled it."

"Heavens! Don't tell me you want them back; those long six yards around the bottom skirts edged with heavy brush braid?" exclaimed our chairman.

Mrs. Smith, 60 and looking 50, laughed. "I remember how proud I was of my 15 gores, all crackly and stiff with deep fiber chamois interlining and made slick and slippery with glazed cambric lining. It was bound with corduroy and had a dust ruffle of bright green taffeta. Sometimes when I turned quickly I could make it show a little. With a knee skirt and a long flounced petticoat under it, and a fitted, boned basque to top it off, it made quite a costume. I actually played at tennis in it."

"You should see the picture of Aunt Mattie in mother's album! She has on what they called a bell skirt. A lot of the hidden encumbrances seem to have been dispensed with, so it fits close to the hips and swoops down to a nipped in line at the knees; then flares out round the feet like a huge upside down morning glory. She looks fairly regal in it, but how did she manage to get thru a puddle on a rainy day, carrying an umbrella and the chops and things for dinner?"

"O, girls, remember the pegtop? Wouldn't I be a sight in one now!" The speaker was a stout 42. "And those first trotteurs!" [Walking skirts to you, if you weren't trying to be "Frenchy."]

"And the funny hobbles. I remember having one when Tommy was a baby. What a time I had getting off and on the street cars!" This from Mrs. Brown, gray and dignified.

"Well, this season we have wrapped a few inches of skirt around us in the surf and on the sands. Or have we? We've had them way up for tennis and way down for moonlight glamor. So, with all the tumult elsewhere there is peace along the hemline," as our chairman finished her coffee with relish. "Shall we proceed to business, ladies?"

This Mr. Smith.

This Mr. Smith has one of those shrinking little wives. Like violets, you know. Shrinks more and more; he dominates her so completely. Always leading the conversation. Shuts her up without telling her to. He's got to be the head man in that show.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

SIZES 4-10

Altho adults have adopted the pinafore as their special favorite this season, the style still is the youngsters' prerogative, an "inherited" right, as it were. Just to show that designers still make pinafores for youngsters, we present this version today. It's a grand style for school and general everyday wear, and made in more expensive materials it may well go dressed up to parties.

This model buttons down the back. The neckline in front is square and the skirt is moderately flared. The treatment given this costume is varied, ranging from frilly shoulder ruffles to Puritan plain, untrimmed simplicity. For the smallest youngsters the pattern provides panties to match, and for children of all ages it offers a long or short sleeved blouse with Peter Pan collar. Woolens, silks, and cottons make up with equal success.

Style No. 3459 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material for pinafore; ⅞ yard for panties; 1 yard for short sleeved blouse; 1¼ yards for blouse with long sleeves.

Misapprehensions

By Eleanor Jewett.

I saw a star fall and I thought
God had turned a deaf ear
To a prayer;
I saw a leaf blow from a tree
And I thought summer dead—
Frost white on her hair.
But the dark caught the star,
Held it safe;
God cherished the prayer.
Fall turned her back
And I found
Summer still there.

Silhouette Is Multiple on Fashion Scene

By Rea Seeger.

The fall fashion silhouettes this season are varied and numerous. In any collection you will find the complete range from the straight, narrow, pencil outline to the fitted bodice and full or flared skirt. There are severely tailored, simple lines and others that are softened with shirrings and drapery, ruffles and flounces. The choice is wide. And there isn't a feminine figure fault, such as the too tall, the too short, the too wide, that can't be suited.

• • •

In the accompanying sketch are five examples of fall fashions for daytime wear, selected to show the possibilities in line and design that the stockrooms hold for inquisitive shoppers. They are all-purpose dresses, suitable to wear for any informal occasion, such as the matinée, luncheon downtown, little dinners. Dresses of this type are particularly suitable for wear now. They have the kind of individual interest that makes them excellent costumes to wear without a coat or with just a fur scarf, and still are simple enough to make wearing them on the street permissible. Later on, during the cold weather, they will be comfortable under fur coats. With just the simple shirring at the hips, the front fullness, the cartridge trimming, or the velvet bands with the flat bow they are lightweight, flat and smooth fitting, and without bulk. There are hundreds of other styles in heavy silk or lightweight wool to choose from.

• • •

Black still is a leader in the fall color chart, plain, unadorned black, or stunningly combined with taupe or cinnamon, or soft brown such as benedictine brown. Also fashionable are soft gray blues, sage and poison greens, huckleberry and cinnamon, or gold, plum, and black cherry. Something to suit every customer.

Significant in the fall fashion scheme is the use of beads and sequins for trimming. A lot of it will be seen this season.

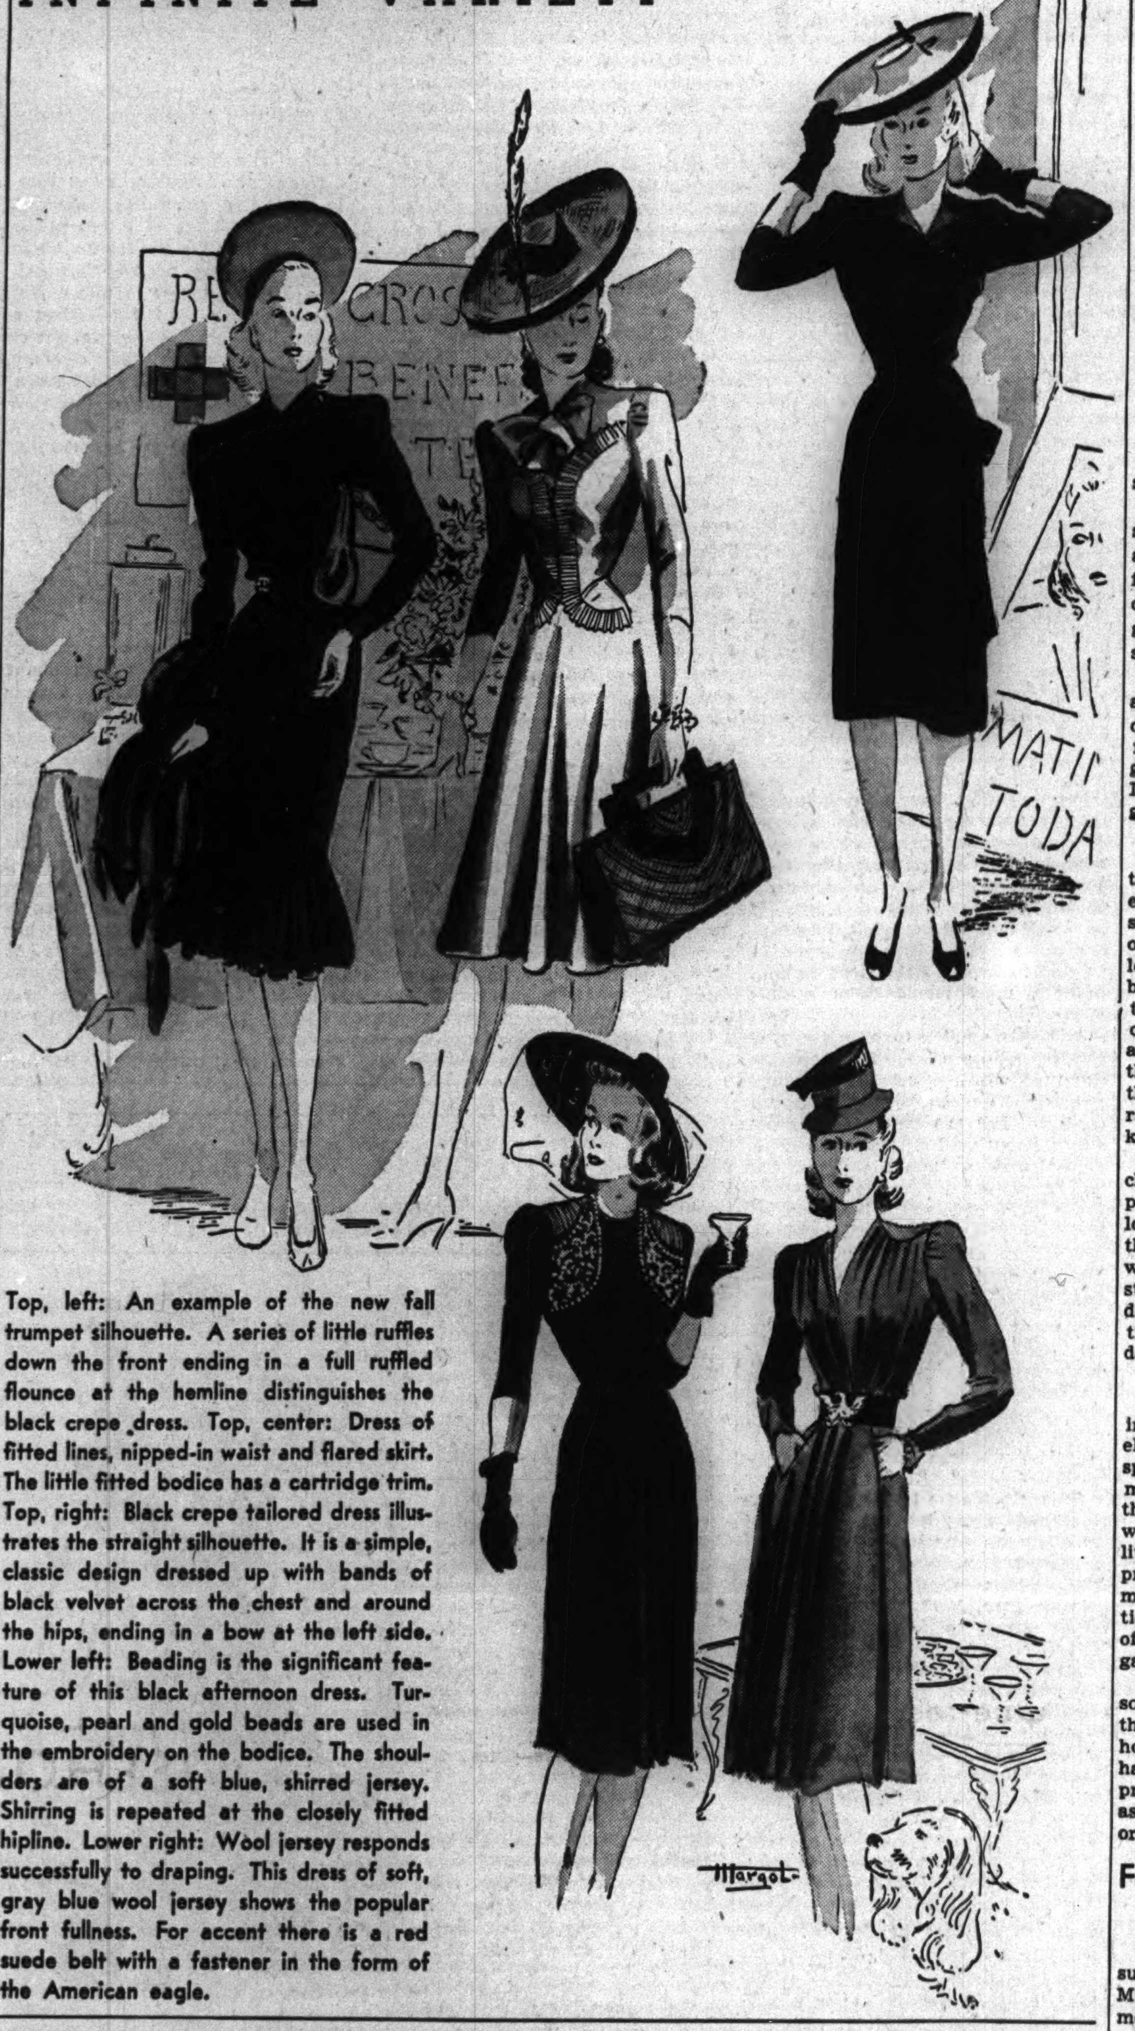
FIVE FALL FROCKS OFFER INFINITE VARIETY



Top, left: An example of the new fall trumpet silhouette. A series of little ruffles down the front ending in a full ruffled flounce at the hemline distinguishes the black crepe dress. Top, center: Dress of fitted lines, nipped-in waist and flared skirt. The little fitted bodice has a cartridge trim. Top, right: Black crepe tailored dress illustrates the straight silhouette. It is a simple, classic design dressed up with bands of black velvet across the chest and around the hips, ending in a bow at the left side. Lower left: Beading is the significant feature of this black afternoon dress. Turquoise, pearl and gold beads are used in the embroidery on the bodice. The shoulders are of a soft blue, shirred jersey. Shirring is repeated at the closely fitted hipline. Lower right: Wool jersey responds successfully to draping. This dress of soft, gray blue wool jersey shows the popular front fullness. For accent there is a red suede belt with a fastener in the form of the American eagle.

Sportsmanship Is the Basis of Social Etiquet

What assets have you which you can develop to make yourself charming? For helpful hints on how to make people like you, read "Charm and Self-Consciousness," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. On sale at Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

Manners in sports are known as sportsmanship.

In general, the rules of etiquet for sporting games that have grown up and developed with the game are for the same purpose as any social code of ethics, that of helping the game to go smoothly, and for the safety and protection of the players.

We don't know of any more pleasant and painless way to teaching children manners and to learn respect for others than by playing organized games and learning sportsmanship. It is a lesson that isn't quickly forgotten.

• • •

There is no necessity for going into the specific set of rules applied to each particular game. They differ slightly according to the peculiarities of the game, such as no hitting "below the belt" in boxing, blocking in basketball, offside in football. Altho they differ in application, in principle they are the same. And there are other little customs of behavior that have not so much to do with the actual playing of the game but rather are courtesies that help to keep it a game instead of a battle.

Learning sportsmanship teaches children to respect teammates and opponents, teaches them to be good losers and modest winners, teaches them to be fair players, to coöperate with their teams and partners instead of seeking personal and individual glory. Are not all these qualities that may be applied to our everyday social and business experiences?

• • •

Playing organized games and enjoying outdoor sports does something else for the child besides building sportsmanship, and that is building more perfect health. The increase in the average height of men and women, the broad shoulders, strong, lithe bodies, beautiful figures, improved posture, good health, and alert minds, all of these admirable qualities are the result, at least in part, of physical education and training in games and sports.

If there are any adults within the sound of my voice who didn't learn the rules of sportsmanship in childhood, or have forgotten them, they had better recall the principles and practice them as they apply to the associations in business, in the home, or on the golf course.

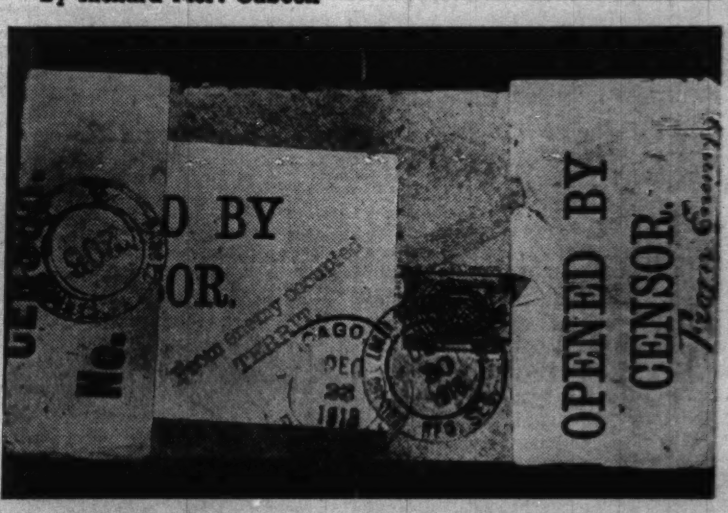
The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



This cover which is shown thru the kindness of Mrs. Conrad S. Mila of Chicago was sent to her by her sister during the final period of the World war. The stamps are Russian and practically all of them are covered by censor labels. There is an unusual marking which appears both in manuscript and rubber stamped. It reads "From enemy occupied territory."

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker has announced that the postoffice department will issue three new postage stamps in connection with the national defense program.

These stamps, which are to be of the 1, 2, and 3 cent denominations, will be placed on sale for the first time in Washington, D. C., on Oct. 16, National Registration day.

The motif for the 1 cent stamp will be industry and agriculture, that for the 2 cent stamp will be the army and navy while the 3 cent stamp will represent security, education, conservation, and health.

Portrayed on the 1 cent stamp, which is to be printed in green ink, will be the Statue of Liberty, with the inscription "United States of America" across the top, with the designation "Industry - Agriculture" immediately beneath. Across the bottom of the stamp will be the denomination designation, with the figure "1" separating the words "Postage" and "Cent."

Pictured on the 2 cent defense stamp, symbolic of the army and navy, will be one of the new 90 millimeter antiaircraft guns with the inscription "United States of America" across the top of the stamp in large type, directly below which will be the wording "Army and Navy." The figure "2," dividing the words "Postage" and "Cents" will appear across the bottom of this stamp, which is to be printed in red ink.

The torch of enlightenment will be reproduced on the 3 cent defense stamp, which will be purple in color, with the wording "Security, Conservation" in the upper left corner and "Education, Health" in the upper right corner of the stamp. As in the case of the 1 and 2 cent denominations, the inscription "United States of America" will appear across the top of the 3 cent issue, with the denomination designation "3" dividing the words "Postage" and "Cents" across the bottom of the stamp.

Stamp collectors desirous of obtaining first day covers of the new national defense stamps should forward requests together with the proper remittance to the postmaster, Washington, D. C.

The Republic of Honduras is the first member of the Pan-American union officially to announce a special postal issue in the forthcoming international series of stamps dedicated to the proposed Columbus Memorial lighthouse.

Honduras will issue a series of eight stamps having a face value of 4 lempiras 26 centavos or a little more than $2 in United States currency. On account of the shortness of time a new design cannot be prepared and the issue will be provided by overprinting in red upon the current series of official air mail stamps. The overprint reads "Habilitado para Servicio Publico, Pro Faro Colon, 1940.'"

It is expected the stamp section of the Pan-American Union will have this and other Columbus memorial sets available for collectors at face value plus postage on the day following the release of the stamps in their respective countries on Oct. 12. Collectors who are interested should file a request with the Pan-American Union, stamp section, Washington, D. C., for further information.

At this time the Pan-American Union is offering the stamps of 13 nations which have been issued to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the union. A full priced list will be sent on request to the union.

Only a few months ago the Pan-American union went into the stamp business to sell those stamps of member nations which were issued on the 50th anniversary of the union. Now the stamp section of the union is offering the first of a long series of issues in connection with the Columbus memorial Lighthouse to be erected in the Dominican Republic. Perhaps it is but a question of time until the union establishes a full fledged philatelic agency for the stamps of the 20 Latin American member nations.

The convention of the World Wide Philatelic association at Detroit Oct. 24-27 is the outstanding event in stamp circles for the coming month. In addition to the very large exhibition, bourse, and banquet which are the usual features of this association's conventions, there will be meetings of the Foot Loose Filatelists and the Wa Hoos, which are social fraternities of stamp collectors. There will be a midnight gathering of the Visiting Firemen of Philately where anything may happen.

Mails for Estonia, Germany, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics [Russia] is now routed to San Francisco for shipment via Japan and the trans-Siberian railroad. The trans-Pacific Clipper service is not available for the dispatch of airmail to the countries mentioned.

The editor of this column has a query regarding the National Cheese week celebration in Monroe, Wis. The writer has failed to hear from the sponsor of Cheese Week cachet and thinks perhaps he neglected to furnish his address. He is no doubt right as in his letter to the Stamp Collector he failed to provide either his name or address. His letter is postmarked at Chicago.

Another correspondent residing in Battle Creek, Mich., using a post card showing a view of the flower garden of the Kellogg company confines his remarks to the editor to the salutation "Dear Sir." Was something left unsaid?

The souvenir seal for this year shows the Mainliner of United Air Lines, and is issued perforated and imperforate. Collectors and dealers may obtain details regarding the exhibition, the seals and souvenir programs from Roman Reinowski Jr., 1939 South Highland avenue, Berwyn, Ill.

Allyn K. Ford, 100 North 7th street, Minneapolis, Minn., booster of Mrs. Stewart's building, who will be remembered long for his "Washline" caricature of the Four States commemorative and for his "Famous Women" souvenir block, has another block for collectors of humorous sidelines. This commemorates "Famous Blues" and includes stamps in honor of "NRA", of the Connecticut blue laws, and of George Gershwin, famous composer of "blues," as well as to honor the 57th anniversary of Mrs. Stewart. A souvenir block may be had by any reader who sends an addressed, stamped envelope for reply to Mr. Ford.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1940: By Ely Culbertson.]

When two experts play as partners against two average players, they often attempt to put over some "fast ones," especially in the bidding. Mind you, there will be nothing even mildly off color in these efforts—nothing in the line of private conventions or understandings, nothing which could possibly be adjudged unethical. They rely entirely on their ability to detect each other's phoney bids on the sole and pure basis of logic—or rather illogic—at the same time hoping that this supreme test of a bid will be over the heads of their opponents.

Now let us suppose that you, dear reader, found yourself partnered with such a player as described, viz., an expert who regarded you as his peer and expected you to "catch" all his psychic, phoney, or strategic bids, and to coöperate fully with him. Your opponents are "not so good," but their bidding can be relied upon for honesty, if not for 100 per cent accuracy. So much for the stage setting. Now what would you bid in the following situations: [I think it only fair to offer two warnings: [a] Don't get the fixed idea that all of these situations are "tricky." [b] Bear in mind that your partner in this particular game may bid peculiarly, unorthodoxly, fancily—but never stupidly!]:

1. East-West vulnerable. You are South. You deal and bid one diamond, holding:

♠KQ75 ♥K10 ♦AJ953 ♣Q5

West overcalls with one spade, North bids two no trump, and East passes.

What call do you make?

2. Both sides vulnerable. You are South. The bidding proceeds:

East	South	West	North
1 club	Pass	1 no trump	Double
Pass	?

You hold:

♠1043 ♥952 ♦654 ♣KJ73

What call do you make?

3. Both sides vulnerable. You are South. The bidding proceeds.

West	North	East	South
1 diamond	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	1 spade	2 hearts
Pass	3 clubs	Pass	?

You hold:

♠AKQ ♥KQJ974 ♦1075 ♣8

What call do you make?

4. You are South and vulnerable; the opponents are not vulnerable. The bidding proceeds:

West	North	East	South
1 diamond	Pass	Pass	?

You hold:

♠J8432 ♥K5 ♦AJ84 ♣105

What call do you make?

5. East-West vulnerable. You are South. The bidding proceeds:

East	South	West	North
1 heart	1 spade	3 hearts	Double
Pass	?

You hold:

♠KQ832 ♥Q53 ♦K6 ♣Q42

What call do you make?

Hearts are trump and South leads. North and South are to win six tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads ten of trump, North discarding the club. South leads the spade ace and then the diamond king, West discarding a diamond on the spade. East wins the diamond and returns the suit. South plays the jack and North overtakes with the queen, and leads the spade queen. If East covers, South trumps and leads the small diamond, so that North shall make the spade trick.

Answers.

1. Your best call is three diamonds. You might as well face the disappointment that you are not going game on this deal! In view of your spade holding and West's vulnerable spade overcall, it is just about 1,000 to 1 that your partner's two no trump bid was phoney. It is a popular device of many expert players to overcall a vulnerable bid in this fashion with the hope of "holding down" further adverse bidding. As a matter of fact, there is really no such bid as two no trump, not vulnerable, directly over a vulnerable overcall. If the two no trump bidder had the requisite strength for such a call, he would have a much better penalty double. Hence, the only logical purpose of such a bid is to scare off the opponents. In this case, North dared not hope that you had such good defense against spades, hence, being defenseless himself, thought it necessary to run a bluff. Were you now to bid three no trump, one of two things would happen: [a] if the opponents failed to double, North would probably stand pat and go down a few tricks; [b] if they doubled, North would run to four diamonds [he undoubtedly has four or five of this suit] and probably go down one or two tricks. North's entire idea was to buy the contract at diamonds as cheaply as possible; your duty is to assist him in this effort, hence your run-out to three diamonds at the present time.

2. Two clubs. There is nothing tricky or master-mindish about this bid—no question of making or reading a bluff is involved. Your simple duty is to get out of a dangerous situation as cheaply as possible. North undoubtedly has a good hand, but you certainly cannot afford to make a penalty pass to his double. By bidding two clubs you leave the three higher ranking suits at his disposal. There is no danger of North's regarding your two club bid as a cue bid showing a strong hand because [a] you made no call over one club, and [b] with even reasonable strength, you would make a penalty pass to the takeout double.

3. Three no trump. This also is a straight bidding proposition in which you are not called upon to interpret a possible psychic of partner's, but merely to visualize the probable distribution of suits around the table. The only idea here is to avoid a four heart contract which might easily meet defeat. North's penalty pass to your double of one diamond showed length in the suit. You have three diamonds and the original bidder might well have six. There is grave danger that East is void of diamonds—a possibility enhanced by his takeout of the double. Thus an opening diamond lead is quite apt to be ruffed and since West probably has the heart ace, another diamond ruff may easily follow. In short, played in hearts, the opponents may have no trouble collecting four tricks, but with your partner's bidding showing diamond and club strength, a game at no trump figures to be a cinch.

4. Pass. Another straightforward question to be decided entirely by the vulnerability conditions. Your partner made no overcall of one diamond. Since he is vulnerable and the opponents are not, it would be absurd for him to be lying back as a trap, and your own diamond holding is further proof that this was not his reason for passing. The only sound reason, therefore, is the supremely simple one that he just did not have the values for any overcall. In view of that fact, you have no earthly right to think of game for yourself, and to disturb the one diamond may be offering the opponents a glorious opportunity to go game in hearts or no trump. West's hand may be just short of an opening two-bid and, given the opportunity, West and his partner may get together at an undefeatable game contract.

5. Three spades. Disappointing as it may be, you must abandon the hope of murdering the opponents on this deal. Far from "loving" your partner's penalty double of three hearts, you should look on that double with the deepest suspicion. It cannot be honest! Let us look at the facts: East, vulnerable, opened the bidding with one heart, showing at least a four card suit, and West, equally vulnerable, overcalled your spade bid with a double raise, showing at least another four hearts. You hold three hearts. Your partner, therefore, is limited to two hearts and, even if these were miraculously the ace and king, he could not consider doubling on such a short trump holding. There is another item involved which is at least equally as significant: West's three heart bid was an absolute force on East. That being so, how abysmally stupid it would have been of North to interrupt the proceedings with a double when, merely by waiting for one round, he would have acquired the chance to double a higher contract. Thus by no stretch of the imagination can you consider that North really wants to play against three hearts doubled. He expects you to recognize the absurdity of said double and to take appropriate rescuing steps. This you do with three spades, and hope that the opponents don't bid four hearts. Don't worry about finding spade support—you'll find it and probably a singleton heart to boot. You'll also find a hand virtually defenseless against hearts.

Film Designers Do Not Create for Fashions

By Bettina Bedwell.

Does Hollywood set the styles? Is Hollywood the style center of the world? No and Yes to these questions have been taking up a considerable space in the press lately. Folks seem to be pretty hectic over them, and warming up in their opinions.

It seems to me that the business of pinning down the source of the styles to one locality is a pretty risky matter. Fashion is one of our vast industries, pouring out style-slanted clothes, accessories, and details every day of every month. And this industry can absorb a tremendous amount of feed in the shape of design over the period of a year. To set THE styles and to be THE style center, any place named would have to supply that feeding almost entirely. It would be more accurate to say A style center, in speaking of Hollywood, and the answer then would be 100 per cent yes.

• • •

No responsible person in the style industry will deny that, while Paris existed as a fashion source, basic styles came from there. Many of the fashions in any season come from New York, likewise from Hollywood, and some from London and other points. Key women, famous in society or on the stage, are the source of other style trends. All of these sources of nation-wide fashions take the tone of the fashions they set from events, and the front page also deserves a place in a list of style setters for the world.

Hollywood does set the styles, and for the whole world in one sense; I mean in making visual for all women an ideal of looks, which, consciously or unconsciously, influences every one of us in choosing what we wear. I've seen that ideal affecting women in Paris, London, Rome, Madrid, New York, Chicago, and all the other cities I've visited.

It is not a matter of concrete dresses and hats, coats, and such things, because the Hollywood screen designers, each and every one, aver that they work for screen character and not to make fashions, so that when a star appears on the screen, what she wears is not immediately copied and put on the backs of millions of women over the land. Filmland clothes are not tuned to seasonal fashion changes which must control the industry actually supplying mass fashions, either, but that does not alter the clear truth, that Hollywood films are the most potent influence on the taste of women existing in our modern world.

• • •

If, and when, the designers here working for major film companies and dressing the great stars combine to feed the fashion industry, they will be actually and literally bringing to fact the claim that Hollywood sets the styles for the world. And these designers are gifted, with a thorough knowledge of designing not to be ignored, even though they are not working constantly on turning out mass styles.

In addition to the screen designers, there are in Hollywood and vicinity designers of play clothes, and several other designers of general clothes, who draw more and more style prestige to this section. Their fashion inspirations are to be found east, west, north, and south in our country.

It is high time, it seems to me, that our prophets learned to be their age. They really ought to try to live in the 20th century. And this means that questions such as what is the style center of the world, and who sets the styles when the claimants try to pin the answers down to a single locality are as out of date as the horse and buggy. We live in the epoch of the great air liner, the ocean liner, the transglobe telephone, the radio, and the radiophoto, and all localities are mighty close together these days. So fashions, like all things in modern life, come from diverse sources, stem from varied influences. There's room enough for the gifted designer working in Hollywood, in New York, in Paris, London, or Rio de Janeiro, or any other point of the civilized compass. And the means of gathering fashion from almost anywhere are available.

• • •

Any person pretending to state with authority what fashion is, or where it comes from, cannot, furthermore, ignore the sources of materials, accessories, and the countless details which make it. These, too, in our present age, are gathered from many places, and do a potent job of building the final image we think of as style or fashion.

What makes the Hollywood designers hopping mad is when supercilious critics point to screen clothes designed by them for anything in the world but fashion, and then cite those as the Hollywood idea of style.

A costume Adrian designed for Katharine Hepburn, who'll wear it in "Philadelphia Story," he emphatically does not mean any one to consider as a style. The romantic ruffled skirt is red and white taffeta, the blouse white sheer crêpe trimmed with the taffeta.

Designed by Travis Banton, a frock that will be worn by Linda Darnell in "The Californian" is romance incarnate. The black velvet bodice and white organza skirt, the white lace mantilla held by ostrich tips, and the lace fan are early California themes.

Another costume made by Travis Banton for the same film is made of black broadcloth.

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Hats, as you may have noticed, have done a flip-flop. Where they used to slant precariously over one eye, leaving the back of the head completely exposed, they now slant backward and it's the front hair arrangement in which all interest centers.

Whether you like it or not, the coiffure line is upward. It isn't the swoosh of a few years ago, when it was skinned up in the back and arranged in rosettes on the crown. But the arrangement line IN THE FRONT is now an upward one and you can't get away from it.

• • •

This upward line in the front is loosely described as the pompadour fashion. Not the most precise term for it, but the accepted one. What it means really is that "hair interest," in other words, the trick or distinctive coiffure feature, is centered in the front, either above or on the brow.

It's an adaptable fashion. If bangs become you, this is the year to wear them, making certain at the same time that the hair at the side is drawn upward from the ears. Piquant is the word for it!

If you're a college girl or of college age your adaptation of the pompadour fashion probably will consist of one roll of hair right smack in the front, or a center part with a roll on either side. The "beanies" or dinks that are so popular as college millinery are worn well back of front coils of hair.

• • •

If you're a mature woman you'll want a pompadour version that softens. Side hair must be drawn upward, but the top hair may be arranged in any of a dozen fashions. If you want to add height and the illusion of slimness, hair may be arranged in soft waves with a few ringlets right on top, or you can preserve the high outline, but soften it considerably, by bringing some hair in a soft fringe right down on the forehead.

In any case, it's the front hair arrangement that counts. It will be that new twist to your hairdress that makes you look like a different person this year, and it's a twist that will show beneath your 1940-'41 bonnets.

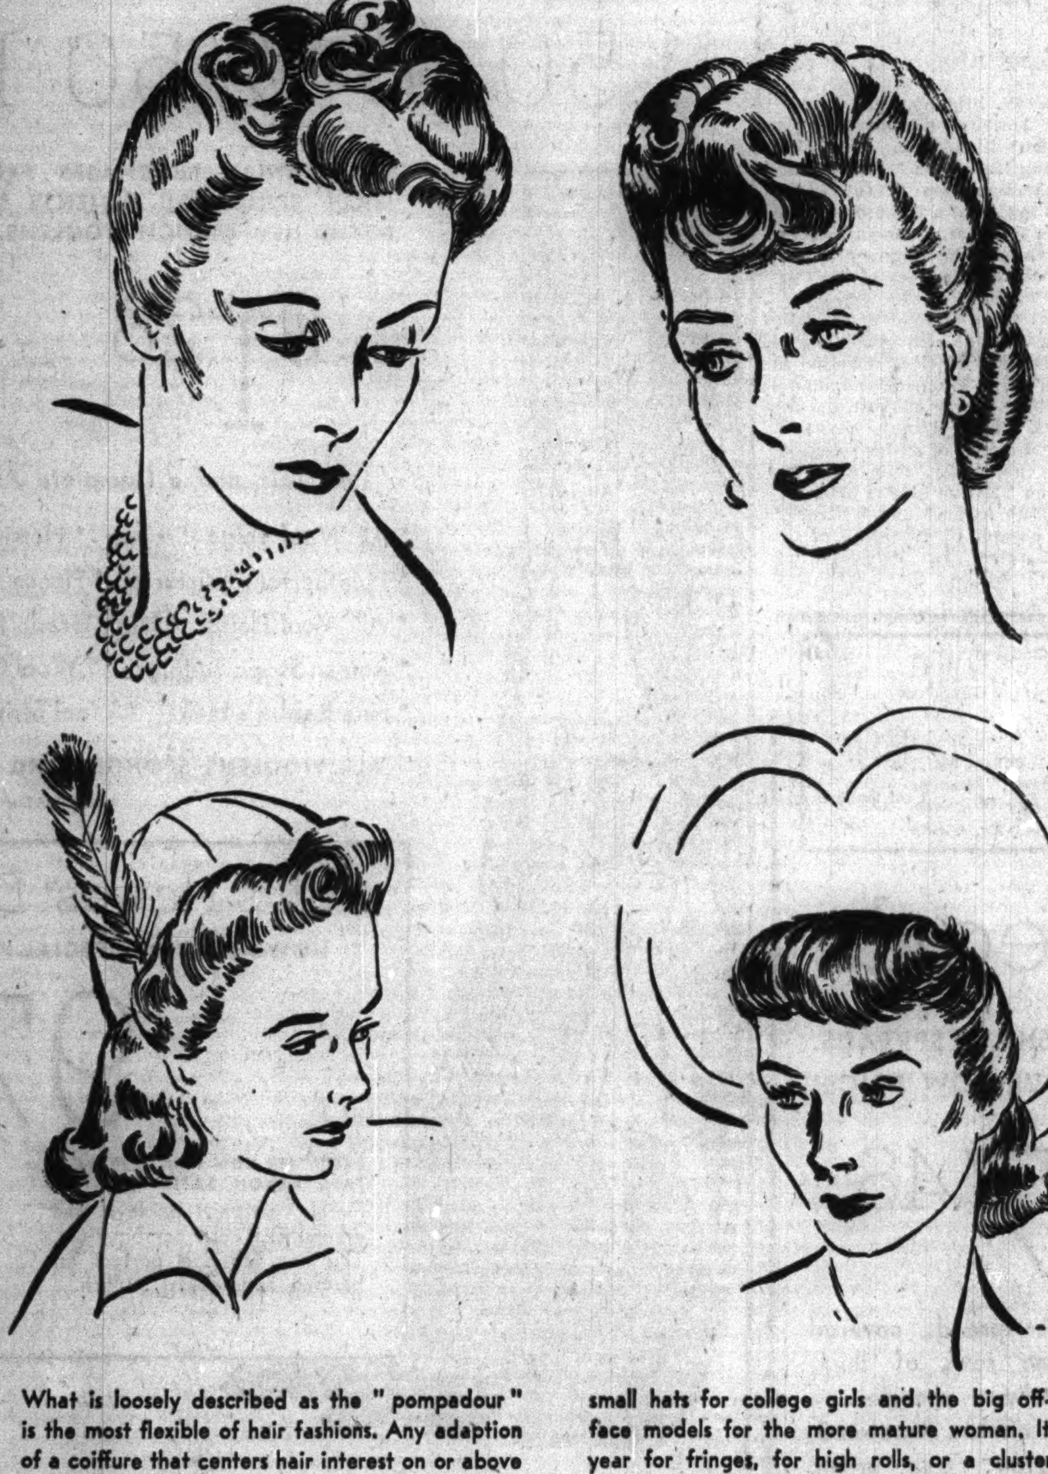
Eleanor Nangle, "thru her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids and tells you about them daily in The Chicago Tribune.



What is loosely described as the "pompadour" is the most flexible of hair fashions. Any adaption of a coiffure that centers hair interest on or above the brow is a variation of the pompadour style, and such variations are countless. Most hats this year will reveal the front hair, especially the small hats for college girls and the big off-the-face models for the more mature woman. It's a year for fringes, for high rolls, or a cluster of curls above the forehead. In nearly every instance the ears are revealed and back hair may be short or medium length.

Knitted gloves for women and wristlets for men offer quick and easy knitting jobs for those who want to keep their hands occupied, and provide warm and attractive gifts for their friends. The simple, two toned knitted gloves illustrated are done on two needles. The cuffs are done with four double pointed ones. The wristlets may be knitted on either two or three needles, depending upon individual preference.

For instructions in knitting the gloves and wristlets, No. 832, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

The Indispensable Shirtwaist Frock in an Autumn Version

By Bettina Bedwell.

As enthusiastically as they adopt new styles designers offer, women still refuse to dispense with a few of the old favorites, among which is the shirtwaist frock. Thus it behooves couturiers to give the shirtmaker a new touch here and there every season, and one stylist has come to the fore with this especially attractive version for fall, 1940.

The original of soft blue crêpe is a charmer, but other colors and even other fabrics may be employed with comparable success. There's a trim small collar on the V neckline, and buttons in a precise row down the front of the bodice, which is shirred beneath the shoulder yoke. Sleeves that are military square at the top are casually full and reach to bracelet height. Whereas the back of the shirt is simple and plain, the front takes to restrained fullness for special interest.

Style No. 5367 is designed for sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material.

HOUSEHOLD FORUM

By Louise Bargelt

[Have you some household help that lightens labor; is there some comfort you could enjoy; are there ways you've discovered to make the household wheels run more smoothly? Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune. We'll be glad to pass on your ideas!]

Mrs. K. Lane, Chicago—To preserve my leather books that I have special regard for I rub them well each fall with a mixture of half paraffin and half castor oil.

* *

Ellen Thomas, St. Louis, Mo.—Last spring I started a garden notebook, jotting down the sort of seeds I planted, dates of planting, first appearance of flowers and vegetables, and so on, and I already know this is going to be a big help and guide to me in next spring's work.

* *

Mrs. F. Henderson, Chicago—It would be a boon if shoe designers would use small bolts and screws on women's shoes to make heels more secure, and prevent falls when a heel comes off unexpectedly.

* *

Miss Frieda Petersen, Chicago—Glad to pass along this help for picnic lunches that we tried out last summer—and it worked. My husband sharpened a dozen regular clothespins and we used them to hold down luncheon cloths on the ground. We twisted and inserted each corner of cloth between clothespin legs and then pushed clothespin in ground at slight angle. The wind couldn't play such havoc with cloth.

* *

Mrs. Fred King, Chicago—Most of my family are chronic cracker-in-bed eaters; why won't some one invent a speedy, effective little decrumber?

* *

Linda Weeks, Springfield, Ill.—It would certainly be a joy if all small library terrestrial globes were illuminated for night use now that we're all so interested in studying maps!

* *

Helen Grove, Aurora, Ill.—I protect my rubber gloves by inserting wads of cotton in the finger tips. They fit better this way, and finger nails don't tear them.

* *

Jane Long, Chicago—Here's a good help when it comes to washing walls. I always use a mixture of cleaning powder and soapy water and to this mixture I add enough flour to make a good paste. This makes mixture stick to wall long enough so powder dissolves dirt.

* *

Mrs. Lena Schmidt, Milwaukee—I think it would be a good idea to waterproof shopping bags, so they won't get soaked when you're caught in rain, or paper bottoms won't break thru if you set bags in damp places.

* *

Miss Eileen Murphy, Chicago—Here's how I brighten the gilt frames of my pictures every fall. I use enough flower of sulphur to give a quart of water a golden tint. Then I boil four onions [bruised] in water and when water is cold strain off liquid. I use a soft brush to wash gilding that needs to be brightened.

* *

Rae Stacey, Chicago—I use wooden spoons for all my beating, stirring, and blending jobs when cooking. They don't mar or scratch bowls and are quieter.

Miss Jessie Door, St. Paul, Minn.—Now that winter is nearly around the corner, it would be a convenience if some one would market a clothes drying rack [portable and folding] to fit over radiator tops for emergency drying of clothes in a family.

Now—YOUR IDEA—please!

Mother of Five Earns Living with Parachute

Among the few women in the United States who make a living at parachute jumping is Mrs. Pearl Graves Allen of Batavia, N. Y. The mother of five children, she makes leaps from balloons as high as 6,000 feet. She and her husband perform at county fairs and at amusement parks.

Pennsylvania City Is Fining Girls in Shorts

An ordinance is now enforced in Honesdale, Pa., barring from the street girls over 14 years of age in shorts, bathing suits, three piece play suits, and other "scanty attire." The measure imposes a $5 fine for the first offense and a $10 fine for the second.

[ADVERTISMENT]

Pull the Trigger on Constipation

with herb laxative,combined with syrup pepsin to make it agreeable and easy to take

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with good old Syrup Pepsin to make your laxative more agreeable and easier to take. For years many Doctors have used pepsin compounds, as agreeable carriers to make other medicines more palatable when your "taster" feels easily upset. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna, combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully its herb Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines, to bring welcome relief from constipation. And see how its Syrup Pepsin makes Dr. Caldwell's medicine so smooth and agreeable to a touchy gullet. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna at your druggist's today. Try one laxative that won't bring on violent distaste, even when you take it after a full meal.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

We hope that no reader who is replacing household equipment this fall will discard any usable item of furniture. There is great need for all kinds of household equipment, and nothing that is clean and useful, even tho it may be old fashioned, should be thrown away.

Many readers probably have surplus items stored in basements or attics. Gathered together, they would be a great help to Mrs. S., who is in need of furniture.

There are five children in the family, ranging in age from 7 to 14. One youngster now is in the hospital recovering from an operation. The furniture she used in her home was loaned to her by relatives, but a short time ago it was necessary that she return it. The six room flat in which the family lives now contains two beds, one without a mattress, two dressers, one table, two chairs, and a kerosene stove.

During the summer several of the children were able to sleep on the floors, but the mother fears that their poorly heated quarters will cause further illness in the family, unless proper sleeping arrangements can be provided.

The family is being assisted by a relief agency, which cannot provide even second hand furniture.

Mrs. R. has written for assistance for an elderly couple.

"Dear Miss Brown: I know of an elderly unfortunate couple who would really appreciate a little help in the way of some furniture, such as a kitchen table and chairs, a rug, or some pieces to replace their 40 year old living room set. As a matter of fact, they could use just about anything. They are living in a three room basement flat, north of the loop. I shall be glad to call for and deliver any items offered."

• • •

From the extreme south side of the city:

"Dear Miss Brown: My husband is not employed, but has managed to pick up odd jobs and, so far, we've managed to get along without going on relief. We have two children, 3 and 2, and expect a third. Soon the weather will be cold and damp, and since we live on the first floor of a building which has no basement, our home is drafty. It is hard to keep the youngsters off the floor, and if we had some rugs, it would make us much more comfortable. We also need a bed for the girls, since we soon will need the crib for the new baby. We have no couch or sofa we could use. In fact, all the furniture we have is a bed, dresser, and baby bed. In the parlor are two chairs which we received from an old observation car and two odd tables a friend gave to me. Our kitchen is empty except for a stove and an old ice box.

"If you can only help me get some odd pieces of furniture to fill these empty rooms, our home won't be so dreary this winter. A friend of ours who has a car will be glad to pick up things for us.—Mrs. F. G."

United Charities Announce Free Program Series

A new series of programs available without charge to organizations was announced last week by Joel D. Hunter, general superintendent of the United Charities of Chicago. Social legislation, relief problems, legal aid to the poor, and the mental hygiene aspects of child guidance and family welfare are among the topics offered. A motion picture, "Conquering Trouble," produced by the United Charities last year, also will be procurable for showing without charge. Information on the programs is available at the agency's downtown office, 330 South Wells street.

The Geographic Society to Give Lecture Course

The Geographic Society of Chicago this season will present a course of five lectures on "The Story of Man," dealing particularly with the peoples of Melanesia, Australia, and Africa. The series will be held at the Goodman theater, beginning Monday, Oct. 21, and continuing on Nov. 29, Jan. 3, Feb. 3, and March 3. The study is a sequel to a series on "Man in America," sponsored by the society last year.

Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution, will give the opening lecture on "The Melanesians," black settlers of the South Seas. As leader of a Dutch-American expedition into the unknown interior of New Guinea, he obtained a pictorial record of the lives of the Pygmies and Papuans.

Prof. W. Lloyd Warner of the University of Chicago will give the second lecture on "Black Civilization in Australia." Prof. Warner lived among the primitive people of Australia for two years. Ralph Linton, chairman of the department of anthropology of Columbia university, will speak in January on "Native Life in Madagascar and East Africa," and Wilfrid D. Hambly, curator of ethnology of the Field museum, in February on "Negro Cultures of South and Central Africa."

We're looking for some delightful tenants who wish to live where they can enjoy loads of the good things that are going on down here, and still be able to get a full night's sleep, and save their energy. It's so near the loop that you can walk to and from your office and get a little build-up that way, too. We think our studios and studio apts. are rather unusual and delightful and we try to do our share in making them enjoyable. High ceilings, huge living rooms, duplexes, little foreign open courts, all just a little different, and all with fireplaces. We would like to show them to you, anyway, and you might wangle a little rent out of us to help pay the cost of moving.

WHAT!
Homes with Over 1 Acre
That Must Be INVERNESS
SEE IT TODAY!

One visit to this highly restricted countryside community near Barrington, one view over its own golf course to the informal homes and their rolling grounds, one restful hour in this protected country scene and you'll understand why so many families have already selected Inverness.

With all the advantages of any suburb, this community offers broader protected properties . . . new freedom. It parallels North Shore towns where, in addition to higher taxes, a 50 ft. lot is more expensive than a full acre at Inverness!

More than just a bargain, Inverness is unlike any "development." Loosely mingled with its mellow residences are a few new homes, just completed and ready for occupancy. These homes including at least 1 acre of landscaped grounds, can be yours for as little as $95 a month!

Imagine! A rambling country home all one one floor, with 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, large living room and dining room opening on screened porch!

Be sure to visit Inverness today: drive out Northwest Highway [Rt. 14] to 4-silo entrance . . . about 1 mile south of Dundee Road.

Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

Jack Frost Debunked

September 28, 1940.

FOR years outdoor fans have been crediting Jack Frost with a magic touch and the ability to paint the leaves with brilliant and somber colors when autumn comes. Botanists now tell us that the crisp nights and Jack Frost's stealthy visits are not responsible for our beautiful autumn tints, altho the vivid colors in the foliage of trees and shrubs usually coincide with the first nippy morning of the season.

One thing on which all the residents of the Du Page county farm agree is the effect of the autumn sun in coloring the leaves. We saw a good example of this on the farm last week when we hiked thru the center woods. It was very noticeable that the trees which are on the south side of this wood lot have more color than those on the other three sides.

Sunshine Plays Big Part.

The oaks, tall ash trees, wild cherry, and other species with a southern exposure have been getting more sunshine. The way they have been able to absorb the sun's rays was demonstrated by their more attractive coloring. They lead the autumn parade in foliage tints while trees in other parts of the woods still retain the deep greens associated with the summer season.

Hickory trees [always the first to dry and fade away] are much greener in the north section of the woodlot than along the south border.

There are numerous rows of sumac trees on the farm and these, too, serve as examples of the sun as a coloring agent for the leaves. There is one north-south row of sumac trees along a gravel road in the center of the farm, and the trees nearest the south end already have hundreds of brilliant red leaves, those at the north end are just starting to turn red.

Goldenrod Challenged.

In the fields and woods last week the cardinal flowers, asters, wood sunflowers, ironweed, and goldenrod continue to be the main attractions, but now they are getting some competition from an unusual source. Ordinarily the vegetable plots produce vegetables and little else, but last week a brilliant yellow flower was waving over the garden to challenge the goldenrod and other autumn wild flowers as the most brilliant attraction of the week. This attractive flower is on the Jerusalem artichoke plants, and it is very similar to the wild sunflowers which brighten farm roadsides during the late summer. Its yellow is so bright and vivid that it attracts the attention of everyone who passes.

The farm residents have been getting a lot of fun out of the fussy little bantam hen that bosses the peafowl chicks the men hope will grow into handsome peacocks. The situation is laughable because the chicks are quite a bit larger than the bantam, but nevertheless, they have to toe the mark when this perky little bird cackles her orders.

All day long the bossy bantam does almost nothing else but issue orders to the peafowl chicks which tower over her by several inches. Naturally she is a pretty good protector because every time the youngsters stray "out of range" she flutters around all over the yard issuing orders. And the chicks seem to accept her authority without back talk.

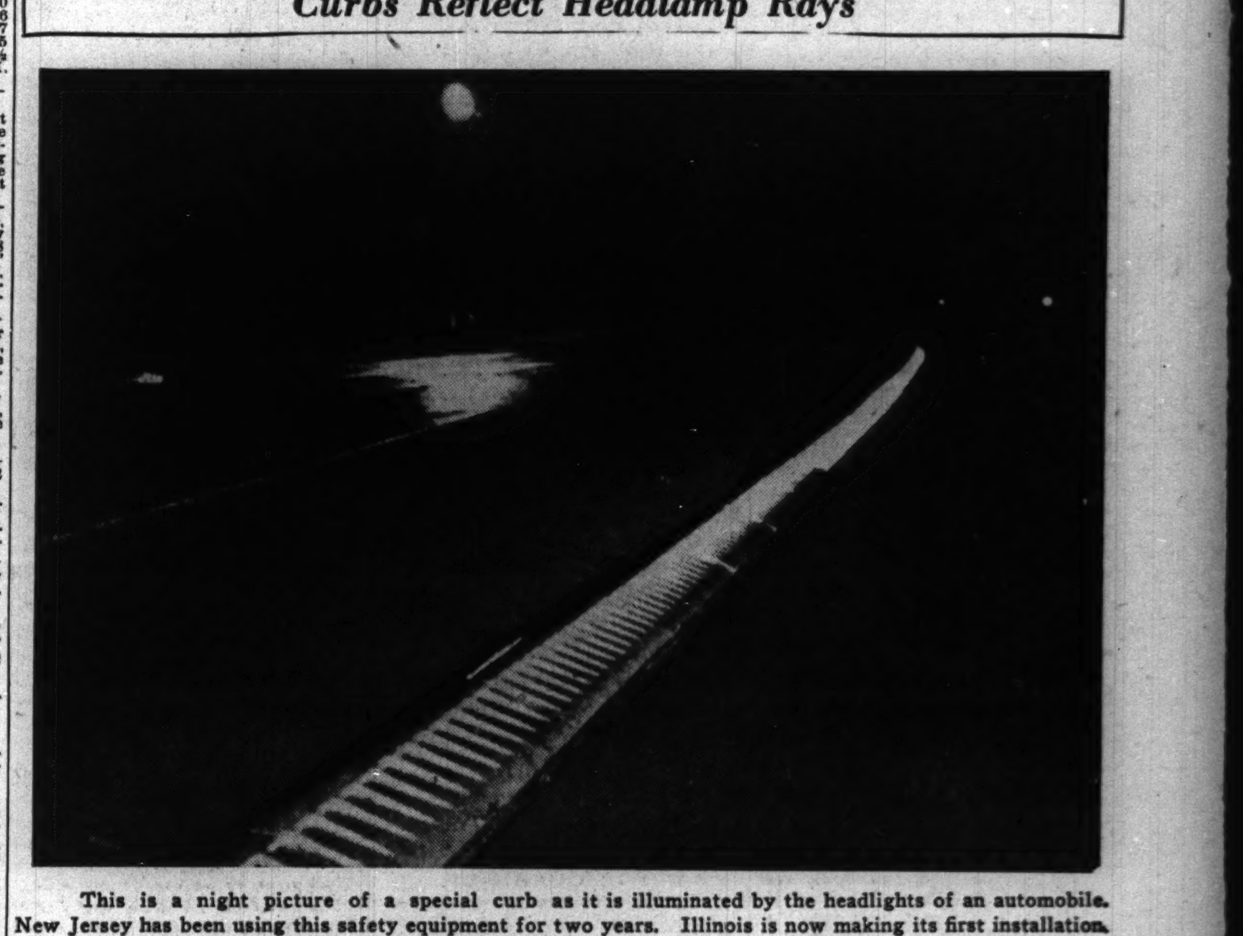
Curbs Reflect Headlamp Rays



This is a night picture of a special curb as it is illuminated by the headlights of an automobile. New Jersey has been using this safety equipment for two years. Illinois is now making its first installation.

State Roads Crack, Crumble; While Slab Replacing Lags

BY HAL FOUST.

The main highways of Illinois are cracking and crumbling faster than the slab is being replaced. C. M. Hathaway, state engineer of construction, a year ago estimated the replacement requirements, due to wear and to obsolescence, at 322 miles a year. The actual replacements were 70 miles in 1938, 68 miles in 1939, and about the same amount in the current construction season nearing its end.

"It's a serious situation," Taylor Soper, executive secretary of the Illinois Road Builders association, said last week. "These older slabs, the first to be laid in Illinois, are on the most important locations, between centers of population."

Accelerates Accident Toll.

These are the routes that are responsible for a large portion of the state's revenue from the gasoline tax. Also, partly due to their condition, these are the routes that account for a large portion of the state's accident toll.

"Yet we are allowing these important travel arteries to wear out five times faster than the old pavement is being replaced.

"We fear that not even minimum requirements of the highway system will be met during the next five years. Much of the federal road building money will be spent in the next year around military plants. The new federal aid measure signed recently by President Roosevelt provides for a decrease in highway appropriations in 1942 and in 1943."

Sumary of Federal Aid.

A summary of Illinois' annual federal aid [1940-1943 inclusive] incudes:

Main highways—1940, $4,053,000; 1941, $4,650,696; 1942, 04,044,000; 1945, $4,044,000.

Secondary roads—1940, $608,000; 1941, 606,612; 1942,$708,000; 1945, $708,000.

Grade crossings—1940, $1,032,000; 1941, $1,544,707; 1942, $1,030,000; 1942, $1,030,000.

Totals—1940, $5,693,000; 1941, $6,802,015; 1942, $5,782,000; 1943, $5,782,000.

The Illinois petroleum committee estimated that Illinois motorists paid $11,998,000 on the one cent federal gas tax during 1939. Since July 1, 1940, this tax is one half cent higher, the new funds being ear marked specifically for defense.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

THEFTS FROM AUTOS.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—For the last 12 years I have been a resident of Chicago and proud of it. During the last three months I have had occasion to be in many cities from Louisville, Ky., to Portland, Me.

Without exception in each city I have heard complaints from tourists about having had their cars robbed in Chicago. This fact became obvious to me on a week-end trip to Chicago last week. My car had been parked about 15 minutes; when I returned I found it robbed of everything in it. The items taken included personal effects from 10 cent sun glasses to a diamond pin. Many of the items could not be valued nor be replaced.

The incident was reported and squad 111 came from the 7th district for detailed information. Nothing developed from that except that I was questioned as to why I had certain articles in the car.

I had the pleasure of being in Chicago during the time in which the state's attorney drove the automobile thieves out of Chicago. It seems that now there is a need for a drive on the above mentioned type of thief. ROBERT WALKER.

ARRESTED IN MATTESON.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Being an American and knowing the freedom of the American people, I cannot help but feel that some of the people use the law to gain personal justice.

The state police of around Matteson, Ill., take a corner that is hard to understand when you have daylight, and when night comes they use it to catch people for violating the law.

It is not so bad to be arrested, but when they charge $8 for running a stop sign, 20 miles an hour, when you think you have the right of way, and cross the crossing with your car under control. Seems to me like some town is in need of money badly.

Of course, I am just a married man with three children trying to make an honest living and stay off of relief. The incident above carries me back to the days before Christ when the law was always right and the working people just worked and paid enormous prices for small mistakes. F. L. HAMMOND.

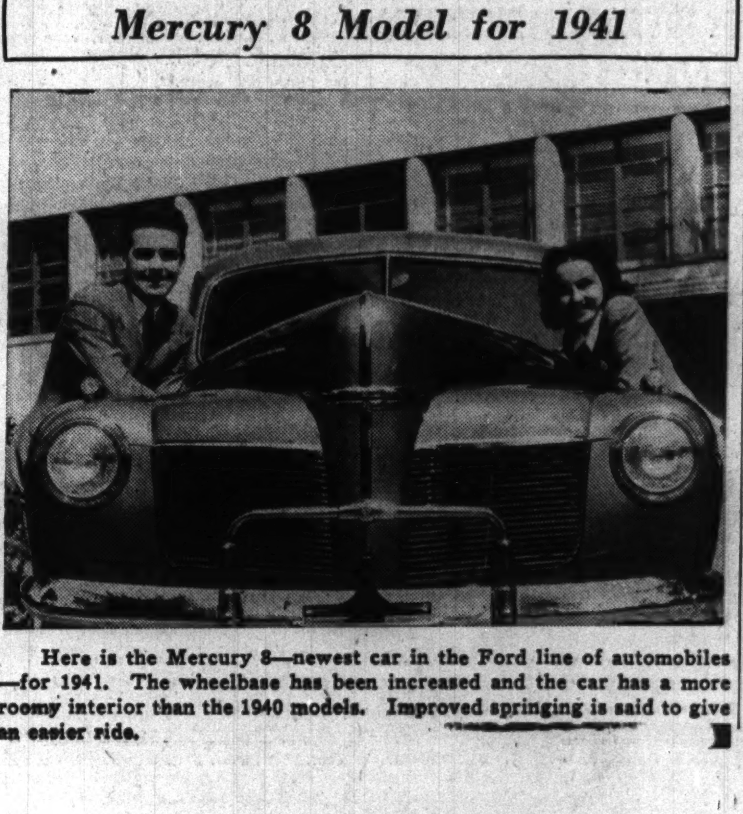
NEW YORK'S SHOW OF 1941 AUTOS TO OPEN OCT. 12

Display of the 1941 model automobiles will culminate in a few weeks in the annual automobile shows in Chicago and New York. The New York show will open in the Grand Central Palace on Oct. 12—Columbus Day—and will continue thru Oct. 20. The Chicago show will open in the International Amphitheater on Oct. 26 and continue thru Nov. 3.

The Grand Central Palace is reported to be the scene of much activity as decorators, electricians and other workers put the building in shape for Gotham's 41st annual exhibit of the new automobiles. Numerous events will be held in connection with the New York show, including an Old Timers' Day lunch, Oct. 16, at which veterans of the industry and its related activities will be honored.

The Chicago Automobile Trade association announced yesterday that 96 spaces in the used car section of the Chicago show were spoken for at a drawing last week. Frank H. Yarnall, chairman of the used car committee, said that all the allotted space has been sold. The used car section is being repeated this year because of its success last year.

Mercury 8 Model for 1941



Here is the Mercury 8—newest car in the Ford line of automobiles—for 1941. The wheelbase has been increased and the car has a more roomy interior than the 1940 models. Improved springing is said to give an easier ride.

ILLINOIS TESTS REFLECTOR CURB IN NIGHT DRIVING

BY HAL FOUST.

The Illinois highway department last week began its first installation of a reflectorized curb, a safety device pioneered by the New Jersey highway department two years ago. The installation is to be in Peterson avenue between Lincoln and Western avenues.

This type of curb is made of white concrete with verticle corrugations. Faces of these corrugations reflect rays from his headlamps back to a driver. Without these furrows, most of these rays are reflected away from the automobile and are of no benefit in illuminating the curb for a driver.

A Help on Rural Roads.

In touring in the east in the last couple of years, we found these reflecting curbs a distinct aid to night driving. This was true in rains as well as on clear nights. The alignment of the roadway ahead was clearly depicted and the edge of the slab was definitely marked. This experience was on rural roads; the performance on a city street may be different.

On the Peterson avenue job, the state is building a center island seven inches high and four feet wide on what is now an undivided 60 foot pavement. The reflectorized curb will border this center island. The cost is $10,000 for the one mile job, for both the island and its two curbs.

Aids Pedestrians, Too.

"The island," said Kendrick Harger, district engineer for the Illinois highway department, "will keep automobiles from using the left side of the street in passing overtaken vehicles.

"It also will help pedestrians who have had difficulty in crossing this wide street with its fast and dense traffic."

The installation is expected to be completed about Oct. 15.

NEWS AND VIEWS

B. J. Brady, Chicago zone manager for the Chevrolet division of General Motors, said yesterday that more than 100,000 persons visited the showrooms of Chevrolet dealers in the Chicago zone during the last week-end to inspect the 1941 models. He said the public was especially interested in the lively colors of the new cars. Brady stated that dealers reported 272 cars were actually delivered and in owners' hands by Saturday night, Sept. 21. He added that 984 orders were signed for which deposits were made and that last Sunday night dealers reported 2,800 unfilled orders. Brady said the activity over the last week-end, including attendance and sales, was about 20 per cent ahead of last year.

The Chrysler Sales corporation yesterday announced the appointment of Walton Motors, Inc., as the new Chrysler-Plymouth dealer headquarters at 2221-29 South Michigan avenue. Six floors of display facilities will be used for the merchandising of Plymouth and Chrysler new cars and used cars. Joseph L. Levy, veteran of the Chicago automobile business, heads Walton Motors. Martin S. Harris is general manager. L. G. Smoak heads the service department at 2241 South Wabash avenue.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CORNS

Their cause and how to get rid of them

A corn is a mass of dead cells packed into a hard plug (A) whose base presses on sensitive nerves (B)—causes intense pain.

Felt pad (C) relieves pain by removing pressure. Special medication (D) acts on corn, gently loosens it so it can be lifted out.

• Corns are caused by pressure and friction, become a hard mass as shown at left. Home paring only gives temporary relief. But it's easy to remove corns the Blue-Jay way. Just fit a Blue-Jay pad over the corn. It acts quickly and surely as shown in diagram. (Stubborn corns may require a second application.) Then simply by avoiding the pressure and friction which caused your corns you can prevent their return. Get Blue-Jay Corn Plasters today—only 25¢ for 6.

FREE OFFER: We will be glad to send one Blue-Jay absolutely free to anyone who has a corn, to prove that it relieves pain and removes the corn. The Tribune Makes Fashion History!

By MARCIA WINN

FOR MORE THAN 150 years American women have followed Paris' definition of what is fashionably good. It started with the democratization of fashion when the French bourgeoisie, with revolutionary daring, began to parade about in clothes emulating those of Marie Antoinette. That was 150 years ago.

This is 1940. Paris, lovely, warm Paris, with its brilliance and its tolerance, its lime trees and its hautes couturieres, has fallen to the Nazis and is unable to continue as the fashion arbiter of the world. Shall America, with its reservoir of latent talent, its youth, its originality, attempt a friendly seizure of the fashion leadership that without America's previous backing and patronage would have been a Saturn without satellites?

Shall America, never without talent, do in fashion what it has in art, in architecture, in music, in automobiles, in fabrics, in dyes, in furs—show that it is not without genius of its own?

Shall America demonstrate, and with pride, that its hands can be skilful with scissors, its fingers with pins, and its minds with the ideas of which fashion is born?

That is the reason behind the three fashion shows which will be held in the W-G-N audience studio Wednesday with all the brilliance and éclat of a Paris opening. To say they will be history-making is no idle boast, for they mark the first nation-wide encouragement of American fashion designers. This encouragement came from The Chicago Tribune.

The three shows climax the $7,500 American Fashions Contest sponsored by The Tribune. Its aim was twofold: To encourage and develop American fashions for American women and to give recognition to the American designer, heretofore an anonymous quantity, no matter how many hundreds of thousands of feminine backs his or her dresses adorned.

America has a few well known designers, but the names of most lie buried in their stitches. Ask the average American woman to list five and she will fumble for half an hour. She might emerge with the name of Elizabeth Hawes, a name embedded in her consciousness by Miss Hawes' book, "Fashion Is Spinach." She might mention Clarepotter, Louise Barnes Gallagher, Travis Banton, or Adrian of Hollywood.

She would have a difficult time reeling off those five, but her tongue might be well oiled with the names of

NEXT SUNDAY—"HOW TO BE SWINDLED," THE STORY OF THE CONFIDENCE GAME

Producing "The Chicago Theater of the Air"

The Story of a Dramatic Broadcast

By GEORGE MORGENSTERN

IT IS 8:59—

The red second hand, so deliberate before this in its circuit, now fairly races around the clock.

Conductor Henry Weber, poised in front of the orchestra, stands with baton upraised. Producer William A. Bacher, his script open before him, bends tensely forward. Announcer Pierre Andre, talking steadily, faces the microphone. The singing principals, the dramatic cast, wait expectantly.

All eyes are glued on two buttons on the wall above the glassed-in control room.

The red hand sweeps down like a scimitar—

A light flashes red on the wall: The 30 second signal.

The hand races on.

From out in the darkened house, where 900 persons wait in hushed silence, come a subdued rustle, a cough, a nervous gasp.

A green light springs to life beside the red. The conductor's arm flails down. A musical chord crashes.

Triumphantly, impressively, Andre announces:

"——and the Chicago Theater of the Air . . . IS ON THE AIR. . . ."

• • •

There is music in the air—and on the air. The gloriously melodic "Student Prince," Sigmund Romberg's well loved operetta of the prince who plays in make believe a drama which Edward VIII. played to a different conclusion in real life, is carried out of the beautiful Gothic studio of station W-G-N and over the air waves thru the vast network of Mutual Broadcasting System into millions of homes.

You sit before your radio and become part of the great audience. You participate in all the joy and heartbreak of Karl Franz, student at Heidelberg. You hear a performance rigidly confined to one dimension which seeks—and attains—three dimensional effect.

Then it is gone. The illusion may remain. Days later you will still be humming "Deep in My Heart." But the beauty that was created for an hour has vanished, leaving no record.

If you have been a member of the studio audience, you have seen this tapestry woven and braided by voice—and voice alone—for that is the single dimension of radio. Many voices—the unmatched singing voices of Marion Claire, of Igor Gorin, of Jan Peerce. Voices of the actors, of Alice Hill, Olan Soule, John Goldsworthy, and the supporting cast. Voices of the violin, the harp, and woodwinds, for these are instruments of articulation, too.

Very little of the backstage artifice that created this magic is known to the layman. "The Student Prince" was one of a series of three operettas which you heard last spring. This fall, and for the next 39 weeks, you will be presented a new series, each Saturday night from 9 to 10 o'clock.

"The Vagabond King," first of the series, is scheduled for Oct. 5, then "The Chocolate Soldier," "Madame Butterfly," "The Student Prince" again, "The Great Waltz," "Naughty Marietta"—an endlessly tuneful succession.

Naturally, you'll want to hear them. So you ought to get acquainted with the processes of production that bring you these hours of enjoyment. It is our purpose now to take you behind the microphone and show you how it is done.

You may have been a member of a church or little theater group, or have seen a college show in rehearsal. If so, cast away all your preconceptions. This is radio.

CONRAD THIBAULT . . . the Villon of next Saturday's "Vagabond King."

We are to go on the air at 9 o'clock Thursday night. Now there's not that tense, paralyzing pause, with one minute to go. It is 12:30 p. m. Tuesday. The show is still 56½ hours away. Plenty of time, you think? Yes, but we have much to do. Very much.

Not a line has yet been spoken, not a bar of music played. Work is only starting. And yet, before the actors are assembled, the singers begin rehearsing, or the orchestra starts studying the score, much has been done.

The script, for instance. That has been ready for two weeks. The adapter has had to telescope a three hour operetta into a manuscript of 32 or 33 pages, without losing the main line of the action, the situations that cue the musical interludes, or the atmosphere that gives "The Student Prince" its particular charm.

A week ago the producer and the musical director read the complete script together. Using a piano, they ran over the entire score, estimating the timing of the various numbers and noting the requirements for special arrangements. At this conference, the producer will say:

"I can use only three minutes of overture . . . a minute and a half of that . . . but we'd better have four minutes of this."

Note that. We are hearing our first mention of timing. We shall hear much more about it before we are finished. For timing is all important in radio. We have only 60 minutes on the air.

Next, there is the problem of casting.

This may surprise you, but no performer in "The Student Prince" plays a rôle in its entirety. There are several reasons for this division of assignments. It is a terrific strain to compress a performance into one hour on the air, after hours of hard rehearsal. The double cast spares the singing voices of the stars.

Double casting also frees the singer and the actor for his specialty and results in smoother transitions. There are no deadly lulls on the air when the actor's dialog leads easily into a vocal number and he picks up his lines at the conclusion of the song with never a break.

Sometimes more than two persons may be required to portray a character. In "Bittersweet," the first production of the Chicago Theater of the Air, the rôle of Carl Linden was taken not only by James Melton (singing) and Olan Soule (acting), but at one point by a violinist, and, during the duel, by a sound effects expert.

Another thing. Since the actor doubles for the singer, their voices must have the same quality and timbre. A husky voice reading the lines of Kathie, the little Heidelberg waitress in "The Student Prince," would not match the clear, bell like singing voice of Marion Claire.

We have been talking about the leads. A bit part is as important to the complete effect as that of the star. Remember, the medium of radio is voice. So——

"There must be no similarity in the tone or quality of one voice to that of another. They must be cast against each other so that each actor is clearly projected as he speaks."

But, after many auditions, the cast is selected. The producer is ready to start rehearsals. Watch him start putting the jigsaw puzzle together. The panic that leads to perfection is on!

• • •

Tuesday, 12:30 p. m.

Come, now, to Studio 8. This studio is not in the W-G-N building, but on the 11th floor of Tribune Tower. This is to be a rehearsal of the dramatic cast only. Ten chairs are ranged in a semi-circle facing a table at which Producer Bacher will sit. A microphone stands beside the table, but it is not used in first reading. This rehearsal is intended to give the actors the "feel" of the play and the benefit of coaching by the producer.

Among the actors few neckties are in evidence, fewer coats. One actor cocks his hat back on his head and leafs thru his script. Bacher (he has had 13 years of experience in radio) arrives. The actors sit down and face him attentively. We are ready to begin.

"Marvin," says the producer, addressing Actor Marvin Miller, "I take it you are familiar with the part of Rudolf, the innkeeper?"

The actor gutturally indicates that he is just the man to hustle forward in a leather apron with hands full of foaming steins.

First, Bacher gives his conception of the principal characters. Actress Fran Carlon, playing the part of Princess Margaret, the girl whom Karl Franz must marry out of duty, is told:

"You are just a nice person. You are dignified and stately, but you really love Karl. You can't give way to your emotions because you are a princess. But, at the end, when Kathie renounces Karl, you do give way a little in your gratitude."

There is no illusion in Studio 8 as the actors begin reading. The muffled sounds of traffic come up from Michigan boulevard. Jack Pearce, the engineer who will microphone the broadcast, sits beside the producer. His is the job of sending out the program in proper volume, balancing all the mikes in accordance with the quality of the actors' voices. He must know the show forward and backward.

Off to the side of the studio Curtis France, the sound effects man, crouches over a battery of curious instruments. There are a dozen beer steins, stuffed with paper, which he clinks during the drinking scenes in the innyard. A series of blocks and pegs bring coach horses clop-clopping up to the inn door. There is a special cabinet with a door built into it upon which the sound man knocks for entrances. The door slams hollowly on an exit.

As they go along the actors pencil alterations in the script. It is an axiom of the stage that some lines which are the best reading make the worst playing. Others are hard to read. So lines are changed for dramatic effect, or smoothed out so that they read easily.

The producer gives a little coaching on this passage. Actor Goldsworthy is cast as Dr. Engel, who is given the mission by the court of Karlsburg to serve as Prince Karl's "jailer" at Heidelberg. To the prince he voices his vehement protest against the order "to keep you from light and air and sunshine." "No! . . . No!" he cries. The producer feels that those noes ought to be a little more emphatic.

"Do it like this: 'No! . . . No!'", he coaches, shaking his head. The radio audience won't see that gesture of negation, of course, but it helps give conviction to the protest. So we learn that radio actors don't just recite. They really act. Maybe that will pay dividends when W-G-N begins television broadcasts.

At last Bacher is satisfied and waves the players on to the arrival of Karl Franz at the Inn of the Three Golden Apples, where he meets Kathie for the first time. Toni, the old violin playing waiter, steps up to the prince. "Wine for Your Highness?" he inquires.

"A little more obsequious there, Toni," Bacher directs.

The actor nods. He reads the line over again, and this time it is right. But two days later, in the final editing of the script, that line is eliminated. Some things have to go if the show is to stay within its rigid limitation of 60 minutes. And this line, so carefully polished, is one of them.

Now Kathie approaches the prince. "May flowers from our garden, Your Highness," she says, and her voice must convey the act of giving them into his hand. It does more than that. Fragile, subdued, and shy, it shows us a simple little waitress, coached by her uncle in this brief speech, meeting royalty with trepidation, and yet with charm. The voice must be able to do that in radio. It must draw us a picture, unaided by smile, gesture, lights, costuming, or stage setting.

Henry Weber

Many of us remember "The Student Prince" on the stage 15 years ago. And now, in broad daylight, as these actors throw themselves into their parts, it is strange how, without the resources of pantomime, the illusion of lighting, or the completing effect of song, the old story comes to life; how, once again, we are all members of the student corps at Heidelberg, sharing the happiness and, finally, the loss of Prince Karl Franz. And this is only a first reading!

But these actors know their jobs. Alice Hill, with a clear and lovely voice, a perfect extension of the singing voice of Marion Claire, is animated and winning as Kathie. John Goldsworthy is a very human privy councillor, Marvin Miller just what an old innkeeper ought to be, and Olan Soule, young and blithe as the happy prince.

Tuesday, 2:15 p. m.

Act I. is finished. As Act II. opens the prince, with Dr. Engel and the students, are coming home. They have stopped at a country wedding and made a night of it, and now, at dawn, the doctor is telling a reproachful Kathie of the fun they've had.

MARION CLAIRE . . . again the singing star of the Theater of the Air.

"All right," says Bacher. "Now, remember. You've been out on a tear. It's pretty late now—5 o'clock in the morning. So, John, you take a yawn there."

Actor Goldsworthy yawns to punctuate his line as he says with sleepy solemnity, "—and we all kissed the bride."

You see how that yawn establishes time and circumstance?

It is at the end of this scene that Karl Franz gets the letter calling him back to Karlsburg, away from his happy life as a student, and from Kathie. Here the sudden transition from carefree irresponsibility to the solemn call of duty, with its attendant tragedy of parting, forms a sharp contrast in which one of these moods points up the other. The producer's direction is this:

"Now, when the letter is being handed over, and you, Karl, are asking Dr. Engel to open it and read it, take it all very casually. We want to make this news sudden and unexpected. You don't start to protest, you don't show revolt, you don't think of running off to Paris with Kathie, until the message sinks in. At first, it's just another letter to you. Then you are dazed. Finally, the meaning comes home."

The actors play it.

"Keeping it moving, boys and girls!" Bacher cries. "Otherwise, I lose the scene."

That's the usual method of addressing the cast—"boys and girls." Among the actors it's "darling" this, or "darling" that. Such is the theater. It isn't insincerity. These folks are effusive by nature. If they did not express emotion easily, they would not be good actors.

• • •

As the rehearsal progresses, it becomes apparent that the producer has to be the most versatile actor in the room. He can and must act every part to show his cast just what he wants. Every motive, every emotion, is analyzed, dissected—almost, indeed, every line.

There is a story to tell about Bill Bacher's background in radio. He is director of programs and productions for W-G-N now, and it's hard to conceive that he could ever have been a practicing dentist and lawyer. But he was both. A dynamic man, he didn't find those vocations very exhilarating. He looked around. But it was almost by accident that he found his way into radio.

Bacher's critical faculty is sharp, and the programs he heard those days—more than a dozen years ago, when radio was by no means the finished art it has since become—struck him as badly conceived and badly done. He told a radio executive so, and he decided to prove it.

Many knockers at the doors of radio studios are easily turned away. Bill Bacher wasn't. Soon he was writing scripts and getting paid for them. Then, with the Crime Club series, dramatizations of famous trials in which Clarence Darrow and James N. Beck participated, he got into production.

He moved on to Show Boat, which he produced for three and a half years; the Beauty Box operetta series, Fred Allen's show, and then, for another three and a half years, the "Hollywood Hotel" program, in which practically every film star except Garbo appeared.

Then he created and produced the Good News show; after that, the Star Theater, and then "Alexander's Ragtime Band," a radio dazzler if there ever was one. He originated the Movie Nights series and last Christmas eve put Shirley Temple in her first sponsored show, with Nelson Eddy as her singing partner.

This wealth of experience Bacher has at his command in the creations of the Theater of the Air, and from it all he has achieved this distillation of radio wisdom:

"In radio there is no second chance; no retakes, as in the movies; no tomorrow, as on the stage. Radio is—NOW!"

Momentum is important in a radio production, and where he wants pace and tempo, Bacher waves his arms like an orchestra leader. When directions in the script call for background music, the producer supplies it, whistling the tune that a full orchestra will be playing later. The ringmaster of a circus, he's in all three rings at once.

• • •

We're due for a recess. This has been hard work. For two hours every actor has been another person. Talk about demonic possession! These people have been utterly taken over by characters written in a script. So let's stroll out to the lounge, smoke a cigaret, and relax a little. We find some of the actors there.

"I've always loved this show," says one.

"It's going to be a beauty," promises another.

Well, here's hoping.

Tuesday, 3 p. m.

And now for the last act.

Karl Franz, no longer a prince, but a king, has been gone from Heidelberg for two years. He is saddened by separation, but his duties claim him. And what of his promise that some day he will return to Kathie? Has that been forgotten? Perhaps—

And yet, no! Toni, the old wine taster of the inn, comes to the gloomy castle of Karlsburg. He tells of changes at Heidelberg, sad changes. The inn is deserted. Rudolf is losing money. The students no longer come. And Kathie: Often he has seen her crying.

He lifts his violin and plays the old student melodies, and his playing brings a vision to Karl Franz of the life he has left. In his mind the young king sees the students responding to his toast.

"Luck . . . luck . . ." echoes from the distance—an evocation of times gone by.

So Karl Franz keeps his promise and returns to Heidelberg for one last time. But the Princess Margaret, his betrothed, comes to the inn first. She appeals to Kathie to go far away. Then, perhaps, Karl Franz can put her out of his mind.

The princess comes unannounced. On the stage her audience would see the interview and understand that Kathie does not recognize her. Here words must obtain that effect. So a line is written in. "Shall I remove my veil?" the princess asks. Then it is clear. Until now, Kathie has not seen the face of her visitor. But with the suggestion of the lifted veil, recognition comes.

"Now, darling," he says, "I don't want them to dislike you. Their sympathies, naturally, are with Kathie. I think you can overcome that by being very gracious in contrast to Kathie's simplicity. They will see, then, that life has made Kathie the love of Karl's youth, but that you are the one whom circumstance inevitably makes his queen. On that basis, I think, they will accept you."

Tuesday, 6 p. m.

So far we haven't seen the singers. Now we meet them for the first time. We go to Studio 3 in the W-G-N building, a lovely little theater with brown composition walls and a green metallic cloth curtain covering the stage.

It isn't time to meet the orchestra yet. That is a part of this radio puzzle which the producer won't fit in until later. We are going to see Miss Claire and Gorin rehearse with the chorus now. Jan Peerce, the third principal, won't arrive from New York until tomorrow. The rehearsal will have to proceed without him.

Conductor Henry Weber, unshaven and wearing a green open collar shirt with his sleeves rolled up, is riffling thru music at the piano which will furnish the singers with their only accompaniment. Miss Claire, in a gray street suit, wearing a sprig of lilacs, stands near the stage. Gorin, the baritone who sings the rôle of Dr. Engel, sits near her, looking at music. The chorus, 15 voices, are over to the right of the studio.

"All right, kids?"

They have their music and are ready.

Trendler begins playing. The chorus launches into the "Drinking Song." Weber uses an automatic pencil as a baton. Bacher accompanies with a pointed finger, a down punch of the arm. Occasionally he slaps his thighs in time.

The chorus sings to a snap of fingers. That gives emphasis to the rousing chorus of "Drink! Drink! Let's drink!" Gorin now comes in to take away the melody. He has a splendid resonant voice. He rises on his toes, sometimes sways from the knees, as he follows the lilt.

"Come on," says Trendler, "it isn't that tough."

He and Weber consult the music, Trendler chanting a peculiar jargon that sounds

W-G-N Triumph

like "Ay-yay-ah-bup-a-bump-bump," getting the passage straightened out in his mind.

They try it over again, singing full voice. They hadn't been giving it its full quality before, but now Gorin lets loose and the chorus finishes with a shout.

"It's good!" says Weber.

It is Miss Claire's turn now to try "Come, Boys, Let's All be Gay, Boys," a song of great gaiety and spirit. She sits in front of an organ and doesn't go all the way out with her voice, for she's more concerned now with timing than with vocal effects. As she sings, Miss Claire times herself with a clenched hand, stabs a high note with her index finger, opens her hand and rigidly extends all her fingers as she holds at the finish.

Notice another mannerism. When Miss Claire catches a quick breath before going into a high note she has to hold, she lifts her right shoulder sharply. You can feel the intake.\

One number after another is sung, repeated, polished, and roughly timed. Then everybody starts in at the beginning again.

"Once thru the routine," commands Weber.

At the end of this song, or that, he snips and cuts. Don't forget, there's still that problem of timing, of getting this all into 60 minutes.

But after two hours the musical director, the vocal master, and the producer are satisfied that their numbers are taking shape. The singers are dismissed, and we're finished for this first day. This has been a shirtsleeve job, but the reward will come when we're finally on the air.

• • •

Wednesday, 1 p. m.

We're back, this time in the main studio of W-G-N, a beautiful auditorium in crimson, slate blue, and gray. The broadcast, still 32 hours away, is getting closer, and when we realize that the orchestra has yet to play thru the score, that there has been no opportunity to integrate actors, singers, and orchestra, that time seems terribly short.

But watch!

Promptly at the rehearsal hour the augmented W-G-N concert orchestra is on the stage. Instruments on every side are being tuned up, and a cacophony it is.

The first task today is to work out the orchestral routine, and Conductor Weber, again in shirtsleeves, starts with the overture. The musicians play only a short section before he is rapping with his baton. Every few bars changes are made, some to cut passages and save time, others to improve transitions.

Fred Meinken, the music librarian, hurries among the musicians, placing sheet music in their racks, straightening out mixups in the distribution of orchestrations, running out to have the copyists make new arrangements as fast as Weber dictates them.

Weber is patient, clear in his instructions, but he never wastes a minute or a motion.

In less than an hour of what seems amazingly fast work, this part of the job is done. The chorus is on the stage, Miss Claire and Gorin are standing in their places, and Engineer Pearce, from the control booth, switches on the microphones.

For the first time the singing principals, the chorus, and the orchestra are going to work together. The pieces of the puzzle are being collected. As the orchestra plays, as the songs well out of the auditorium speaker, Bacher, at his stand in stage center beside the conductor, works out his timing and cues. Following the script before him, he mutters that timeworn incantation of the stage, "So-and-so-and-so-and-so," at dialogue passages where he intends to bring his actors in over the music.

Gorin is just finishing "Golden Days" when the tenor, Jan Peerce, just in from New York, arrives to join rehearsals as Karl Franz. Some of us remember Peerce when he played a hot fiddle in Meyer Davis' orchestra, but that was before he was brought into Radio City Music hall when it first opened eight years ago. He's been there ever since.

Greetings are exchanged. Peerce looks over his music. When he and Gorin start singing a duet, word runs all thru the building. Stenographers drop their work for five minutes to hurry into the studio and listen. Half way up an aisle, a janitor who has been searching for stray bits of waste paper straightens up. Even a policeman slips unobtrusively thru the side door and quietly lowers himself into a seat. It isn't hard to recognize artists.

Wednesday, 3:30 p. m.

There has been a recess of 45 minutes while Conductor Weber rehearses another program that is to go on the air tonight. Now we are ready to resume, and, for the first time, the dramatic cast is brought together with the singers and the orchestra. All of the elements of the show are on the stage at last, ready to coalesce.

It is time to start tailoring the speaking parts to the music, to carry the movement of the production from orchestral music to spoken line, to vocal number, so today the cast is used principally for cueing.

By 4:15 sufficient progress has been made for the producer to order every one to start from the beginning of the script. This is our first glimpse of the production in orderly sequence. Announcer Andre stands at the microphone and reads the introduction you will hear tomorrow night. The actors launch into the dramatic movement.

In the soundproof control booth at stage left sit Lou Jackobson, the associate producer, and Jack Pearce, the engineer. They can see thru the glass what goes on out on the stage, but that is the producer's business, not theirs. Their job is to listen to what comes in from the speaker behind them under actual broadcast conditions.

Pearce manipulates his controls to balance what is coming in from the six different mikes placed about the stage. The orchestra can't come in too loud and kill off the singer. The chorus has to give just enough support, and no more, to the soloist on a lyric passage. Or there is that receding effect to be obtained in the marching song. A filter will do it.

Jackobson sits before a house microphone which he can cut on and off to relay his instructions to the stage. He cuts in on a violin solo which isn't coming thru clearly enough from the hanging mike over the orchestra section.

"Tell that violinist to stand up and we'll bring him in over the actors' mike," he says.

He has a stopwatch in his hand to take accurate timings of all musical numbers and principal spoken passages. There will be three or four timings to a page of the script. This speech, for instance, times at 40 seconds, or this song at two minutes and 20 seconds. Those timings will be marked at the bottom of the page, and their total will be added to the overall timing of the show up to that point. In this manner Jackobson knows at every stage of the script what time has been taken and how much is left. His individual timings show what long scenes can be trimmed if cutting has to be done.

"If we're on the air, always watch me. If we're running over on time and have to bring in the singers, I may have to signal you to cut that line."

Always that preoccupation with 60 minutes!

And again, after Miss Claire sings—

"Time? Are we timing everything?"

Jackobson nods thru the glass.

As every song is sung, the numbers are being piped into another studio where they are recorded. After the rehearsal, the singers, sometimes in the company of the musical director, check back their numbers by listening to the recordings. In this way they detect mistakes or troublesome passages against which they must be on guard.

The afternoon has passed in work, and by now the company is under a strain and fighting fatigue. From the control room Jackobson expresses dissatisfaction over the effect he is getting on the May day scene at Heidelberg.

"I don't think those students are dignified enough," he says. "Aren't they a little too noisy?"

"No," Bacher replies. "I want these boys to be abandoned. Lou, have you ever been abandoned?"

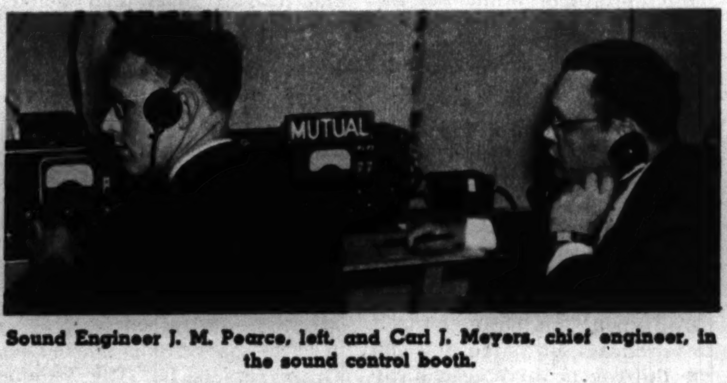
"Two or three times," the associate producer retorts dryly.

There's a laugh, and that eases up things, so that it isn't so hard to drive forward with the rehearsal. At 6 o'clock the day's work is done. So far only the first act has been covered. Two more acts to go—and we're on the air tomorrow night!

• • •

Wednesday, 7:30 p. m.

The day's work is finished for the company, but not for Bacher and his right hand men, Pearce and Jackobson. (In radio four right hands wouldn't be too many.) That night they gather in the producer's home. This will be an arduous session—two hours, if everything has been going well, 2 a. m. if it hasn't. This is when the show is taken apart and put together again.



Sound Engineer J. M. Pearce, left, and Carl J. Meyers, chief engineer, in the sound control booth.

From their detached listening post Pearce and Jackobson have seen the show in action. Every "bug"—every spot that has given trouble or gives promise of trouble—is ironed out. Some material is scrapped. Other spots are simplified. Changes in groupings before the microphones to get better balance on the air are plotted.

The three men know that the show is running a few minutes overtime. What can be eliminated? This. Perhaps that. And this. But the producer may decide to eliminate something else in tomorrow's final rehearsal, so these optional cuts are not made now. Trimming can wait, if not to the last minute, until almost the last hour.

At 11 o'clock all problems seem to have been met. The group breaks up. The three men seem hopeful that it will be a good show by the time it goes on the air. Meanwhile, a jocular parting—

"Well, see you in the brick yard."

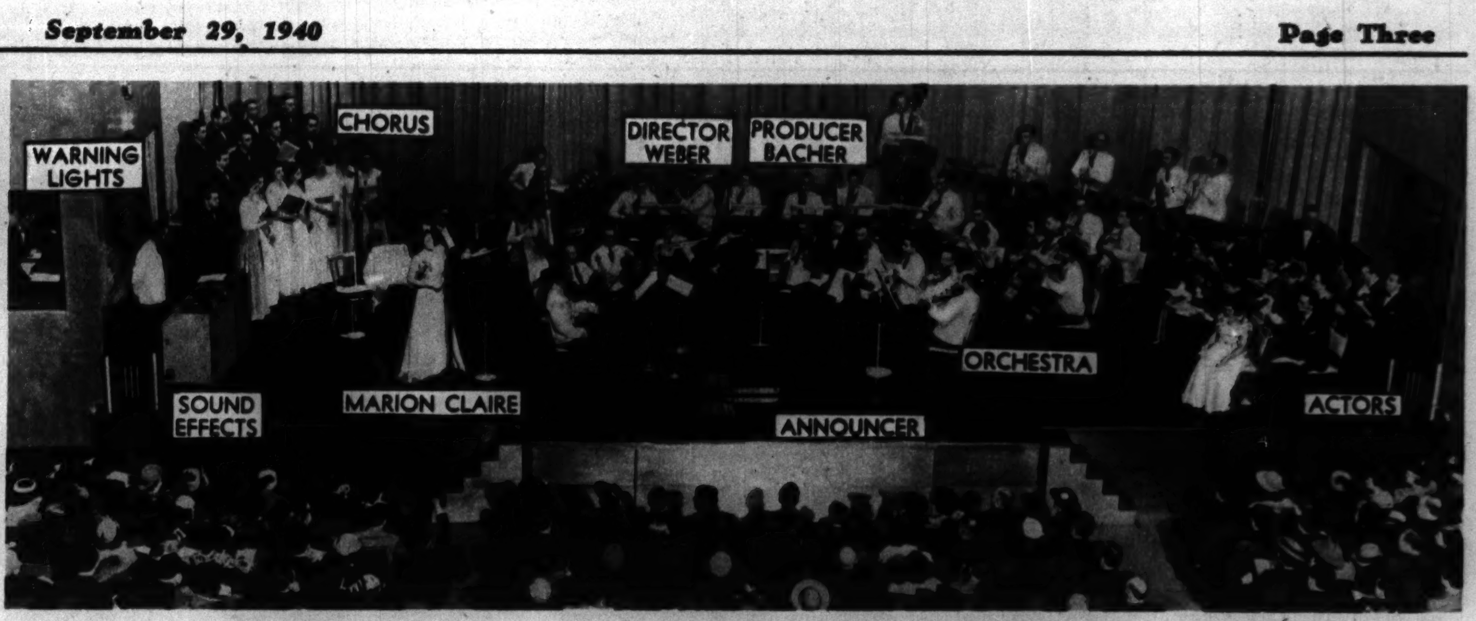
• • •

Thursday, 1 p. m.

Eight hours from now we're on the air. Act I has been rehearsed from beginning to end. Acts II and III haven't been touched. The amount of work ahead looks insurmountable.

But there's one consolation. The first act is always the hardest. All the musical numbers are introduced there. Numbers in Acts II and III are reprises—repetitions or recapitulations of melodies that have gone before. Since each is a theme recalling past mood or action, they are important to the continuing unity of the show upon their reappearance. Another thing: the audience, having heard them once, is familiar with them now, and pleased at the recognition and the opportunity to hear more of something it liked awhile ago.

Properly, you might think, this is the time for dress rehearsal. But our producer doesn't believe in dress rehearsals. Too often, he thinks, a company leaves its best performance behind on the stage at dress rehearsal. So the only dress rehearsal there'll be will be tonight when we're actually on the air.



The entire company and technical staff in action during a broadcast of "The Chicago Theater of the Air."

Now, on the stroke of one, Conductor Weber begins rapidly instructing the orchestra on the routine of the second act. That done, he runs thru the cues for the third act. The musicians follow on their scores as he outlines the routine. Not a note is played all this time.

For the first time there's a sense of urgency.

At 1:45 Bacher orders, "Take timing on the overture."

"Is this going to be cut, by the way?" Jackobson asks from the control booth.

"We won't know till we see the length of the show," the producer responds.

Maybe that will indicate the closeness of the margin on which these radiocrafters work.

Not until after this rehearsal will the show be trimmed to its final form for tonight.

At 2 o'clock every orchestral passage from the start of the show to the finish has been blocked out by the musicians on their scores, so Weber directs:

"Take 10 minutes off, then be ready to stay here."

This recess will be used by some of the company to snatch a hurried lunch. Others step outside for a breath of air or a smoke. There won't be another minute of relaxation until those in the show are dismissed to dress for the broadcast.

Carpenters tack down a carpet so there won't be any noise as actors replace each other before the mike. Singers and dramatic cast have been coming in, and at 2:20 every one is back on the stage. The light man, in his station above the control room, experiments with the lighting he will use tonight.

Now we go into final rehearsal, starting from the beginning of the show. If someone stumbles verbally or makes a mistake, he goes right ahead as tho he were actually on the air. The announcer is reading his introduction.

"Pick it up!" urges Bacher. "Put gaiety and excitement in your voice. I can save almost 20 seconds on you."

Twenty seconds mean a lot within the rigid framework of an hour.

After a choral number, Bacher asks the control room:

"How about the background?"

"Backgrounds are fine," he is told, "but the cast are using a little too much voice, Bill."

The producer breaks into dialogue to thrust out his chin at the microphone and warn:

"I don't ever want anybody coming in like this."

Creeping up on the microphone is radio's deadliest sin. It will knock air balance into a cocked hat.

Alterations are still being made in lines. The control room is giving directions constantly. After she sings, Miss Claire turns. A nod from Jackobson in control tells her she's hit her song just right. During the broadcast she and every other member of the company will be under instructions never to look toward the control room. All their signals will come from the producer and conductor.

"Serenade" is sung by Jan Peerce and the chorus. Bacher asks control:

"What did you get in there?"

Jackobson switches on his mike and says:

"We got everything, and it's terrific!"

—the first "terrific" of this production. Hollywood take note.

Miss Claire, Peerce, and Gorin sing the trio, "Heidelberg Fair." It isn't right. The producer knows it, control knows it, the singers know it. They try it over with three tenors from the chorus backing them up. It still isn't right. Somehow the singers can't get the effect. Jackobson asks that it be done over again.

"Later," Bacher says. "We've got to get on."

The singers don't know it, but the producer has already made up his mind to cut the trio from the show. He'd sooner go without it than have it even slightly wrong over the air.

At 4:45 the rehearsal has progressed thru Act II. Recess. This work takes something out of you.

Everybody is back on the stage. Bacher meanwhile has made another cut. As the actors begin reading, he instructs Jackobson:

"Now, watch your timing, Lou. I think we'll save about 30 seconds."

Twenty seconds awhile ago. Thirty seconds here. Almost a minute of time on the air saved.

There are little incidents that break the drudgery. The singers have been having trouble with a number. Finally, after several tries, they get it right. There is a long sigh of relief. A couple of boys in the orchestra jazz up the theme. A laugh eases the weary load.

And so we proceed. Outside the crowds—our potential audience tonight—are going home from work. They have had a hard day at the office. Tonight they will relax before their radios in the living room. Tonight they will be entertained.

At 6 o'clock the rehearsal is finished. The cast disbands for dinner and dressing. All understand that they are to be back by 8:15. Some have brought their evening clothes to the studio and will change in the dressing rooms. Others have engaged hotel rooms downtown.

"We're three minutes over," Jackobson calls.

Weber and the orchestra go upstairs to make the cuts. The script girl types changes in lines and marks omissions in the actors' manuscripts. The producer and engineer are still conferring as the auditorium clears.

In three hours we're on the air.

• • •

Thursday, 8:15 p. m.

Already the auditorium is beginning to fill. Men and women in evening dress are filing down the aisles. Backstage the performers are gathering in little knots, looking over corrected scripts, mumbling lines. There is a current of excitement now that the zero hour is approaching.

In the control room the associate producer sits with stopwatch and script. On the control board before the engineer six microphones are open. Each is marked with a slip of paper: Cast, Orchestra, Applause, Soloists, Chorus, Sound.

At 8;49 Jess Kirkpatrick, second announcer, begins addressing the audience. He coaches them where to take applause, when to cut it. At 8:50 the orchestra, in white coats, begin taking their places and tuning up. At 8:53 Conductor Weber is introduced. Then the singers, Peerce, Gorin, Miss Claire.

The house lights go down.

8:59—

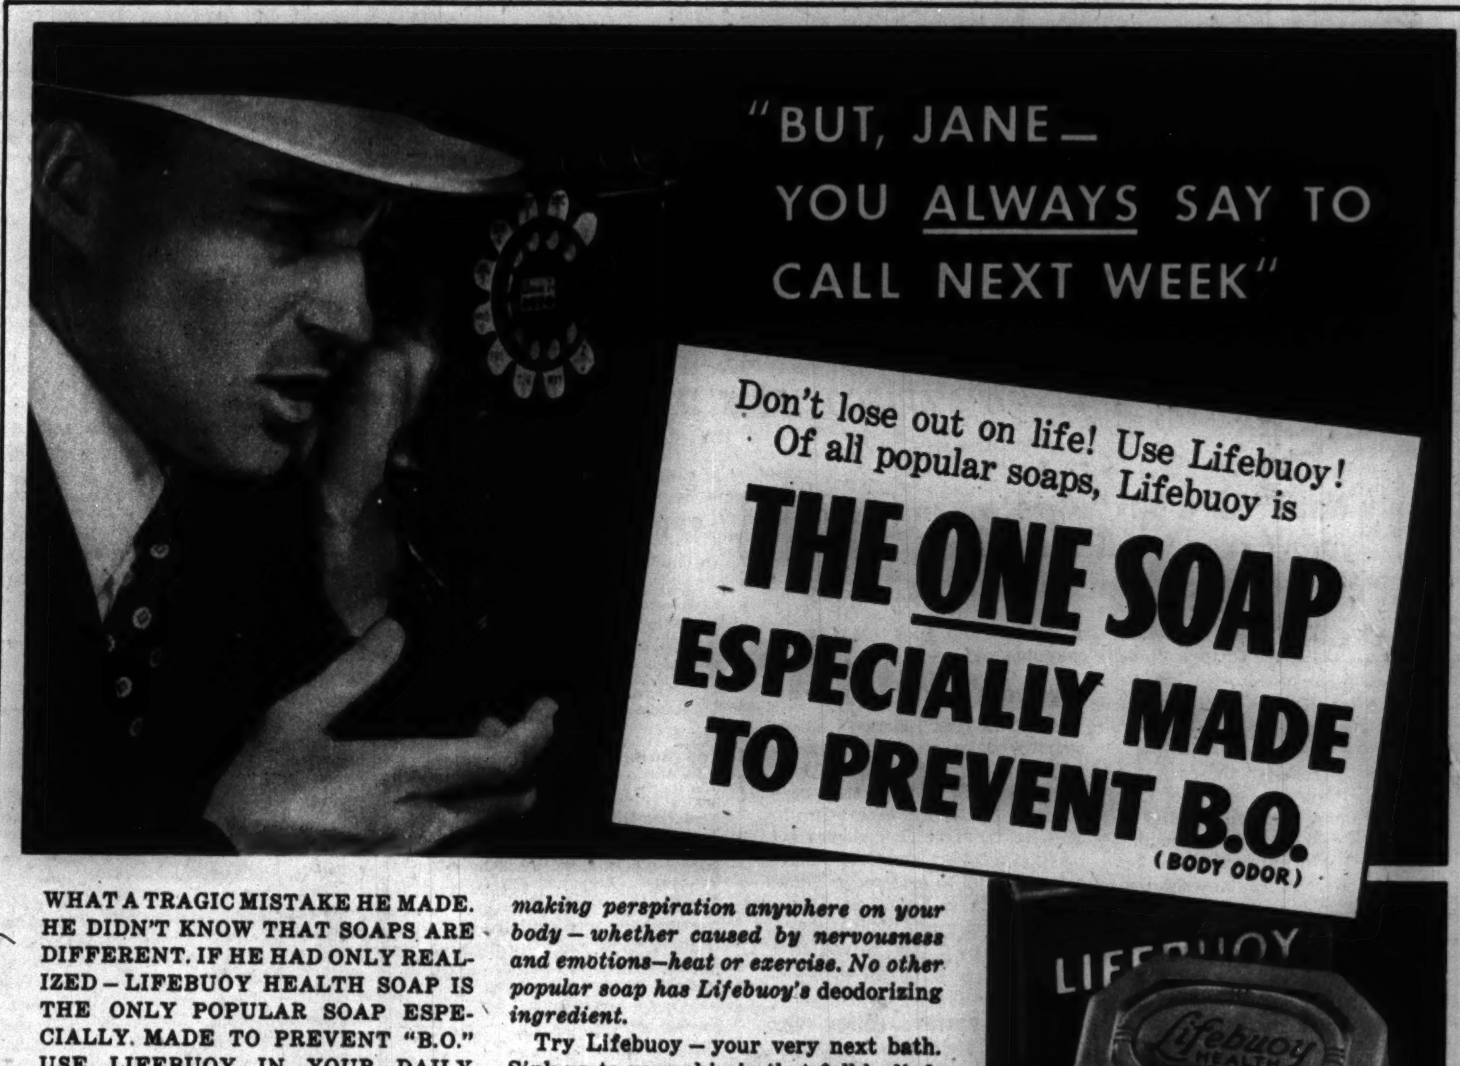
All eyes are glued on the buttons above the control room.

A light flashes red on the wall.

A rustle, a cough, come from out in the darkened house.

The green light springs to life. The conductor's arm flails down.

"—the Chicago Theater of the Air . . . IS ON THE AIR!"



"BUT, JANE— YOU ALWAYS SAY TO CALL NEXT WEEK"

When Tribune Fought Another Third Term

Grant Nomination Halted by Unyielding Campaign

By LLOYD WENDT

SIXTY YEARS ago an ambitious man sought the Republican nomination for a third term as President of the United States. In the control of three political bosses seeking to perpetuate their own spoils systems, this candidate attempted to override a tradition of the American people. He was beaten at the Republican national convention in Chicago, in a battle that threatened to wreck the party, but in the end proved its salvation. The leader of the forces that smashed the third term threat in 1880 was The Chicago Tribune.

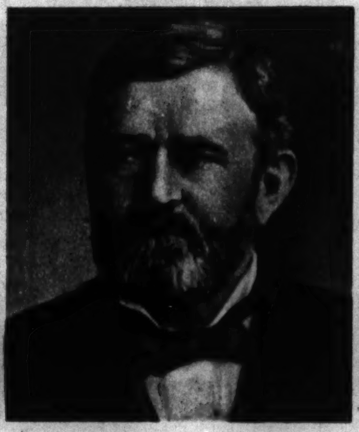
The Tribune's editorial campaign against the third term and boss rule was one of the most effective in the history of journalism. Thru 30 days of crisis—from the time of the Republican primaries in May, to the nomination of James A. Garfield in June—The Tribune thundered against the Republican bosses who sought to force a third term upon the country by its control of the nation's political machinery.

The Tribune exposed the bosses, their tricks, and the machinations of the government employés in their wake. It rallied the forces opposing the third term, who, despite their majority among the voters, lacked the organization of the machine.

Day after day The Tribune pounded home its point that the third term menaced the basic and fundamental principles of republican government and democratic process, regardless of the merit of the particular candidate. The founders of the democracy conceived that the people were able to govern themselves. The third termers inferred that but one man was sufficiently capable; that the democracy was unable to provide a succession of adequate leaders. The Tribune saw the issue as vital to the nation, rising above party and personalities.

The third term candidate was Ulysses S. Grant, hero of the Civil war. Both Grant and the Republican party had enjoyed the support of The Tribune thru many difficult years in the life of the republic. Many party leaders believed that Grant alone, of all Republicans, had the personal popularity to win. The Tribune desired a Republican victory. But it lashed out against the third term with all its power.

James A. Garfield.



Gen. U. S. Grant.

The Tribune was fighting for a principle. It gave no quarter, sought none. When the fight was over, Grant was defeated, Garfield nominated. "The third term," said this newspaper, "is dead for all time."

• • •

Gen. Grant was triumphantly touring Europe when three famous Republican bosses, Senator Roscoe Conkling of New York, Senator Don Cameron of Pennsylvania, and Senator John A. Logan of Illinois, initiated the campaign for the third term. At first Grant rejected the idea, but later he accepted it, in a fashion. "Gen. Grant," said a spokesman, "has not offered his name, therefore he cannot withdraw it." The politicians and the public read the statement clearly enough: Gen. Grant was willing.

It was generally agreed that Illinois would be the key state in the campaign. Gen. Grant's home was in Galena. It was axiomatic at the time that an aspirant for the Presidency must have the support of his home state. Since Gen. Grant would attempt to shatter precedent by campaigning for a third term, the politicians behind him felt it absolutely necessary to have the enthusiastic support of Illinois. They set out to get such support, and they did not intend to fail.

The Chicago Tribune began fighting the third term idea as soon as it was suggested. The first results of this campaign were seen in the May 8 primary, when Grant, despite his personal popularity, got only one-third of the Cook county votes, and anti-third term candidates got the rest.

But the bosses would not admit that the people opposed the third term. They determined to deliver Illinois for Grant, regardless of the method required. To circumvent the primary decision of the voters, Senator Logan summoned a rump convention of Cook county Republicans to select delegates to the state convention at Springfield.

The Tribune went into action to expose this move. But first it called upon Gen. Grant himself to withdraw his name and end the third term threat. This editorial, titled "Will Gen. Grant Withdraw?" appeared May 12, 1880, and said in part:

"If the opposition to Gen. Grant's nomination were in the nature of personal antagonism, or merely in the interest of some rival candidate, his pride might be excited to continue the struggle to the last. But, the struggle has at no time taken this direction. It is not Gen. Grant's personal merit nor his personal popularity that is involved, but a repugnant and dangerous issue of third-termism which his nomination would impose upon the party, and the malign influence upon the campaign which would be exercised by selfish and designing men who have fastened themselves upon his fame, and whose apparent selfishness has awakened popular distrust. It rests with Gen. Grant to eliminate third-termism forever from American politics . . ."

This restrained plea was ignored, however, and The Tribune turned its attention to the leader of the Grant drive, Senator Logan. On May 14 it said:

"During the present campaign he (General Logan) has issued orders that in every county where Grant might have a majority of even one, there should be passed a resolution instructing delegations to vote for the third term candidate. To the victor belongs the spoils. In no county in which Grant men held a majority did they allow the minority any right or privilege of expressing any opinion."

The rump convention was held in a Chicago hotel to select third term delegates, and The Tribune wrote:

"The rump delegates and alternates to the number of about 100 held a protracted meeting at the Palmer House yesterday afternoon, and listened with rapturous ears to the political wisdom of "Long (John) Jones," who receives a salary of $14.34 per day from kindly Uncle Sam for working up the Grant 'boom'."

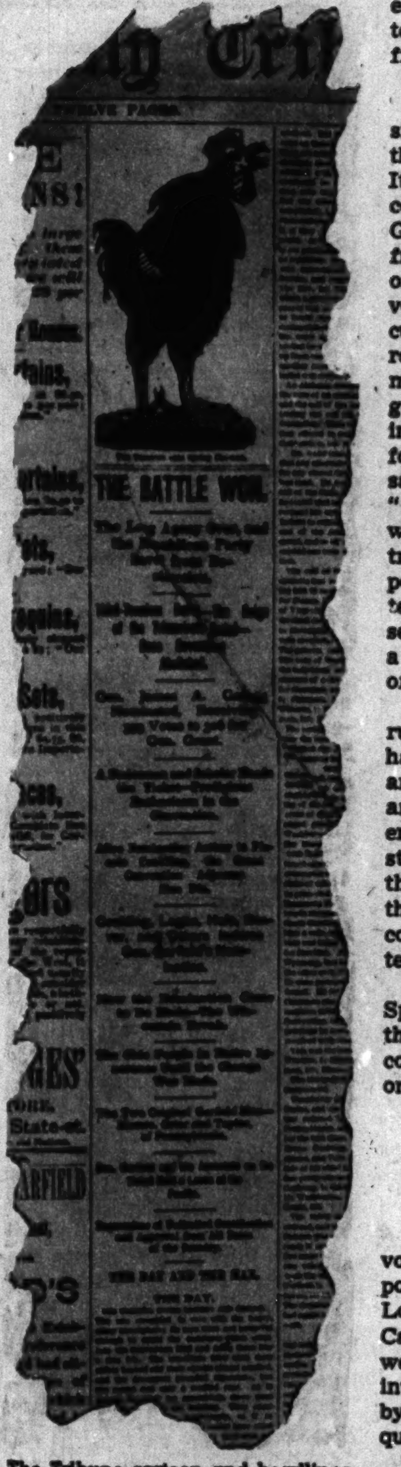
This was a "bogus" convention attended by "bogus" delegates, The Tribune declared, and it used seven and a half columns exposing the coup and printing objections of regular Republicans to the third term.

"The bogus fellows," said the paper, referring to the rump convention delegates, "are unable to explain their irregular position. Only one bolter has the honesty to tell why they bolted."

The next day there were editorials attacking the third term and the political bosses.

"The opposition is not to Gen. Grant personally," The Tribune reiterated, "but to a violation of the unwritten constitution, and to a restoration of the old crowd of corrupt, self-seeking spoilsmen and machine bosses who disgraced his (Grant's) second term and almost ruined the Republican party."

On May 19 The Tribune charged that Senator Logan was calling upon postmasters and internal revenue collectors for help in the Grant campaign. On May 20 The Tribune reported that the antithird term drive was getting organized results. "The Grant Machine Failing in Its Rule or Ruin Course . . . a Demand Unjust, Unprecedented, Harsh, and Dictatorial" said a page one headline.



THE BATTLE WON.

The Tribune cartoon and headlines of June 9, 1880, which announced Garfield's nomination.

The state convention met at Springfield, and The Tribune commented on the activities of the illegally selected third term delegates:

"One Grant man in the Mason delegation became ashamed of the company he was in and left town, leaving Mason solid for (James G.) Blaine," The Tribune said. "Long John (Long John Wentworth, former mayor of Chicago) was regarded by the country delegates as one of the Chicago thugs and pirates they had heard about."

Said The Tribune on May 21:

"The evidence is now conclusive as to the purpose of the third term bolt in Cook county. It was the result of a deliberate conspiracy to prevent the anti-Grant majority in the county from taking any part in the organization of the state convention. . . . If any peculiar circumstances could contribute to render the proposition more monstrous still, it is that the gag is enforced in this instance in the interest of a candidate for the Presidency of whom it is said and reiterated ad nauseam, "He is the choice of an overwhelming majority of the country; the movement in his support is spontaneous!" This pretense, long ago bereft of all semblance of truth, has become a threadbare satire on the tricks of politicians.

"The Illinois boss sent out his runners to all counties which had not yet held their primaries, and warned the postmasters, and collectors, and all other government officials, as well as state and county office holders, that, if they expected to retain their pap and places they must come to the rescue of third termery."

Logan won his victory at Springfield, excluding the anti-third term delegates from Cook county, and The Tribune page one headline screamed:

USURPATION
The Third Termers Consummate Their High-Handed Outrage.

Grant obtained twenty-two votes in the convention, and opposition candidates twenty votes. Logan, apprized by Conkling and Cameron that their delegations were similarly divided, sought to invoke a unit rule system used by the Democrats to insure adequate support for his candidate.

The Tribune in describing "the Springfield steal" listed the names of government employés who helped engineer it and urged the antithird term Republicans to revolt against the dictators.

"There is a duty which the antithird term delegates to the state convention owe to themselves, to their constituents, and to the state, and which they must not neglect," said the paper on May 23. "That duty is, in every county in each of the ten congressional districts which appointed anti-Grant delegates to the national convention, to hold public meetings and denounce the highhanded, scandalous usurpation, and the in-

Plain Prunes Become Unusual in a Salad

By MARY MEADE

PRUNE and cottage cheese salad sounds like everyday fare. But stuff the prunes with a mixture of chopped radishes, nuts, and oniony mayonnaise, use them to flank the cottage cheese, and you have an unusual prune-cheese arrangement.

The salad pictured is the aforementioned combination, garnished with potato chips, and ensconced on romaine. It makes a pleasant luncheon dish for anyone but a rather hearty eater. It's suited to a Sunday night buffet table, too.

PRUNE, NUT AND RADISH SALAD
(Serves four)

16 cooked prunes
⅓ cup chopped nuts
¾ cup chopped radishes
½ teaspoon onion salt
¼ cup mayonnaise
1½ cups seasoned cottage cheese
Romaine, lettuce or watercress
Potato chips

Slit prunes down one side and remove pits. Combine nuts, radishes, onion salt, and mayonnaise and mix. Place cottage cheese in centers of four salad plates, on romaine or other greens. Stuff prunes with radish mixture and arrange on top of cheese. Stand potato chips upright, petal fashion, around prunes by pressing one end of each into the cheese.

Prunes stuffed with chopped radishes and nuts decorate a mound of cottage cheese, and potato chips complete the salad.

Sliced chicken, ham rolls, cheese and strawberry garnished pineapple, and chilled cantaloupe slices make up this attractive salad platter.

The second pictured salad plate holds four servings for a buffet lunch. In the center of the platter there is sliced chicken. Thin slices of baked ham are rolled up around a spicy cheese filling and watercress is tucked into the end of each roll. On the plate also are slices of pineapple topped with cottage cheese and garnished with fresh strawberries, and chilly slices of cantaloupe. A French dressing should be served separately with such a salad platter.

Readers interested in everyday and dressup salads of many kinds may like to own copies of two little booklets on salads and salad making, prepared by The Tribune's cooking staff. They are called "Freeze the Salad," and "Everyday Adventures in Salads." The first booklet contains recipes for all kinds of delicious frozen salads, many of which are very simple to make. The second booklet was written for the average homemaker, who often runs out of ideas for the day to day kind of salad for luncheons and suppers for the family.

The booklets will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents, preferably in stamps. Orders should be addressed to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

Looking at Hollywood with John Chapman

Mary Martin, Whose Heart Belongs to Halliday

Hollywood.

"DICK AND I are going on our honeymoon Friday," chirped that bouncing young Texan, Mary Martin, to her co-workers in "Love Thy Neighbor" at Paramount. "Isn't it wonderful? Goodness! We've been married four months and I've hardly met my husband!"

"Well, if you care to," said Jack Benny, "just mention my name."

Mary is the heart-belongs-to-daddy girl who kicked around Hollywood singing in night clubs and getting nowhere because important movie people thought, if they think at all, that she had a touch too much nose. A numerologist told her never mind, she'd go to New York and be a big hit and then Hollywood would have to notice her.

Dick is Richard Halliday, one-time boy wonder magazine editor who, still quite young tho suffering from newspaperman's stomach, is story editor at Paramount. He buys his bride's pictures.

The Halliday-Martin marriage was sudden. They'd known each other for a year and had gone out together occasionally.

"But darned if I know just how we got to talking about getting married," says Mary.

Anyhow, one day they found they'd better do it right now or wait a long time, on account of both having lots of work to do, so they wed on a Sunday, reported for work Monday and kept working until the Friday of the honeymoon start, which was a Friday the 13th.

Mary was wondering if she and Dick would get sick of each other on their fortnight's sailboat honeymoon, with only a crew of two to break up the monotony of constant companionship, but she thought that she and Dick were probably married forever. She was married once before to Ben Hagman, a Texas lawyer, and has by him a handsome son, Larry, age 9. The fact that Miss Martin was a divorcée and a mother didn't come out for some time after her joyous and space-filling discovery in a Broadway musical comedy.

Mary and Dick want a baby but it must be a girl and they are debating naming her Heller Halliday, which has a nice lilt to it, and they think any child of theirs would certainly be a Heller. This is impure cynicism, for Halliday is a gentle, slow-spoken, decently educated chap who can eat only lamb chops, chicken, and white meat of fish, and Miss Martin rates as a nice girl in any company.

• • •

When Halliday was 17—he is now 31—he was "contact editor" for Liberty magazine and later a movie reviewer for the New York Daily News. He became quite an expert on films, doing newspaper and magazine pages on the cinema, and for a while, later, he did advertising and publicity on Gloria Swanson. He also wrote a novel which did pretty well for a first try.

Then he got a job in the New York story department of Paramount and held it for seven years. An eastern story department is supposed to see and read all plays, magazines and books, report their content to Hollywood and suggest what might be worth while.

Finally, about a year and a half ago, Paramount brought Halliday to Hollywood and made him story editor. They wanted to call him chairman of the editorial board, but he thought that was too fancy. He has a commodious, wood-paneled, tastefully decorated office, with the frightening interoffice, intercommunicating, self-interrupting telephone switchboard that no Hollywoodian can do without.

The office has a self-locking door with a push-button on the desk that operates an electric release, like an old time speakeasy. Even Halliday's secretary must knock and wait for the door to click before entering. He has to leave the place open when he goes for lunch, so he won't be locked out.

(Acme photo.)

Mr. and Mrs. Halliday with a wedding bouquet.

The story editor is not too happy about the story situation. Material, he thinks, is down in quality, partly because the European writers are fighting, not writing.

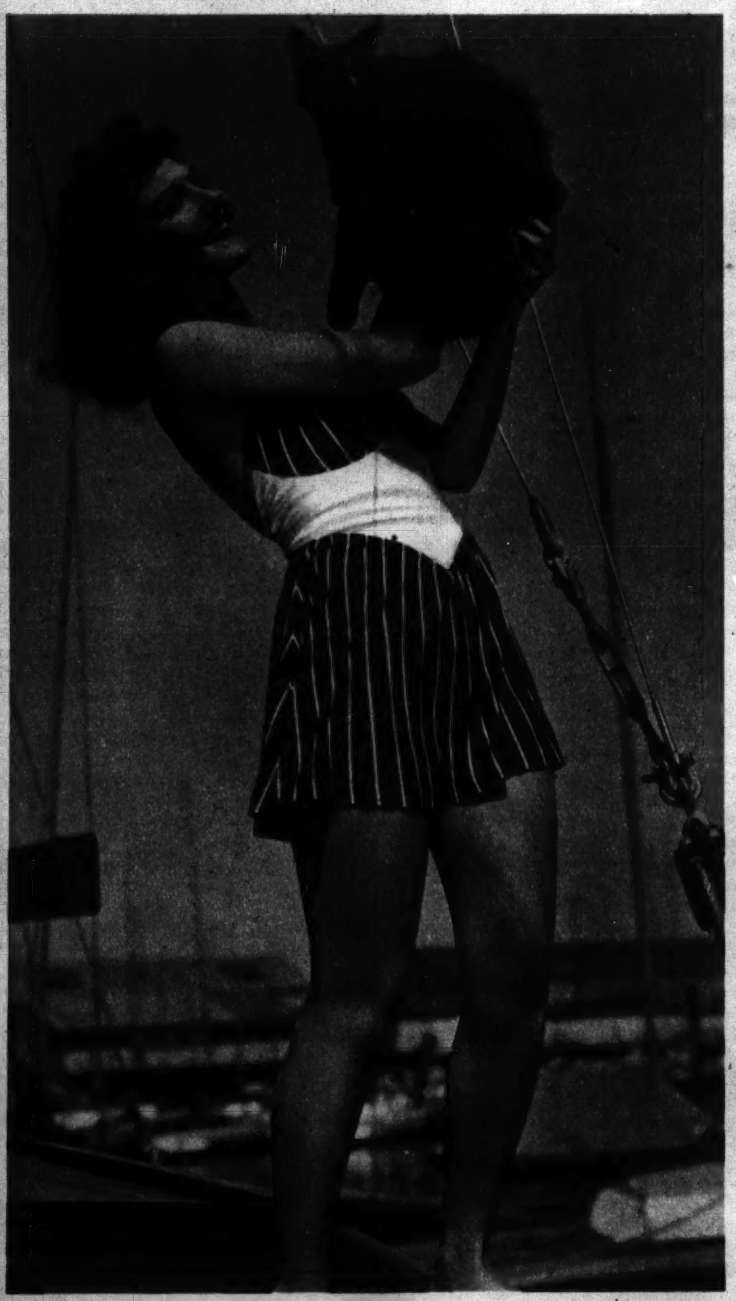
There are a couple of trends and one good sign. One trend is toward the purchase of published works—novels, fact books, magazine stuff. It used to be that from 75 to 90 per cent of filmdom's story material came from "originals"—from professional scenarists who'd tell a producer:

"I got an idea."

And the producer would say:

"Fine, let's have a treatment."

A treatment doesn't mean that anybody is sick—yet; it's a term for getting a yarn into semi-scenario form. Well, Halliday thinks that now the movies are getting 50 per cent originals and the rest from published works.



MARY MARTIN. . . . a Friday the 13th start for a yachting honeymoon.

Recent Paramount purchases have included "Victory," a novel; "Shepherd of the Hills," a novel; "I Wanted Wings," a fact book; "New York Town," "Lady Eve" and "Christmas in July," originals.

• • •

The good sign, to Halliday's mind, is that writers of originals can't sell stuff as easily as formerly. It's harder now to turn in a twenty page synopsis and sell it, as James Edward Grant did for "Boom Town." This means that the "original" creator has to work harder and longer, and many able men of this craft are now taking months to write complete shooting scripts. This, says Halliday, is as it should be, because it's easier to see what you are buying when it is a shooting script.

Halliday bought "Rhythm on the River" for Bing Crosby after Crosby had okayed it—as he can do under his contract. There was a dandy part in this one for Mary Martin. He bought Brock Pemberton's stage hit, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," for Mary Martin, and when she makes it she'll sing a song or two. He bought "New York Town" for Mary Martin. This one, which is next on the schedule, will be straight comedy with no music. There is no touch whatever of nepotism in these purchases, for it's the story department's job to buy stories for all the studio's producers, directors, and stars, and Halliday had nothing whatever to do with Paramount signing up Miss Martin.

The way the signing up came about has been told many times and is one of the usual Hollywood stories. Miss Martin, now 26 (a mother at 17!), is a Weatherford, Tex., girl who made her stage debut when she was 5, singing "When Apples Grow on Lilac Trees," at an Elks' carnival. She has a high school education.

She started a singing and dancing school in Weatherford and used to come to Hollywood once a year to pick up the latest dope and take a few lessons. In 1936, with the backing of her late father, a town official, she came to the film capital for good—she thought. Got a few jobs on the radio, sang at the Trocadero—but no tumble from the movies.

Broadway Producer Laurence Schwab heard her sing at the Troc, gave her a long term contract, took her to New York for a show. But his show plans didn't materialize and Mary started job hunting. Another producer was about to stage "Leave It to Me," and June Knight had quit the prospective star lineup to get married. Schwab got his protégés an audition and Mary landed the June Knight rôle. This included the song, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

I was there the opening night and can testify that the unknown Mary Martin was an overnight hit. It was certain that sooner or later the movies would get her, and Paramount placed her under contract and put her in "The Great Victor Herbert." Laurence Schwab has a piece of that contract.

• • •

Mary and Dick bought a comfortable, slightly English type house in a hilly part of Bel Air, expensive suburb. There's more land than most Hollywood backyards contain, and it is chiefly terraced gardens. Since both are working folk, decorating and gardening had to be handed over to somebody else. Dick's mother did the interior furnishings, Mary's mother supervised the planting. Mary's mother now lives in another house in Hollywood and has charge of her grandson, Larry.

On the lot Miss Martin is called Mrs. De Mille because, like the celebrated Cecil B., she can't seem to go anywhere without a large retinue trailing her. Her train may include her mother, Larry, a private secretary, a hairdresser, a dressmaker and any number of friends. The house is also a sort of Grand Central terminal, for the Hallidays are friendly and Mary, in particular, is a warm hearted soul who never forgot anybody.

One evening, for instance, the place was a mild madhouse, half a dozen Texas friends had dropped in. Then some men came to deliver a sofa. A lone man called, was given drinks.

The evening wore on. Finally every body left except the lone man. He talked uneasily for a while, then said:

"Well, I guess I'd better go. I came to talk to you about that plumbing you wanted fixed."

• • •

Up to the time of the honeymoon the Hallidays had had one fight. It came about because Mary hadn't been her usual hospitable self. Dick was ill and abed one evening, and Mary had to go out to appear at a Red Cross benefit at the Farmer's market. Just as she was putting on her coat a couple arrived—and the man was one of the high Paramount executives. Mary chirped that they should make themselves at home and she'd be back soon—and galloped off.

The benefit lasted two hours, and when she got home she found her husband in a white fury. The guests had gone. She tried to explain that she couldn't walk out on a Red Cross benefit, but he wouldn't talk. He wouldn't talk the next morning, either.

So Mary decided to send him a flag of truce. She had a florist make up a white flag of carnations, into which was worked, in colors, the musical notes of "I'm Sorry, Dear." That got him.

famous disenfranchisement of the majority of free Republicans in those districts. . . . Let all antithird termers thruout the state take immediate action in all their clubs and public meetings, denouncing the action of the Logan bulldozers, and declare that free Republicans of Illinois will never submit to be enslaved by any taskmaster, no matter what his rank or pretensions."

"The case," the paper added in another editorial, "needs no amplification. Merely to state it is to present it in its most repulsive aspect, to exhibit it in all its native deformity, as an act of unparalleled tyranny and usurpation. The outrage is monstrous!"

On May 25, again discussing the Springfield convention, The Tribune said:

"The nomination of any man for a third term would, under any circumstances, be an exceedingly dangerous experiment."

And, separately, it offered this barb:

"The boss' organ plays but one tune: Two bad terms 'deserve a third'."

Then, on May 27:

"The opposition to Grant is mainly because his election for a third term would needlessly violate a well established usage of the American people as old as the government itself, and sanctioned by Washington and all of his eminent and patriotic successors. It is one of the traditions of the fathers that is now for the first time sought to be disgraced and abrogated. . . . In addition to a very large part of the Republican party being opposed to a third term for any man, however great and good, ninety-nine hundredths of the Democratic party are of the same way of thinking, so that the third term scheme is utterly anti-Republican and anti-Democratic from every honest point of view."

On the same day, over two solid pages of readers' letters, The Tribune ran this headline:

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE
Raised in Anger Against
This Third Term
Business.

"Protests which the machine will do well to heed—hundreds of Republicans declare they will not vote for Grant if he is nominated. This is not idle talk, but firm and unalterable determination. Read, ponder, and reflect upon the letters which follow."

Then, in another editorial on the same day, The Tribune said:

"The most serious reason why Grant should not be nominated has never occurred to Clayton (Powell Clayton, a third term advocate from Arkansas). It is because his nomination is not antagonized by the politicians and office holders, but by a large class of men who want to vote the Republican ticket but will not vote for a third term under any party auspices. Tens of thousands of antithird term quiet citizens have practically served notice on the professional politicians that they will not vote for any third term candidate, and, as they are not seeking office, they will be pretty apt to keep their word."

And, on May 28:

"The antithird term principle is the law of the land—a law, which tho unwritten, is stronger than statutes and constitutions, because founded upon traditions, the memories and the Republican instincts and feelings of the whole people."

In an editorial "Do Two Bad Terms Deserve Another?" on May 29, The Tribune said:

"One of the chief issues of a campaign under Grant will be: If the promise of improvement in a second term miscarried,

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

THE MODERN WAR TANK is a direct development of the original tanks designed, constructed, and employed so successfully by the British in the world war. For those first tanks the British borrowed the basic traction principle of the self-laying track, or elongated wheel, from the invention of Benjamin Holt, junior partner of the Holt Manufacturing company of Peoria, Ill. An invention perfected in the beginning solely to meet agricultural needs thus was turned to military purposes.

The creation and development of the track-type tractor provides a story of American inventive genius that refused to be defeated by what appeared to be unsurmountable obstacles.

Back as early as 1889 there were two companies in this country that were conspicuous in the production in great numbers of steam traction engines for use in large scale farming. This was in a period that has come to be termed the "big steam era." One of the companies was the Holt Manufacturing company. The other was the Best company.

On the California delta lands these big steam traction engines were used extensively. Where there were new reclamations and the soil therefore was extremely soft it was found difficult to operate the steam engines, some of which weighed as much as 20 tons. These huge self propelled vehicles on occasions simply sank into the rich peat and could not be moved. Various devices then were tried out in an effort to support the engines on the soft soil. A large, round drum, about 5 feet long and 3½ feet in diameter, for example, was suspended in front of the steering wheel to assist the engine in staying on top of the ground. It was not a success.

Besides plowing these fertile lands, which were planted largely to wheat, the big steam engines were used for hauling heavy and cumbersome wheat combines. Wider and wider wheels were constructed to support the tractors. Dimensions along this line grew and grew until finally there were utilized great drum wheels, 8 feet in diameter and extending 15 feet on either side of the engine. These monsters, towing combines or wheat drills, were found to be no solution to the problem. The bigger and broader the wheels, the heavier the whole contraption. The giant wheels in many cases simply packed with earth or gouged great holes in the soft soil.

The second gasoline model, built in 1908.

In wrestling with the problem of conquering the soft California soil, Benjamin Holt eventually conceived the idea of employing the elongated or so called platform wheel, which in principle is the self-laying track found on track tractors and war tanks today. His first steam vehicle thus equipped wallowed around so successfully in the soft mud of the factory yard in 1904 that it was given profound consideration. In February, 1905, it performed satisfactorily in tests made on the extremely soft delta land of Roberts' island, in the San Joaquin river, near Stockton, Cal.

The new tractor moved along on its self-laying track in a manner suggesting a caterpillar. As a result it was given the name Caterpillar, a name that came to be registered thruout the world as a trademark.

Originally powered with steam, as has been brought out, the Caterpillar tractors were a vast improvement over the wheel type traction engines. In 1906 steam power was abandoned in favor of gasoline, the tractors being operated by 4 cycle gasoline engines of the Holt company's own design. The first tractor fleet order was filled only a few years after the transfer to the internal combustion engine, when a number of the vehicles were purchased to haul supplies to the Los Angeles aqueduct over the desert.

The track-type tractor did not pack the soil. Its superior traction, which meant increased drawbar pull, amazed even its producers. It rapidly increased in popularity, and its employment soon extended beyond the field of agriculture for which it originally was designed. It became a machine to lick the "toughest job," whether it was logging an otherwise inaccessible timber stand or hauling heavy freight across a trackless desert.

In July, 1914, Lieut. Col. Ernest D. Swinton of the engineering branch of the British army received a letter from a friend, a mining engineer, which described and pointed out the advantages of the Holt Caterpillar tractor as a means of hauling heavy loads over rough terrain. Swinton soon afterward passed on the information to the secretary of the Committee of Imperial Defense.

When the world war started Swinton was sent to France as the official British military correspondent. He became famous as "Eyewitness," the name he signed to his dispatches. When he saw at the front how difficult it was for infantry to advance against the fire of enemy machine guns he began thinking of developing an armor plated land ship that could without great danger to its crew destroy machine gun nests.

On Oct. 19, 1914, while he was in France, the thought flashed into his mind that the armored land ship, or destroyer, as he then called it, could operate on a self-laying track of a type used by the Caterpillar tractor. If this agricultural machine, he reasoned, actually could do all that report credited to it, why should it not be modified and adapted to suit the requirements of the British army? Back in England on the 20th, Colonel Swinton laid before the secretary of the Committee of Imperial Defense his plan to develop the track tractor and produce a mobile armored machine which should lead the assault and act as a machine gun destroyer.

The professional military mind is slow to accept new ideas. Therefore it was not until Feb. 2, 1916, that an armored tractor successfully passed requirement tests. This was the tank that was called "Big Willie," or "Mother." Afterwards it came to be termed the Mark I. tank, and it was the prototype of all British machines used during the war. The chief point in its design and in which it differed from other caterpillar machines was its rhomboid shape and all round track, which were the inventions of Lieut. Col. W. G. Wilson, working in conjunction with Sir W. Tritton.

It is not the purpose of this article to trace the development of the war tank—a story that has been told in the Graphic Section several times. Suffice to say that tanks eventually were built in such large numbers that they could be used effectively against the Germans. In the first attack with tanks, Sept. 15, 1916, 49 of these self propelled vehicles of war were used. Results were not satisfactory. Tanks to the number of 476 were employed by the British with great success at Cambrai, Nov. 20, 1917. The decisive victory of the allies at Soissons, July 18, 1918, which marked the turning point of the war, was due largely to the use of French tanks, employed in much the same manner as the British tanks were used at Cambrai.

The allied governments ordered tractors in great numbers from the Holt Manufacturing company, yet this company in all its history never built a tank. Neither has the Caterpillar Tractor company, formed thru a merger in 1925 of the Holt company and the Best company, ever swerved from its original objective of building track-type tractors as a contribution to peace time pursuits only. In 1928, when the Caterpillar company acquired the Russell Grader Manufacturing company, maker of road machinery, it still adhered to its original aim to stay out of the business of making war machines. That remains the company's policy today.

It was nine years ago that the Caterpillar Tractor company introduced the Diesel track-type tractor, after several years of research and experiments. Its first really severe test began in April, 1932, when a Diesel tractor, hitched to twelve 16 inch plows, was put to work on a large Oregon ranch. In 46 days it plowed 6,900 acres, traveling 3,500 miles in completing the huge task. The fuel cost in this test was 5.73 cents an acre.

The success of the Diesel tractor forced the Caterpillar Tractor company into the industrial engine business. Today it makes nine different models of industrial engines, five different sizes of Diesel tractors, complete lines of Diesel marine engines, and Diesel electric sets. Its road machinery, too, has been powered with Diesel engines.

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Persons learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the sixty-ninth of the series.

GEN. ULYSSES S. GRANT, hero of the Civil war and President of the United States for two terms, died July 23, 1885, at Mount McGregor, near Saratoga, N. Y. The whole nation was plunged into mourning, and on the following Aug. 8 memorial services for the former President were held thruout the land. At the services in Cambridge, Mass., Thomas Wentworth Higginson, eminent lecturer and essayist, was the principal speaker. Higginson, a former clergyman, had served as a colonel in the Union army in the Civil war. An excerpt from his address at Cambridge follows:

"It was one of the most picturesque moments of the history of Rome when, after the battle of Cannæ was lost and the Roman army almost annihilated—while Hannibal, the Carthaginian general, was measuring by bushels the gold rings of the slain Roman knights—the whole people of the city went out to greet with honor their defeated general, Terentius Varro, and to bear to him a vote of thanks from the senate for 'not having despaired of the republic.'

T. W. Higginson

"The vast obsequies celebrated all over the land today are not in honor of a defeated general, but of a victorious one; yet the ground of gratitude is the same as in the Roman pageant. Our Civil war, like that between Rome and Carthage, began in defeat and was transformed into victory because he whom we celebrate did not despair of the republic. From the time when his successes at Fort Donelson and Vicksburg first turned the tide of adversity until the day when he received Lee's surrender it was to him we looked.

"Nor was this all. There was in all this something more than mere generalship. Generalship is undoubtedly a special gift, almost amounting to genius—a man is born to it, as he is for poetry, or chess playing, or commerce; and as in those other vocations, so in this, his success in one direction does not prove him equally strong in all. There are many ways in which General Grant does not rank with the greatest of the sons of men. He was wanting in many of the gifts and even tastes which raise man to his highest; he did not care for poetry, philosophy, music, painting, sculpture, natural science. The one art for which he had genius is one that must be fleeting and perishable compared to these; for the human race must in its progress outgrow war. But a remarkable personal quality never can be ignored; if not shown in one way it will be shown in another; and this personal quality Grant had."

Higginson's speeches always were polished in style, and the eulogy to Grant was no exception, as the foregoing excerpt discloses. A very effective method of calling attention to the fact that Grant never despaired of victory is seen in the lines that contrast the great American military leader to the vanquished Roman general. Higginson proves that Grant was great by pointing out that Grant was only human and wanting in many gifts.

Mostly About Dogs

Biographies of Several Breeds

(Kling photo.)

Interested but unafraid is this appealing little boxer puppy sired by the H. O. Freund's famous show specimen, Champion Lustig Dom v. Tulgey Wood. The puppy is being shown by Judy Nelson.

IF DOGS could tell us about their ancestry and their early uses we would hear some intriguing stories of outdoor life on many continents, because many of the breeds which now are popular have had rather unusual careers, involving various kinds of wild game hunting.

The fox terrier, popular as a companion dog and a house pet, is a good example of a small breed that has its roots in an exciting outdoor sport which few dogs of the breed experience today. Surprising as it may seem to fox terrier owners, the smooth variety (which antedated the wire) was first classified among the sporting breeds. This was a tribute to his gameness, good nose, and fighting ability when he was called on to drive a fox from its hole or the drain in which the fox had taken refuge.

Other breeds with fascinating backgrounds are:

MANCHESTER TERRIER—Many decades ago England had a black-and-tan terrier, noted as an accomplished ratter. A fancier living in the Manchester district crossed a whippet with one of these black-and-tans. The result was extremely successful. Other fanciers began to breed them. Thus started the Manchester school of terriers—those wide-awake, intelligent companion dogs.

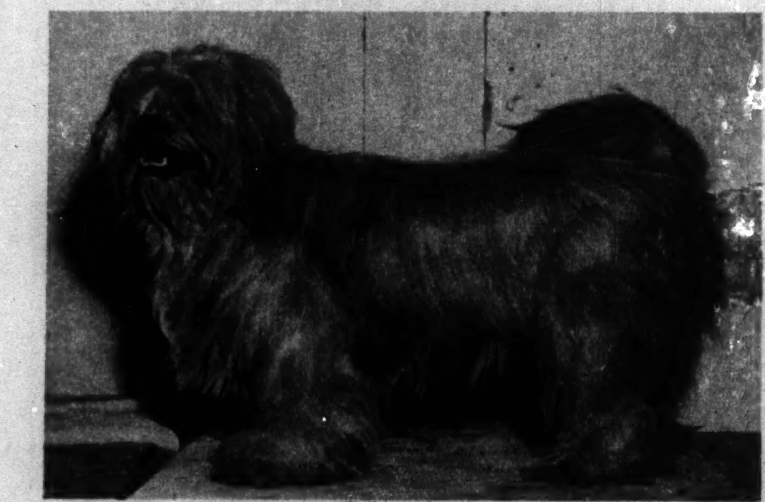
BOXER—This agile, smart guard and companion dog originated in Europe many years ago and was widely used as a hunting dog. It was known as the bear biter or bull biter in Germany, its home. Woodcuts made in 1539 clearly show this old breed being used in boar hunting. These dogs, the ancestral stock of the modern boxer, had heavy heads and wide, short muzzles and were powerfully built. Authorities who have studied carefully the origin of the boxer are confident that the mastiff blood in the breed is an important contribution to its character. But the fact remains that this breed is shrewd, cheerful, and courageous and has been developed from a very alert and intelligent hunting dog. Out of this interesting background has come our trim boxer, which combines the agility of a terrier with the strength of the bulldog (there are some records of bulldog cross-breeding) and the judgment and reliability of the mastiff.

BLOODHOUND—A breed that has every reason to boast of its family tree. It's one of the first families in dogdom. No one knows exactly how far back the blood lines of the bloodhound extend, but it is believed that it was known thruout the Mediterranean countries long before the birth of Christianity. Its characteristics are so distinctive that authorities have traced it thruout all dog history. One of the few breeds that still is being used today as it was employed centuries ago.

IRISH WOLFHOUND—Generally given the title of the "tallest of all dogs," the giant Irish wolfhound is today kept as a spectacular tho gentle companion dog. Centuries ago it was a famed hunter. Even during the days of early Rome this great hound was well known. Here again is an example of a powerful, magnificent breed that comes to us from the hunting fields—one that fitted well in the feudal life of the middle ages.

CHOW CHOW—If a dog fancier considers the aloof, sedate, and restrained behavior of the chow, now a companion dog, he may find it hard to believe that it was at one time a sporting breed. Yet there is much evidence to prove that this pet and guard dog was in the early days of China widely used for hunting. We have seen a chow do a creditable job of retrieving trout for his master. The chow, a very old breed, is the only one in the world with a blue-black tongue. He may have been one of the ancestors of some of the other northern breeds, such as the Norwegian elkhound and the Pomeranian, which are of similar type.

LHASA TERRIER—Kept as a pet today, the Lhasa terrier, not well known to American dog fanciers, is an example of a very old breed which in its native Tibet has been valued as a pet and small guard dog. There is evidence of the pure breeding of this dog for something like 800 years. Small but quick, with excellent hearing and very intelligent, the Lhasa is being used today just as it has been for about 800 years.



(Tribune photo.)

The Lhasa terrier which comes from Tibet is an old but not very well known breed in the United States. Hamilton Gobshi is the name of this specimen owned by Leona E. Stillwagon of Grand Rapids, Mich. It was judged best of breed at a recent dog show.

Makeup Is Important In Taking Portraits

By placing makeup of varying shades on the face it is easier to give the portrait roundness and to control the effect of highlights. Good makeup can eliminate the necessity for retouching the portrait.

THE next time you make a portrait try using some makeup on your subject. The improved results you will get should justify the additional trouble. They also will soon overcome your objections that you are interested in photography but don't want to become a beauty operator or cosmetic expert.

When you shoot a portrait you want to use all available means for getting good results. And at the same time you want to simplify your work as far as possible. Therefore, you should know something about photographic makeup for, far from complicating portraiture, it simplifies the job.

The main advantage of using makeup in portraiture is that it can eliminate the need of retouching. Few portraits can pass critical judgment without some retouching on the negative or the print—unless you do the "retouching" on your subject before taking the picture. And if you use a miniature camera, you will have found out by now that it is practically impossible to do any amount of retouching on the small negatives. Similarly, if you go in for natural color photography, you will not risk any retouching attempts on your color transparencies.

• • •

There is no better escape from these retouching troubles than using some amount of makeup. But it has to be photographic makeup and not the street makeup that women use. The reason for this is that you are making up your subject for recording on photographic film and consequently you have to use materials that give the desired photographic effects. Street makeup rarely does.

The purpose of photographic makeup is to subdue wrinkles, blemishes and unpleasant features of your subject, and to accentuate good features. You can achieve some of these things merely by cleverly shifting your lights, but other effects make the use of makeup necessary. And it is only natural that you should use makeup materials that photograph in the desired manner.

Naturally, you would be using panchromatic film for your portraits, as its greater color sensitivity distinguishes better between the different tones of skin and hair. And you want a rich scale of tones in your portraits to give them roundness and a natural appearance.

Makeup can be used to increase contrast between hair and face. Experts recommend a dark makeup for blondes and light makeup for brunettes. But this covers only the general tone of the makeup to be used. Beyond that every feature of the face can receive a certain amount of individual treatment.

There is one general rule you can follow. Anything you want to subdue should be darkened in relation to its surroundings. You can make a double chin recede or a high cheek bone practically disappear by toning them dark.

No movie star would dream of posing for a portrait without makeup. Not because she could not afford to but because she knows that makeup can stress the best features of a face and simplifies the matter of getting a good portrait.

If you use the proper kind of panchromatic makeup, you can drench the face with light and still keep blemishes subdued. Conversely you can accentuate good features with light makeup. You can place highlights on the forehead or nose with the powder puff, instead of resorting to troublesome retouching on the negative.

The generally accepted procedure for photographic makeup calls for first coating the face with grease paint, then with powder. After that rouge, lipstick, and eyebrow pencil are used to give the face the desired modeling. This does not mean, of course, that a face could or should be completely changed after it has been first transformed into a lifeless mask. The foundation is applied merely to give the face an even smoothness, and every step in making up the individual features of the face should follow the natural lines, except where changes seem desirable. These changes can consist of widening the mouth, extending the eyebrows, and similar minor repairs.

• • •

For portraiture in color, special color makeup should be used. Many materials designed for street makeup do not photograph in the colors you would expect. If they are used to cover blemishes, they often are not opaque enough to do the job so that the color film will pick up the blemishes you thought were covered. Therefore it is safest to purchase makeup materials specifically prepared for color photography. They are not expensive and a small supply will last a lifetime.

If your portraits have showed minor defects in the past that called for troublesome retouching, try makeup as a remedy and you will find your problems solved or simplified.

THE THIRD TERM

what reasonable hope is there for any better condition of things in a third term?"

On Sunday, May 30, The Tribune reported that the third term "boom" was weakening, but the vigor of its attack did not abate. The paper continued to devote four and five pages of solid type to its fight, and it warned:

"The Republican convention will assume a terrible responsibility by inviting, and provoking, and defying a deep rooted and widespread hostility to the election of any third term candidate." The day following it added:

"The third term itself is unpopular in the country. It is justly regarded as a dangerous innovation, a precedent of grave and hazardous import."

On June 1 came another warning: "The Republican convention will deliberately commit hara-kiri if it shall nominate the only candidate against whom there is widespread and pronounced antagonism in the Republican party. Gen. Grant, a third term candidate . . . is the only man who answers this description."

On June 2, the eve of the Republican national convention in Chicago, The Tribune again urged Grant to withdraw:

"Such a statement (of withdrawal) from Gen. Grant will dispose forever of the third term question in American politics and secure him an important influence for all time in the councils of the Republican party and of the country."

And, in another editorial, the paper predicted defeat for the third term. "The three bosses may as well throw up the sponge," it said. "The people want to draw the line at Washington, as they have a prejudice against placing any man above him. The strong man argument means a man stronger than the law. The American people don't want such a man."

The country was tense as the delegates to the Republican national convention gathered in Chicago. It was the most exciting campaign since Lincoln.

Delegates and alternates and followers from 37 states and the territories crowded into the city, jamming the hotels and rooming houses. There were throngs of Negro delegates from the southern states clamoring for Grant, whom they regarded as their savior. There were frontiersmen from the west, a few delighting the school boys with their picturesque clothing. The eastern Grant supporters, marshaled behind the handsome, gray haired Conkling, marched in with a show of force calculated to overawe the foes of the third term. Conkling, proud, majestic, scornful of the crowd, took over the convention as a dictator. He conferred frequently with the swarthy, mustached Logan, and the youthful looking Cameron. The men gave orders, and underlings ran errands, and the delegates pushed and jostled as thousands pressed thru police cordons into Exposition hall. Cameron counted up 300 certain third term votes and predicted victory. He presented the name of Senator George F. Hoar of Massachusetts as temporary chairman, and a cheer went up. It came from the antithird termers, who had forced Hoar on the Grant forces in a preconvention skirmish. The third term foes had drawn first blood.

The bosses tried to stampede the convention into adoption of the unit rule, and lost 316 to 406. The Illinois delegates forced the credentials committee to toss out the delegates selected by the rump convention, and Grant lost 18 votes. The third term foes were gaining ground, and The Tribune cheered them on. An editorial on June 3 said:

"The greatest objection to the nomination of Gen. Grant has been the overruling hostility of the American people to the violation of the national tradition that no man should hold the office of President longer than two terms, or longer than George Washington held it.

"This objection has been so deep rooted and widespread that if there was no other cause of opposition, it is of sufficient weight to compel the most sanguine Republican to doubt the ability of the party to elect Gen. Grant. The attempt to force the nomination and to brave and defy popular sentiment has but intensified the strength of the opposition."

And so it proved. Conkling, Cameron, Logan, and their helpers controled the convention machinery, but they could not force a third term upon the aroused delegates, despite the unquestioned popularity of Grant.

While The Tribune continued to recite at length its opposition to the third term, even proposing a constitutional limit to a single term of six years, the opposing forces battled. The machine held up well, but it could not gain ground. Finally the third term foes decided to consolidate their position behind a single candidate, Gen. James A. Garfield of Ohio, who had not been formally nominated, and who had received but two votes up to the 29th ballot. On the 34th ballot Wisconsin broke for Garfield, and it was the beginning of the end. The Blaine forces were broken up, Ohio switched to Garfield, Cameron's Pennsylvanians divided and on the 36th ballot Garfield won the nomination and the third term menace was ended.

The Tribune was jubilant. Altho few newspapers used cartoons at the time, The Tribune, the following morning, published a drawing of a rooster atop page one and announced it would "eat spring chicken" while its opponents ate crow. Said The Tribune headline in part:

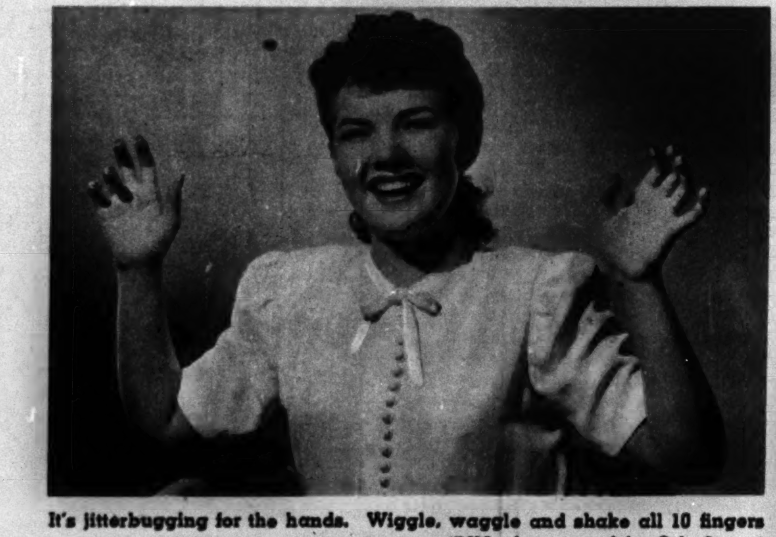
THE BATTLE WON
The Long Agony Over, and
The Republican Party
Saved from Destruction.

Then, editorially, The Tribune summed up its triumph:

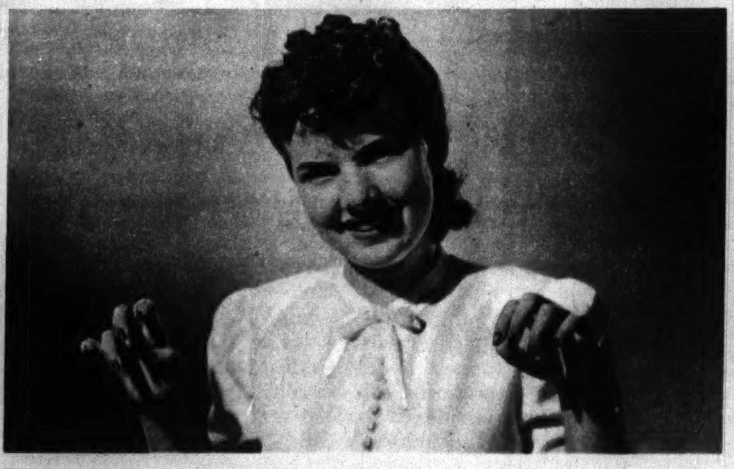
"But the great victory of the Republican party is rendered more complete by the annihilating blow by which third-termism was forever silenced in American politics. Never was there a more impudent, arrogant demand for the overthrow of one of the most time-honored and sacred traditions of the Republic than this attempt to use the Republican party to establish the third term as a possible institution of the American people.

"Never had the Republican party a severer test of its patriotism than in the struggle with the engineers that advised it to override the national history and confer upon a man of today honors which George Washington had refused because perilous to the national liberty. In the rejection of another term of Grant, and in the defeat of the bosses under whose patronage he was presented as a third term candidate, the Republican party gained a victory for itself and for the country which will pass into history as a national judgment of reprobation and condemnation which no other man will ever attempt to reverse."

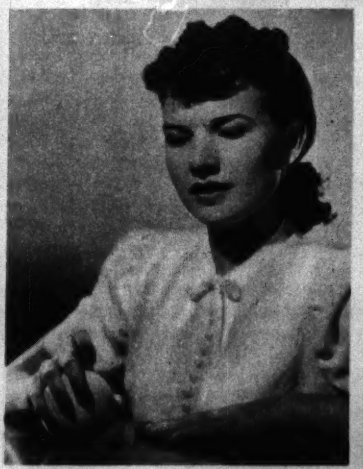
For Handsome Hands



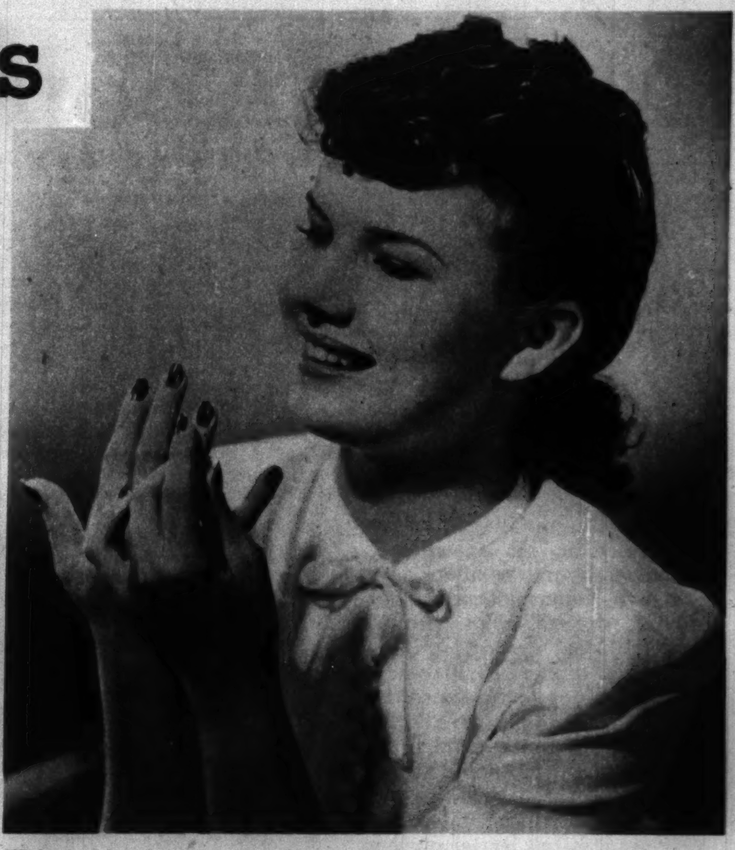
It's jitterbugging for the hands. Wiggle, waggle and shake all 10 fingers at once. (RKO photos posed by Gale Storm.)



This is old, but still good. Pretend you're playing a fast tune, snapping fingers up, down and sidewards.



Play ball for supple fingers. Try holding a ball, lifting fingers one by one without moving the others.



With the thumb and index finger of one hand, begin at the tip of each finger and press smoothly to the palm.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

SPECIAL EXERCISES prevent hand stiffness or, if that has already set in, lure back hand suppleness. They're simple and efficient and they should be an integral part of the youth-preserving régime of every woman near or over 30.

Hands that have a tendency to swell, or to develop a subsurface redness that bleaching won't effect, will profit by the jitterbugging routine. Hold the hands level with the eyebrows and then do as the jitterbugs do. Wiggle, waggle, and shake 10 fingers all at once! This is a ducky little cold weather exercise for the women whose hands are always icy and red; it steps up circulation.

Another easy trick that is effective for limbering up stiff joints is as old as jitterbugging is new. It's the familiar piano finger exercise. Just bend the arms at the elbows, lift the wrists, poise the fingers as a concert pianist would—and then pretend you're playing a whale of a fast tune, snapping the fingers up, down and sidewards!

Then, to strengthen fingers, you can play ball in an unorthodox fashion. Pick a springy ball that will fit easily into your hand, a tennis ball if your fist is small or a softball if it's larger. Give the ball rythmic, hard squeezes with all 10 fingers, releasing and contracting the muscles in regular tempo. Then just hold the fingers around the ball and lift one after the other. What you're striving to do is to move each finger without disturbing the one beside it. It's not easy but you can learn.

Massage is always important. Slather a rich cream on the hands, then, pretending you've just slipped on a pair of gloves, smooth each glove finger with the index finger of each hand, beginning at the tip and pressing smoothly to the palm.

Your winter hand worries, a bugaboo most years, won't exist this season if you start your hand beautifying now.

The Tribune Makes Fashion History

Parisians such as Schiaparelli, Molyneux, Lelong, Chanel, Worth, Patou, Paul Poiret, or Mainbocher, a Chicagoan who had to set up a Paris atelier to get recognition.

Yet many Americans do design, and design well, in anonymity. It is because of their efforts that America has the best dressed shopgirls in the world.

To achieve independence in fashions America requires independence in fabrics. This she has achieved in the two decades following the World war, until America has a fabric mass volume unequaled in the world. Slowly the smug phrase, "This is imported," with its aura of omnipotence, is disappearing, and American fabrics, like those of the French, are beginning to dictate silhouettes by their pliability and texture. With America's new synthetics, lastex, vinylite, and rayon, she has brought about a revolution in materials which require a new approach to design.

Against this background the American Fashions Contest was launched on July 21. Nothing of the sort ever had been attempted. Any designer, professional or amateur, was eligible for entrance, but all sketches, it was announced, would be judged in the shroud of anonymity. The sole requirement was that the designer live in America. The great hope was that he would display originality.

Aug. 15 was set as the deadline for entries, submitted in sketch form, but interest was so great and so nation-wide that it was extended until Aug. 22. At the end of that time 12,491 entries had been received from 5,246 contestants.

The entries came from as far distant points as Canada and Mexico, but the bulk, in states, came in this order: Illinois, 630; New York, 439; Wisconsin, 131; Michigan, 70; Iowa, 58; California, 53; Ohio, 47.

Not only was interest eager among designers, but three days after announcement of The Tribune's contest New York awoke to the fact that some place—Chicago, Hollywood, or New York—might end as fashion center of the world, and New York papers began campaigning for this honor for New York.

"It is a truly national contest," a New York merchant commented. "It has made all the big American cities rivals for Paris' old monopoly—and that's all to the good."

Unsolicited acclaim came, in fact, from all sources. Bernice Chambers, assistant professor in the school of retailing of New York university, had this to say:

"We have a great reservoir of genius in our country which, if tapped, will bring forth dress stylists as talented as Vionnet, Schiaparelli, Chanel, and Molyneux of the once glorious Paris.

"Just as a violinist needs an orchestra and a violin for a concerto, as an actor needs a play and an audience, so does a designer need audiences, sponsors, encouragement, and guidance."

When the 12,491 entries were assembled, experts were amazed at the multiplicity, originality, and beauty of the designs. One designer sent in 30 sketches. The range of design was all-inclusive, from 60 ski suits to a wedding gown. More dinner dresses were submitted than anything else.

One point all the dresses had in common was fit. All glorified the feminine figure, demonstrating that the American designer, whatever his creed, does not believe in gunny sacks. All, too, were youthful, even those designed for middle-aged women, and all were typically American, designed specially for the American (rather than the French) figure and for American activities.

• • •

Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, who heads the committee of arrangements for the fashion shows, and her committee had difficulty in winnowing the 12,491 designs down to 43 superlative sketches. This finally was done, but it required three weeks.

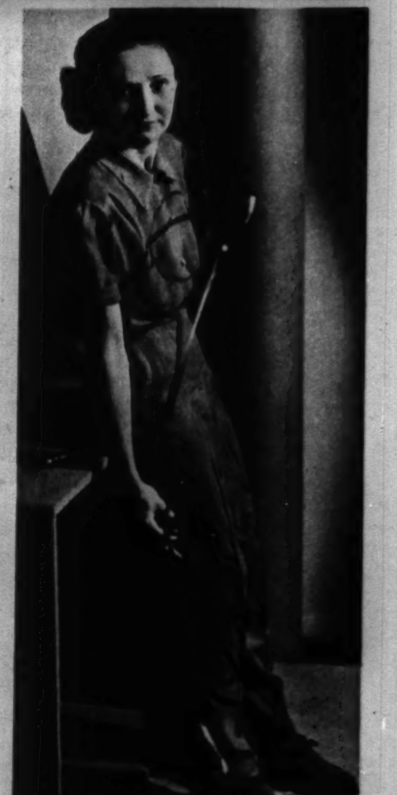
Those selected have been made up into garments to be modeled at Wednesday's fashion shows before audiences drawn from New York and Philadelphia as well as from the central west. Out of these 43, 25 will be selected at the fashion shows to receive the $7,500 in cash awards which The Tribune has offered.

The designer of the best garment will receive $3,000. A second prize of $2,000, three prizes of $500 each, and 20 of $50 each will be awarded to the other winners. Three hundred others, however, will receive honorable mention. Their sketches will be exhibited and they will receive an honorary award.

After the shows all sketches and garments remain the property of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., to which will go the profits from their exhibition or final sale. Profits from the fashion shows—an admission of $1 each is being charged for seats at the afternoon shows and of $2 at the evening show—will go to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

Not until the shows proper will any details of the winning designs be given out. They then will be displayed in a lavish and brilliant setting, with Travis Banton, noted Hollywood style creator, as commentator. Not only will he describe each gown for the studio audience, but at the evening show he will describe it over the coast-to-coast Mutual network for a vast invisible radio audience.

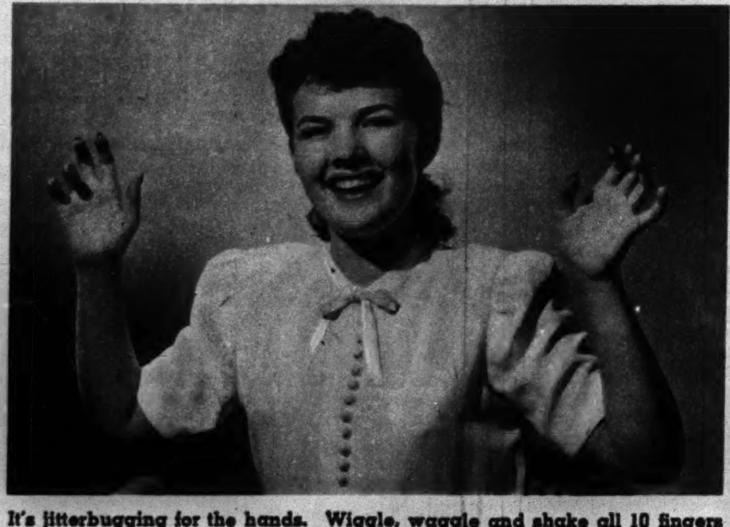
CAREER GIRL



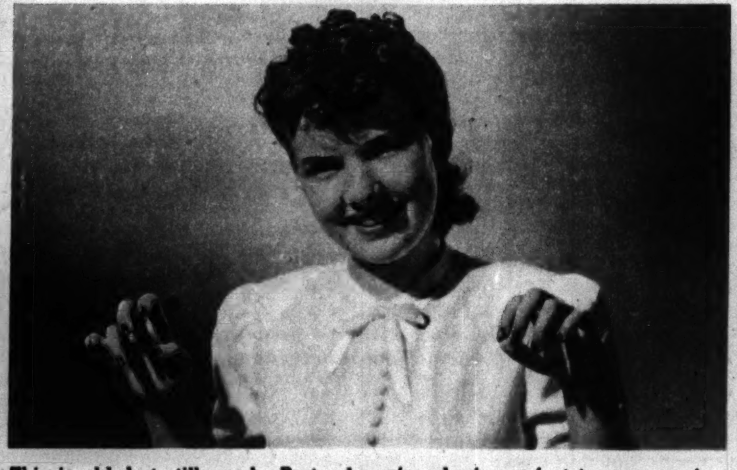
LUCILLE KNOCHE

LUCILLE KNOCHE'S mother was a Shakespearean "reader," her father an inventor-designer who manufactured the first tissue paper made in this country. The daughter has, after a fashion, utilized both inherited talents. Originally she was a ballet dancer, then switched to designing sets and costumes and is now one of the country's best industrial designers. After schooling at the Art institute in Chicago she worked for several years with Sculptor Alfonso Iannelli, continued her art studies at Dessau and Weimar, Germany, and, she says, has been going to school ever since. At present she is studying photography with Moholy-Nagi. She has taught design at the Art institute and in her own successful business has designed furniture, lighting fixtures, interiors, packages, wall papers, and window displays. One of her recently completed commissions was to design the Christmas wrappings a large department store will use this year. She is a member of the Typographical Arts society, a past director of the Society for Color Research, a member of Art Center, and a councillor of the Fashion Group of Chicago. With her broker husband, John Knoche, she lives on a farm near Woodstock in a 70-year-old house she remodeled to her own designs. Tho she keeps an office in Chicago, she does most of her work in her studio at the farm. For a fishing and swimming retreat the Knoches have a 12-acre island of rocks and pine trees at Sabaskong bay, Lake of the Woods, Canada. Here they live in a log cabin filled with pine furniture, both designed by Mrs. Knoche.

For Handsome Hands



It's jitterbugging for the hands. Wiggle, waggle and shake all 10 fingers at once. (RKO photos posed by Gale Storm.)



This is old, but still good. Pretend you're playing a fast tune, snapping fingers up, down and sidewards.

With the thumb and index finger of one hand, begin at the tip of each finger and press smoothly to the palm.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

SPECIAL EXERCISES prevent hand stiffness or, if that has already set in, lure back hand suppleness. They're simple and efficient and they should be an integral part of the youth-preserving régime of every woman near or over 30.

Hands that have a tendency to swell, or to develop a subsurface redness that bleaching won't effect, will profit by the jitterbugging routine. Hold the hands level with the eyebrows and then do as the jitterbugs do. Wiggle, waggle, and shake 10 fingers all at once! This is a ducky little cold weather exercise for the women whose hands are always icy and red; it steps up circulation.

Another easy trick that is effective for limbering up stiff joints is as old as jitterbugging is new. It's the familiar piano finger exercise. Just bend the arms at the elbows, lift the wrists, poise the fingers as a concert pianist would—and then pretend you're playing a whale of a fast tune, snapping the fingers up, down and sidewards!

Then, to strengthen fingers, you can play ball in an unorthodox fashion. Pick a springy ball that will fit easily into your hand, a tennis ball if your fist is small or a softball if it's larger. Give the ball rythmic, hard squeezes with all 10 fingers, releasing and contracting the muscles in regular tempo. Then just hold the fingers around the ball and lift one after the other. What you're striving to do is to move each finger without disturbing the one beside it. It's not easy but you can learn.

Massage is always important. Slather a rich cream on the hands, then, pretending you've just slipped on a pair of gloves, smooth each glove finger with the index finger of each hand, beginning at the tip and pressing smoothly to the palm.

Your winter hand worries, a bugaboo most years, won't exist this season if you start your hand beautifying now.
